Mrs. Lindbergh Sees Hauptmann in Court Today; 10 Jurors Sit

Quick Acceptance of 2 Others Will Start State Testimony.

Talesmen Chosen Include 4 Women

Aviator, Wife and Betty Gow on Hand Ready to Testify.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 2 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's dramatic trial for the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby turned swiftly tonight toward opening testimony of the baby's famous father and mother and the nurse, Betty Gow.

With a jury all but complete, the celebrated trial moved through opening preliminaries in the jammed, eighteenth century courtroom of Hunterdon County at unexpected speed today. When the sessions were adjourned until morning, ten persons, four of them women, had been chosen to try the sullen German carpenter for his life.

Tomorrow, for the first time, Anne Lindbergh will see the man accused of killing her first-born son. Unless something unforeseen occurs, she will testify, with her husband, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh; Betty Gow, the Scottish nurse, and Mrs. Ollie Wheatley, widow of Lindbergh's butler.

State to Start Testimony.

Since but two jurors remain to be selected, the State expects to start testimony during the second day of the case.

First, it will establish the locale of the crime by means of maps of the Sourland countryside and drawings showing the plan of the Lindbergh home.

Thus it will get at once to the kidnaping itself.

It was Betty Gow who put the baby to bed on the night of March 1, 1932.

Mrs. Lindbergh is to testify that the nurse asked her, when she discovered the crib to be empty, if Col. Lindbergh had taken his son downstairs.

Lindbergh himself will testify that he ran upstairs and with the others discovered the baby had been stolen and that the kidnaper had left a ransom note on the window sill.

It was Mrs. Wheatley who, with the nurse found the tiny thumbguard of Charles Augustus, jr., near the house.

Jurors Locked Up.

With today's session of the trial over at 4:37 p. m., the jurors were locked up in the hotel across the street from the courthouse and warned not to read newspapers or listen to the radio. They are not subject to further challenge.

Hauptmann, back in his cell, conferred with his attorneys.

Only a few paces from where he sat, unmanacled, in the courtroom today was Col. Lindbergh, keenly intent on the proceedings.

Their eyes never met. Hauptmann's sullen, pale and stoical, stared blankly at the floor or straight ahead at the yellowed oaken bench where Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard presided.

To the left of the defendant, in a temporary seat facing him, sat Hauptmann's wife, Anna.

Like the stolid carpenter, she was pale and tense. She missed nothing of what was said, listening avidly as prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., of Hunterdon County questioned prospective jurors as C. Lloyd Fisher, of Flemington, associate defense counsel, put further questions, and as Justice Trenchard occasionally made some comment or himself questioned a venireman.

Lindbergh Quiet.

For all his proximity to the prosecution table Col. Lindbergh kept pretty much to himself. He sat with legs crossed. Sometimes he folded his arms. Again he cupped his chin in his hand and watched, studying the talesmen.

The courtroom was jammed, mostly by members of the panel of 150, by newspapermen, visiting lawyers, messengers and special writers.

Most of the prospective jurors said they had read of the case in the newspapers or had heard radio commentators. With an exception or two, all said they felt they could sit in judgement with no prejudice.

The State used seven of its 12 peremptory challenges, the defense 15 of its 20. In a number of cases both sides agreed to excuse the talesmen, once for a woman who said her two children needed her at home, again in the cases of women who had elderly and sick dependents.

Shortly before adjournment was taken for the day the special panel of 48 was exhausted. Sheriff John H. Curtiss began drawing names from the remaining 102 on the jury list.

The full panel of 150 had been ordered by Justice Trenchard to ap-

10 Members of Hauptmann Jury Selected on First Day of Trial

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Here are the first ten members of the Hauptmann jury—some of them poor, some unemployed, some in moderate circumstances, but none wealthy; some of them fat, one thin, four of them women:

CHARLES, WALTON, Sr., 55, a machinist who put on his best gray suit, washed the grease from his hands, brushed back his graying hair and came over to Flemington. He is a slight, retiring little man who has two grown sons and a daughter, 10.

MRS. ROSIE PILL, 58, of Califon, who fills the witness chair, wears horn-rimmed spectacles and is so nervous that she can not answer "yes" or "no," but shakes her head. She has two grown sons.

MRS. VERNA SNYDER, of Centerville, an ample matronly woman. She is a widow and couldn't afford to buy a new dress for this occasion, so she put on her coat over a gingham house dress and came to court with wisps of hair hanging from under her hat, hoping this business would be over quickly so she could get back to her ironing. She has an adopted son, 6.

CHARLES F. SNYDER, who is not related to Mrs. Snyder. He lives in Clinton Township on a farm. He has two children, 16 and 8. Both defense and prosecution counsel liked his square jaw and the direct way he answers questions. He was accepted quickly.

MRS. ETHEL STOCKTON, 32, housewife, brings a splash of color to the jury box. She wears a red blouse, is young and slender and is the first talesman called who can muster a smile. She has one son, 7.

ELMER SMITH, 42, is an insurance salesman from Lambertville and a notary public. He answers in crisp, blunt sentences and all lawyers nod their heads approvingly.

ROBERT CRAVATT, 28, works in a construction camp out near High Bridge—when there is any work. There isn't any now. His suit shows wear, but is pressed.

PHILIP HOCKENBURY, 60, is a laborer, too. He lives in Clinton township and finds enough work there to support his family. Jury duty will bring him some much-needed money.

GEORGE VOORHEES has a farm near the place where Hockenbury lives. He has three children, 17, 19 and 21.

MRS. MAY F. BRELSFORD, 50, a housewife, lives in Flemington. She comes to court in a purple and white suit, answers questions in a voice loud enough to be heard, and becomes juror No. 10.

Crowd at Trial Taxes Capacity Of Flemington

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 2 (AP).—A little courtroom with benches like pews in a country church throbbed today with more activity than it has seen in its century of existence.

Townspeople besieged the doors; messenger boys clogged the aisles; telegraph instruments clicked inside offices, and almost with arm's reach of each other, a tall blonde flier and an immobile German carpenter sat.

The flier was Col. Charles Augustus Linbergh. The carpenter was Bruno Richard Hauptmann, on trial for kidnaping and killing the flier's first born son, Charles Augustus, jr.

The Dayton of the North.

Tranquil Flemington became the Dayton, Tenn., of the North as Bruno Hauptmann's trial opened.

Scenes that recalled that little town's famous evolution trial were enacted as an army of visitors struggled with the problems of food and shelter—things like one piece of mince pie in the house, and 40 hungry guests.

"We're about cooked out," said a weary waitress in the Union Hotel after the luncheon deluge. As she spoke, a man walked over to a table where the guests had finished and said, "Pardon me. May I have this piece of bread?"

He borrowed coffee from someone else.

One group established quarters in an unoccupied house three miles from town. A temporary bed broke, depositing sleeper and slats on the floor. Others slept on chairs, in their clothes.

A Maze of Wires.

A maze of newly strung telegraph wires stretched from the attic of the little white courthouse, looking like a lace veil blown awry. On the courthouse veranda a crowd that included women from Mississippi and Minnesota waited all afternoon hoping to get inside.

While small boys hawked postcards of Flemington on the steps, a procession of veniremen—housewives, farmers, laborers—laid their hands on a Gideon Bible in the courthouse and then answered questions.

Rows of camp chairs placed behind the rail gave the scene the

Italy, France Unite to Halt Teutonic Pact

Plan to Nip Reich Union With Austria Reached by Duce, Laval.

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press)

Rome, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—A far-reaching accord has been reached between Italy and France guaranteeing the independence of Austria against Germany's dreams of a union of these Teutonic nations.

Premier Benito Mussolini agrees to make a gesture of friendship and peace to Yugoslavia, and the pact is to support Austrian independence with the adherence of Yugoslavia and Czechoslavakia.

Broad terms of the pact became known here today as French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval announced in Paris that he plans to start for Rome from Paris tomorrow to seal the agreement with Il Duce, after weeks of secret negotiations.

Wants Papers Signed First.

Mussolini was understood to have insisted on making the gesture to Yugoslavia only after the agreement is signed and delivered. Il Duce is reported to have telegraphed Laval in this connection: "Italy's road to Paris is not via Belgrade."

He also is reported to have told intimates: "Italy will make a gesture of peace to Yugoslavia, and is only too glad to do so, but only after the agreement is signed."

Tension on political problems in Central Europe has kept Italy and Yugoslavia apart for years. At the height of the Nazi uprising in Austria last summer, Italy massed troops on both Austrian and Yugoslavian borders.

Fear Italian Invasion.

Austria meanwhile was reported opposed to any agreement to support her independence which has the guarantee of Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia. The Austrian minister in Paris, Lothar Egger-Moellwald, reportedly told Laval Vienna wants France, in case such a pact is concluded, to accept a special military responsibility and presumably guard against the eventuality of an Italian invasion.

In Paris, the cabinet's decision that Laval proceed to Rome tomorrow was hailed as his greatest political accomplishment since returning to active participation in the French government last year. The

Rammed Ship Sinks Quickly In East River; 182 on Board

Decks Under Water Within Half Hour

Force of Crash Nearly Sliced Craft in Two, Passenger Says.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—The steamer Lexington of the Colonial Navigation Co. was rammed and sunk in the East River near Brooklyn Bridge tonight by the tramp freighter James Christenson. Two hours later upward of 150 persons either had been taken off the Lexington or picked up from the icy waters by rescue craft.

Capt. William O. Pendleton, of the Lexington, said all the passengers and crew were saved.

The Lexington was split by the collision. The foreport of the ship lay in 40 feet of water, almost directly beneath the Manhattan Bridge. The stern of the ship rolled against a slip on the Manhattan shore of the river and was tied to moorings.

The passenger list went down with the ship. From the best available information, the Lexington carried about 130 passengers and 52 in the crew.

60 Students on Ship.

Among the passengers were 60 Brown University students returning to their classes at Providence after the Christmas holiday.

The Lexington—a ship of some 1,240 tons, 280 feet long—cleared late today for Providence. It was between the Brooklyn and Manhattan Bridges when the tramp steamer plowed into her starboard side.

The speed with which rescue operations were carried out accountde for the safety of the passengers and crew.

Officers on the tramp freighter kept the prow of their ship steadily nosed into the hull of the Lexington. Two tugboats, the Patience and the John Rugge, were alongside in a few minutes. Most of the passengers were taken off by these tugs. Other tugs took off the crew and a few of the passengers who were in the icy waters.

Rescued Rushed to Offices.

For several hours it was not known whether there was any loss of life. All of those picked up and taken off the Lexington were rushed to the offices of the company at pier 11 in the Hudson River.

Three hours afterward Capt. Pendleton, in announcing all were saved, issued the following statement:

"We left our pier in Manhattan about 6 p. m., bound for Providence, R. I. The weather was clear and as we proceeded up the East River the tide was a little flood. We came up the East River about in the middle of the river.

"We were proceeding slowly when the steamer James Christenson, of the Arrow Line, rammed us just forward of the midship on the starboard side.

"She cut into us pretty far and I could see we would sink. We sank very quickly, but all were saved.

Praise for Crew.

"I have great praise for my officers and crew and the vessels in the vicinity. They worked with vigilance and valor and if it were not for their bravery there would have been loss of life.

"The passengers also were very calm in the emergency."

After the collision the tramp steamer proceeded to Red Hook flats on the Brooklyn shore.

Within half an hour or so the Lexington had settled in 40 feet of water and all that could be seen of her was the tips of the masts.

All the survivors were rushed to the offices of the Colonial Navigation Line at Pier 11 in the Hudson River. Three physicians of the Bellevue Hospital established emergency headquarters. At least a dozen of the injured survivors were taken to the Bellevue and Broad Street Hospitals.

Rumsey Will Fixes A $500,000 Trust

Fund Set Up for Dr. W. A. Maloney, New York.

New York, JJan. 2 (AP).—The will of Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, chairman of the Consumers Advisory Board of the NRA, directs the creation of a $500,000 trust fund for Dr. William J. M. A. Maloney, it was disclosed today with filing of the testament for probate.

Dr. Maloney is a New York specialist in nervous diseases and figured in the United States Senate's investigation of big Navy propaganda in 1930.

The codicil setting up the trust was dated December 7, 1934. Mrs. Rumsey, who died in Washington, December 18, was the eldest daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, railroad builder.

Naval 'Spy Scare' Quickly Ends; Matsuda to Report to Embassy

(Associated Press.)

The Japanese "spy scare" subsided yesterday in Washington just as quickly as it flared up Tuesday in Florida.

Lieut. Comdr. Yoshio Matsuda, of the imperial Japanese navy, is due in Washington today to explain to the Japanese Embassy the circumstances which led him to make motion pictures of several Southern harbors and one American cruiser.

Both American and Japanese officials indicated last night, however, that the case was "closed" and that no official action was planned by either government.

Matsuda was detained Tuesday by St. Petersburg (Fla.) police for questioning after he had taken pictures of the cruiser Trenton from a slowly moving taxicab.

He was released after police had talked to the State Department and immigration officials here.

But Secretary Swanson made it plain that the Navy Department objected to foreign naval officers engaging in such photography.

"We object to them taking pictures of our ships," Swanson told

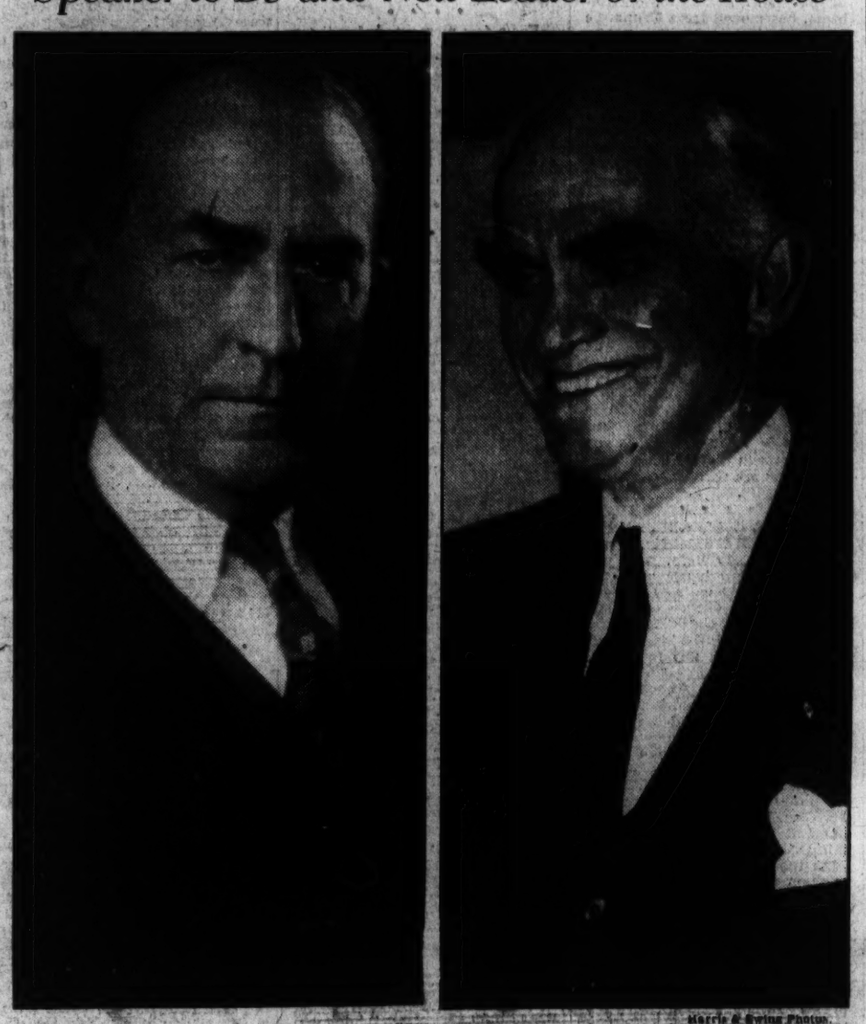
Caucus Names Byrns Speaker And Bankhead Floor Leader

Speaker-to-Be and New Leader of the House



Harris & Ewing Photos.

'Discharge Rule,' Bane of Administration, Is Revised.

Democrats Select Ways, Means Group

Fail to Choose 'Whip,' but Boland Heads Candidate List.

By Robert C. Albright.

Enthroning a new Southern dynasty of House rulers, Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, Speaker, and William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, floor leader, Congressional Democrats yesterday laid the groundwork for President Roosevelt's second New Deal Congress.

With the coincident crack of two gavels, the Seventy-fourth Congress will convene at noon today, Byrns presiding from the House rostrum, and Vice President John Nance Garner commanding the Senate.

The opening will be perfunctory, lacking the color that will attend tomorrow's appearance of the President to read his message.

Byrns Chosen Speaker.

The lanky, heavy-browed, 68-year-old Tennessean was designated Speaker of the House by acclamation at a caucus of Democrats late yesterday. A dispirited fight developed over the floor leadership, but it collapsed on the second ballot, when Bankhead smothered opposition with 156 votes out of 301 cast.

The firm-jawed Alabama chairman of the House Rules Committee was not present to hear the prolonged burst of applause that greeted the final ballot. Stricken with a severe cold several days ago, he entered Naval Hospital yesterday to nurse his strength for the ordeal ahead.

For five continuous hours the Democrats caucused, and when they adjourned, the celebrated "discharge rule" which plagued the Administration all through the last session, routing a score of pro-Roosevelt petitions over the Speaker's desk, had been thrown into the discard.

Byrns Drafts New Rule.

In its stead, Representative Byrns drafted a new rule requiring signatures of a majority of 218 members to force a vote on unscheduled legislation. The old discharge rule needed only 145. The Byrns motion, binding on Democrats, was adopted by a 225-to-60 vote, after Representative John Rankin, of Mississippi, unsuccessful candidate for the leadership, made a futile fight to block it. A substitute motion by Rankin was defeated, 210 to 56. The caucus next directed its ways and means committee to limit Republican representation on committee to a ratio of 1 to 4.

Designation of seven Democratic candidates for the important House Ways and Means Committee completed the caucus business. When weary Democrats went home for rest and sustenance, only one vital House Democratic post remained unfilled—that of House whip. If undersurface negotiations now in progress are successful, this job will not be long in doubt. Report has it that Floor Leader Bankhead will appoint Representative Patrick J. Boland, of Pennsylvania, personal friend of Senator-elect Joseph "Boss" Guffey, of Pennsylvania, and Postmaster General Farley.

Would Reward Pennsylvania.

The Boland appointment would partially reward Pennsylvania for the important role it played early in the Speaker-leadership fight, in throwing 23 votes to Byrns and Bankhead. A seat on the powerful Ways and Means Committee will complete the "purse." The latter went to Representative J. Twing Brooks, of Sewickley, Pa.

Others honored with Democratic places on the Ways and Means Committee at yesterday's caucus were Representatives Arthur P. Lamneck, of Ohio; Frank H. Buck, of California; Wesley E. Disney, of Oklahoma; Chester Thompson, of Illinois; Richard M. Duncan, of Missouri, and John D. Dingell, of Michigan. Democrats will demand the forfeit of three Republican seats on the committee.

Message Is Completed.

While the House was building a metal-sheathed roadway for Administration measures, and Senate Democrats were rounding out routine organization, President Roosevelt yesterday added perfecting lines to the message he will

Long Aroused By Roosevelt, Plans Attack

'Kingfish' Ready to Carry Fight to Senate Floor During Next Week.

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 2 (AP).—Burning with resentment, Senator Huey P. Long prepared today to strike back at President Roosevelt on the floor of the United States Senate next week in a controversy with the White House over Louisiana dictatorial laws.

While Senator Long ranted, Gov. O. K. Allen, a Long lieutenant, took calmly a letter from the President suggesting amendments to some of the drastic Long dictatorial laws.

The President indicated that unless this was done Federal aid funds might be shut off from Louisiana. Long regarded this as an affront and came out with a public statement that he would answer Mr. Roosevelt on that and other things from the floor of the Senate.

"It was a very nice letter," said the Governor. "It just said that the President understood our next regular session was in 1936, and that if we held a special session in 1935 that there were suggestions that might be made about State and Federal laws."

Gov. Allen said the new Louisiana two-year debt moratorium, which has been questioned by Washington, did not apply to Federal debts, but that he would get an official ruling from Attorney General Gaston L. Porterie before replying to Mr. Roosevelt.

Section 1 of the act says:

"The provisions of this act shall not apply to any debt, tax or impost owing to the United States or any agency, department, bureau, board or commission thereof. * * *"

But Washington has expressed concern over what would be the status of future loans advanced to the State of Louisiana and has indicated that several million dollars in proposed loans would be held back pending clarification.

Troyanovsky and Family Reunited in Honolulu

Honolulu, Jan. 2 (AP).—A happy meeting in Mid Pacific today reunited Alexander Troyanovsky, Soviet Ambassador to the United States, with his wife and son who came here from Washington to meet him on his arrival from Moscow. The ambassador had not seen them since he left Washington in September.

Two hours before the President Cleveland sidled into its berth at Honolulu Mrs. Troyanovsky and her son, Oleg, 15, disembarked from the President Hoover. Covered with welcoming Leis, the party began a ten-day vacation in Hawaii.

Black Drafts 30-Hr. Work Bill; 2,300 in House Hopper Today

Alabama Senator Soon to Introduce Measure to Provide More Jobs; Record Legislation Seen for Opening of Congress.

A five-day, six-hour work limit per week would be imposed on every mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory and manufacturing establishment in the Nation in a bill made public last night by Senator Hugo Black, Alabama Democrat.

The 30-hour week, long sought by organized labor, jumped into the spotlight as the Congressional session was about to begin when Senator Black announced he would introduce the measure at the earliest opportunity.

Another bill, aimed at lobbying, was completed yesterday by the House Military Committee as a result of its investigation into War Department expenditures, the Associated Press says. Three more, to follow within a week, are designed to remove secrecy surrounding specifications and open up competition for all War Department orders, make all contracts by the War Department subject to review by the Comptroller General and punish any officer who receives money from any outside source for any service given in connection with War Department activities.

More than 2,300 bills, most of which are concerned with the depression, will be introduced after Congress convenes today. House officials estimated that last session's near-record opening day mark of 2,020 bills would be passed before today's session is ended.

Relief Bills Due in Senate.

Senators, with proposals for the Nation's relief in the offing, will work with less haste, as few bills are introduced in the upper House on the first day.

Of a total of 10,848 bills submitted to the House last session and 4,233 in the Senate, only 976 were enacted.

The Black measure's provisions, far more extreme than those contained in the Black bill last session, include making the act effective for two years, and carries penalties

Gaming Raids By City Police Net 8 Arrests

Racing Forms, 'Numbers' Slips Seized; 2 Held Say They're Jimmy's Aids.

Vice squad police battered their way into three reputed gambling establishments yesterday, arrested eight persons—two of whom claimed to be henchmen of Jimmy LaFontaine—and confiscated a quantity of racing forms, "numbers" slips and gambling equipment.

Armed with axes and crowbars, the raiders first visited a building in the 1400 block of L street northwest, smashed three doors and entered rooms on the second and third floors. It was estimated that approximately 20 "patrons" were placing bets on the races when the policemen appeared.

After seizing several racing sheets and forms, a sum of money and telephone equipment, the raiders arrested three men. They gave names of Hugh R. Moore, 30, of a downtown hotel; Robert Contino, 37, of the 1400 block of L street northwest, and Joseph H. Mealey, 68, also of the 1400 block of L street northwest.

Girl's '6 Daring Bandits, Inc.' Abduct 6 Men, Steal Arsenal

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 2 (AP).—Night raiders, led by a cigarette-smoking girl, have broken the serenity of peace officers in small towns of the Ozarks with kidnapings and robberies for loot of more than $6,000.

Today they struck at Crane, 35 miles southwest of Springfield, abducting six men, including the night watchman, W. E. Rickman, robbing three stores of cash and merchandise totaling $1,085 and making off with the arsenal of the city marshal.

"We're the Six Daring Bandits, Inc.," giggled the girl.

The victims, who saw her only in darkness, said she was "small."

The men—all who were found up in the little city at 3 a. m.—were driven to a country school house, their eyes taped, and left under a guard while the four other gunmen, under direction of the girl, returned to go through shelves and safes.

Yesterday there was a raid at Ozark, Mo. The gang robbed the county collector's safe of $500 after kidnaping the night watchman.

Administration Rift Predicted Over Monopoly

(Associated Press.)

The coming congressional tussle over NRA and monopoly was sharpened last night by a conflict of opinion within the Administration itself.

An examination of proposals advanced by the Federal Trade Commission disclosed them to be at variance with the ideas of Donald R. Richberg, ace presidential adviser and long general counsel of the Recovery Administration.

Congressional critics of NRA whose principal charge has been that that agency promoted monopoly and harried the small business man, quickly seized up on the FTC recommendations as an additional store of ammunition.

Broader Powers Sought.

To halt what it termed a "steady trend toward monopoly," the commission asked that its own powers be broadened. Richberg holds that an extension of authority should go to NRA or some body created under it.

Richberg declined to make any comment yesterday, but NRA officials, who would not be quoted, noted a second conflict in which one commission proposal runs counter to the provisions of a number of the earlier codes.

The commission urged that sellers be prohibited from offering lower prices to quantity purchasers than to smaller buyers—the chain store for example as contrasted with a small independent merchant—where the discount offered is out of proportion to the quantity bought.

Early codes approved, NRA officials said, before the adoption of a policy covering this question, made allowance for the establishment of "customer classifications," and "customer preferences," on a basis of lower prices to large scale buyers.

Dickinson Approves.

In addition, the commission asked power to "curb unfair business practices in intrastate commerce to prevent one corporation from acquiring another for the purpose of reducing competition and to require that a firm divest itself of control so obtained.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who led a fight against what he contended were monopolistic tendencies in NRA last winter, expressed the opinion that the commission proposals were "certainly in the right direction," but added it was "important to enforce the anti-monopoly laws we already have."

General approval came, too, from Senator Dickinson (Republican), of Idaho, who usually links himself with the Old Guard faction of his party on such questions.

"I have fought persistently this trend toward monopoly," he said. "All the new legislation is permitting monopoly and encouraging it. I have not studied the commission's recommendations, but I am favorable to all of them except that giving it the right to interference in business within the States. That is for the States."

Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, expressed a similar view.

Heavy Snowdrifts Block N. Y. Roads

Thousand Cars and Trucks Are Plowed Out.

Little Falls, N. Y., Jan. 2 (AP).—Highway officials were battling tonight to keep roads in this section free of drifting snow after 1,057 cars and trucks, including five buses, which had been marooned during the night, were plowed out.

Strings of cars and trucks four miles long blocked Route 5, principal east-west highway across the State, from 11 o'clock last night until 3 o'clock this afternoon. Plow gangs got traffic moving, only to have the highway closed again as large trucks blocked the single lane plowed through great drifts.

Hundreds of passengers in buses and private cars were forced to remain in their vehicles throughout the night as nearby farmers were unable to accommodate them. No accidents or injuries were reported, although the temperature was 12 above zero.

was quite dark, the visibility was good. He expected the two ships to pass without mishap.

The Lexington was proceeding north.

The Christenson, he said, "suddenly seemed to swerve into the starboard bow of the Lexington.

"All we had time to do was to give a number of short blasts on our whistle. I wouldn't attempt to explain the accident because any explanation would only be a guess."

The collision was but half a mile from the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Thousands of persons, attracted by the din of ships' blasts, lined the banks of the East River on both sides.

Heavy Losses Reported In Gran Chaco Battle

Buenos Aires, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Heavy fighting was reported in the Gran Chaco border war tonight. A Bolivian dispatch from the Pilcomayo River sector claimed Paraguayan losses totaled 500 killed and 1,200 wounded.

At La Paz the war office said that in the last six days 3,000 Bolivians had held off the advance of 15,000 attacking Paraguayans, moving up in a concerted drive on Villa Montes, field base and gateway to the rich Bolivian oil fields.

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

Out of 69 Democratic Senators only 24 come from the South. And of 317 Democratic members of the House only 100 or so know the rebel yell by heart.

Yet, in face of this tremendous growth of Democratic membership coming out of the North and West, the South stays in the saddle more solidly than ever. The Speakership goes from Illinois down to Tennessee. The stars fell on Alabama yesterday and the House majority leadership, now safe in the clutches of Brother Will Bankhead, of Alabama, has moved from Tennessee farther down into the deep South. They wouldn't even let it get near the Mason and Dixon Line. That means that, in all probability, if Bankhead's health permits, he can look forward to being Speaker some day.

The South, likewise, is on top of the heap in the Senate. Garner, of Texas, holds the chair ex-officio and Robinson, of Arkansas, has a strongle hold on the leadership.

Southerners also have a goodly share of choice committee chairmanships in both houses, thus further strengthening their grip on Congress.

There is something paradoxical in this because it is the Southern Democrats who, being in many cases second cousins of the Republicans in economic philosophy, have had the most pangs over the New Deal. Northern and Western Democrats are far more New Dealish. But, when they approach the portals of Congress, they are still Damn Yankee carpetbaggers.

One job probably will go North, Boland, of Pennsylvania, likely will be the party whip. This was indicated a few hours after the Pennsylvania Democrats decided to lay their 23 votes on the line for Bankhead, thus starting a bandwagon break for him as they did a few weeks ago for Byrns as Speaker.

For this service Pennsylvania gets a place on the Ways and Means Committee and the honor of providing the party whip. There is more work than honor in this job. Being party whip is a workhorse assignment. The whip must round up absent members, keep a voting majority on hand at all times, and if something vital is in the wind he must page the golf clubs, send S O S telegrams to members who are out of town, and in general be prepared to rouse the sleepers from the cloakroom couches whenever important business is afoot. It isn't always a matter of driving the donkey to water and making him drink. Sometimes it means taking a member away from a drink.

• • • •

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace seems to lack the commercial instinct. When he was asked yesterday for his views concerning plans of farm aid on cost of production as a minimum price guarantee, he replied that a whole chapter on it could be found in his book, "New Frontiers."

"You can consult a copy of it in the next room so you won't have to buy the book," Wallace added, thus letting go of a modest royalty without batting an eye.

• • • •

The book was consulted and it says cost of production is a tricky thing. Wallace is skeptical of trying it because he believes with it would have to go Government licensing and Government access to books and cost records. Gov. Olson of Minnesota and a number of left-wingers and farm organization leaders are renewing their agitation for cost of production price protection. It is plain the Administration will, as it did a year ago, oppose such a program. At that time Administration leaders said that to attempt anything of that kind would provoke revolt among conservative Eastern farmers.

For a few moments today there won't be any House of Representatives. The old Seventy-second Congress dies at noon and it will require a few minutes to swear in the new members. Until they are sworn in and a new Speaker elected, the House proceedings will be in charge of South Trimble, clerk of the last House.

The Administration is proceeding with almost Machiavellian care to the touchy task of telling Congress what to do. Officials are very alert now to be deferential, whereas a year ago there was little attempt at concealment when they had finished drafting a bill and had sent it to the Capitol to be introduced. Of numerous example of how they stoop to conquer now, one relates to the proposed food and drug legislation which was pushed unsuccessfully last year and which is due for another try this winter.

"Are you going to reintroduce your food and drug bill?" Undersecretary of Agriculture Rex Tugwell was asked yesterday.

"We can't introduce anything," he replied. "Only a Senator or member of Congress can do that."

"Then are you going to write a bill for someone to introduce?"

"If our assistance is asked for we will give what assistance we can," Tugwell replied. He tried hard to keep a straight face.

Having succeeded in landing a Federal judgeship for Stanley Reed, now general counsel for the RFC, Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky has a candidate for the job Reed is vacating. He is Max O. Truitt, a son-in-law, who has made a good record in the RFC agency at St. Louis. Another candidate is Ibra C. Blackwood, retiring Governor of South Carolina.

Reed has had a good break. A Kentucky Democrat, he was brought to Washington to be general counsel of the Hoover Farm Board under James C. Stone, then chairman. Reed had worked with Stone in the burley tobacco growers' cooperative in Kentucky. Toward the end of the Hoover Administration Reed was taken into the RFC and held over by the Democratic regime. Now he gets a lifetime job.

newspapermen, "and especially the Trenton."

Capt. T. Yamaguchi, Japanese naval attache here, talked with Matsuda yesterday by telephone and soon afterward called on Capt. William D. Puleston, director of the Navy's intelligence division, to make an official explanation of the incident. Yamaguchi verified Matsuda's identity and assured Naval officials the officer was not engaged in espionage.

Matsuda is in the United States on official business, although he neglected to carry his passport with him to Florida.

Yamaguchi said Matsuda had been instructed to stop in Washington and report on his way back to New York, where he is attached to the Japanese navy inspection office.

Funeral Is Held For Bessie Pearce

Mrs. Bessie Lee Pearce, wife of Robinson W. Pearce, Treasury Department machinist, was buried yesterday in Rock Creek Cemetery. Funeral services for Mrs Pearce, who died in Sibley Hospital Monday, were held in Trinity M. E. Church.

A native of Philadelphia, Mrs. Pearce had lived in Washington for the past 30 years. Her home was at 220 Fourth street southeast.

Mrs. Pearce is survived by her husband, four sons, Stanley, Bryant and Jerus Pearce, of Washington, and Lenick Peance, of Los Angeles, and four daughters. Mrs. Bessie Finley, Little Rock, Ark.; Mrs. Frances McCullough, Lexington, Ky.; Mrs. Helen Moore, Enn, Pa., and Mrs. Lilla May Claunch, of Washington.

Senator Overton Ill, Kept From Congress

Senator John H. Overton, of Louisiana, was confined yesterday to Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, as a result of a heart attack earlier this week. His office said he was undergoing a "check over" and was reported yesterday to have improved, the Associated Press reports.

He will not be present for the opening of Congress, his physicians having ordered him to take a two-weeks' rest.

8 Arrested Here In Gaming Raids

Mealey, known to police as "The Senator," faced a count of conspiracy to violate the gaming laws in addition to the other charge. Bond was set at $1,000 each.

A reputed "numbers" establishment was next to fall before the raiders' axes. Forcing entrance to a building in the 1500 block of U street northwest, the policemen arrested one man and three women, all colored. The place was disguised as a cigar store, police said, and the women were accepting "numbers" bets across a counter.

"Numbers" Books Seized.

Charged with operating a lottery, the prisoners said they were Charles E. Pinkney, 34, who told police he was employed by Jimmy LaFontaine; Mary Gibbs, 25, of the 20000 block of E street northwest; Eva J. Henderson, 22, of the 2000 block of L street northwest, and Eva F. Cotton, 27, of the 900 block of Westminister street northwest. Several "numbers" books and cash were seized.

A second man who claimed to be employed by LaFontaine was arrested in the final raid on a store in the 1800 block of Seventh street northwest. Booked on lottery charges, he gave the name of Jack Schwartz, 25, of the Seventh street address. Police said that both Pinkney and Schwartz, after claiming connection with LaFontaine, called the latter's attorney for advice.

Jerusalem Acquits American 'Kidnaper'

Jerusalem, Jan. 2 (AP).—Harry Holzman, the American citizen who was extradited here from Beirut, where he was arrested on a charge of kidnaping his own child, was acquitted in the Jerusalem courts today, it was reported to the Palcor News Agency.

The actual charge from which he was freed was that of stealing property of his wife, a previous court decision having awarded temporary custody of the child to Mrs. Holzman. Holzman now is free to leave Palestine, but without his child.

$205,000,000 Reported Spent In Home Repair

FHA Summary Is Seen as Effort to Combat Criticism in Congress.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

In an apparent effort to counteract criticism on Capitol Hill, the Federal Housing Administration yesterday issued a summary of building activity which set at more than $205,000,000 the amount of on home modernization and repairs money spent or contracted for on home modernization and repairs since August 1.

Pointing to "the great upturn" in this type of work, the FHA declared that "records reveal the fact that in the past half-century or more building construction has never yet made a start upward from a low level without continuing unabated back to normal."

Whether this assurance will be enough to satisfy the Senate sponsors of the housing act was doubtful, since disappointment has been expressed in some quarters with achievements so far. The housing statement—timed to coincide with the opening of Congress—sought to allay this feeling.

Delay Concerns Senators.

Senate leaders already have indicated they will try to get at what is delaying the "building boom" some of them predicted when the act was adopted last year. Their conclusions undoubtedly will have a hearing on the confirmation of James A. Moffett, housing administrator.

Reports from every available source all testify to "the remarkable headway made by the modernization program," according to the FHA. Work of this character has attained the rate of $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 a week, putting at least 300,000 men to work "at relatively insignificant expense" to the Government, it is said.

The estimate was based on reports up to December 31 from 3,997 financial institutions which have made 72,658 loans totaling $30,450,583. In addition, data was received from 3,798 community organizations, showing, it was said, that property owners are doing their own financing largely, rather than borrowing.

11,936 Institutions Qualified.

Altogether, the FHA has 11,936 financial institutions qualified to make modernization loans, while 779 businesses having 1,254 branch offices have been authorized to make mortgage loans since the "new construction" program was launched November 1.

The effect of the latter campaign, the FHA declared, "should begin to be felt appreciably within the next few months, and then increasingly for years to come." This has been regarded as the long-range phase of the housing program.

Figures from the Department of Labor and the American Federation of Labor bear out the contention of the FHA, it was said. Union reports for the early part of December show a gain in building employment for the first time since records were begun in 1928. This gain put 2 per cent of the building trades membership back to work.

New construction increased 6.5 per cent in November, compared with last November, while alterations, additions and repairs advanced 61.2 per cent, the FHA estimated. The actual figures on repairs were $13,072,000, against $8,111,000 in 1933. The percentage of increase has risen every month since operations began, it was said.

Asserting that the modernization movement "has by no means reached its peak," the Housing Administration said that the effect has been to stimulate lumber and paint sales generally over the Nation. In some cases—notably Miami, Fla., and Bangor, Me.—skilled laborers are "swamped with work," while other sections are reporting temporary shortages of trained workmen.

Roberts Reelected By Horse Company

Annual Meeting Is Held by Woodlawn Unit.

A. Harmon Roberts, of Woodlawn, was reelected president of the Woodlawn Horse Co. at its annual meeting held in the Woodlawn School. Other officers elected for the year include Albert R. Harrison, secretary, and Frank H. Wilkinson, treasurer. Directors are George C. Gillingham, Joseph W. Cox and William F. Halley.

The organization is one of the oldest local organizations in Fairfax County, having been founded in 1865 as a protective association for residents of Mount Vernon district against the depredations of horse thieves who were numerous in that section after the Civil War. Records of the company show it never failed to recover a horse stolen from any of its members. Since the event of the automobile age, the company has confined its activities to protecting other property of its members.

Roosevelt, Jr., Has Another Date To Tell It to a Traffic Judge

Car Skids Into Parked Machine in Pennsylvania; Must Appear in Wayne January 15; Speeding Charge Pending in Orange.

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 2 (AP).—Franklin Delano Roosevelt jr.'s life is just one court appearance after another during the holiday season.

The President's tall and rangy son and namesake was in an automobile crash at Wayne, Pa., New Year's morning. He escaped injury but he didn't escape an appearance in court.

That makes two court dates he must keep as a result of his holiday trip to the White House.

He was released on his own recognizance at Wayne for a further hearing on January 15 but has a date, in the meantime, with a court at Orange, Conn., to face a charge of speeding on his southward trip to Washington.

The crash at Wayne, young Roosevelt told a justice of the peace at his arraignment, occurred during a blinding snowstorm. The car driven by the President's son skidded into the parked machine of Edward Newman, 24, who was cut and bruised.

Franklin came to Harvard in 1932 and his first arrest while a student occurred at Smithfield, R. I., where he was charged with speeding. The charge was dropped.

In the fall of 1933 he was arrested for speeding at Windsor Locks, Conn., and in May, 1934, charged with the same offense at Union, Conn.

Just before his arrest at Union his car struck and injured Mrs. Daniel P. O'Leary, 60, in Boston. She sued him for $25,000.

In April of the same year he was fined $20 in Boston for having out-of-State plates on an automobile without permission of the registrar of motor vehicles.

Harvard College authorities have taken a hand in young Roosevelt's automobile difficulties. In October, 1933, they lectured him for violating college parking rules.

Fusionists Due To Start Job Dealing Today

New Police Chief Expected in Montgomery County Political Shakeup.

Disposition of patronage by the Fusion organization in Montgomery County, which has been awaited impatiently since the November 6 election that gave the Fusion control of the board of commissioners, is expected to start today.

The three Fusion commissioners have indicated that they will make several appointments which will be the forerunner of a gradual replacement of Democratic county employes with Fusion supporters.

It is understood that a new chief of police to succeed Alvie A. Moxley will be named. Beyond stating that the chief will be a Republican, the commissioners have been silent on the subject. Earlier statements indicate, however, that J. William Garrett, of Gaithersburg, will get the post.

New Jailer Also Expected.

A new jailer also probably will be appointed, although no indication has been given as to who would be named.

Garrett formerly was an agent with the Department of Internal Revenue and has been indorsed for chief of police by the Republican county organization.

He was said last week to be the choice of the county commissioners over B. Peyton Whalen, Bethesda, and William L. Aud, Poolesville, Progressive Democrats, who were supported by their branch of the Fusion group. Two of the three Fusion commissioners are Republicans.

Following today's meeting, county appointments are expected to follow somewhat more rapidly than they have to date. Immediately after the election the organization agreed to defer filling county positions until the first of the year.

Patronage Division Planned.

Plans of the party call for an even division of the patronage between Republicans and Progressive Democrats. When it was announced that Garrett was in line for chief of police it also was stated that a Democrat would be named supervisor of assessments, a position with a comparable salary. A similar division of positions has been promised throughout the county.

However, a charge was made by Edward Peter, Progressive Democratic leader, at a caucus of his party leaders last week, that the Republicans were being lined up for the most desirable positions. Peter said that many of the positions allocated to Democrats were in line for severe curtailment or in actual possibility of being abolished as part of the economy program pledged by the Fusion candidates in the recent campaign. On the other hand, he said, permanent positions with guaranteed salaries are scheduled for Republican hands.

The two factions are still deadlocked over the matter of State patronage, which the Republican State central committee insists is not affected by the Fusion county agreement. Unable to make any headway with the county Republican organization, the Progressive Democrats have appointed a committee to appeal directly to Gov. Harry W. Nice after his inauguration next Wednesday.

Bar Sales Tax, Says Bethesda Plea to Nice

Trade Body Cites Proximity of D. C. Merchants in Argument.

The Bethesda (Md.) Chamber of Commerce, at a special meeting last night, voted to send a letter to Harry W. Nice, Governor-elect of Maryland, opposing a sales tax for the State.

Bethesda, like a number of other towns in Montgomery County, is just across the line from the District of Columbia. With a sales tax in operation in these towns, it was argued last night, the Maryland merchants would not be able to compete with those in Washington who are free of a sales tax.

The action of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, which follows that of the Takoma chamber, was precipitated by a suggestion by Gov.-elect Nice last week that a sales tax would overcome the State's deficit.

The Bethesda chamber, without suggesting any alternative, urged the Montgomery County delegates in the Maryland Legislature to oppose the sales tax proposal.

Cabinet Delays Security Plan

Congress May Not Receive Its Report Before Mid-January.

(Associated Press.)

The likelihood arose yesterday that it would be mid-January or later before Congress receives from President Roosevelt the blueprint of the economic security structure he wishes to erect.

The Cabinet committee, which several weeks ago received the recommendation of an advisory council covering unemployment insurance, old-age pensions and allied subjects, will not have its report ready for the President for at least another week.

Officials said there was no basis for reports that there was dissension in the Cabinet committee over the form of the insurance and pension systems that should be employed. They said the delay was attributable to outside affairs which had prevented members of the committee from working on the report.

Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, an old friend of Secretary Frances Perkins, died several days ago. This interrupted the work of the Secretary. Harry Hopkins, the relief administrator and another member of the committee, was ill with a cold yesterday and unable to work on the report.

Aguinaldo May Seek Filipino Presidency

Manila, Jan. 2 (AP).—Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo, who led the Filipino insurrection against the United States more than a generation ago, may seek the presidency of the Philippine Commonwealth government to be established probably next July.

Reports spread tonight that the 65-year-old general would oppose Manuel Quezon, president of the Senate and outstanding leader for independence, as a candidate for chief executive of the government which will function for about ten years before full freedom is granted the islands by the United States.

Dr. Roberts Gets Supervisor Post

White Hall Physician Is Named by Judge.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Dr. L. R. Roberts, prominent physician of White Hall, has been named by Circuit Judge Lemuel F. Smith to serve on the board of supervisors of Albemarle County. He will fill the vacancy created by the death of John A. O'Neill, of Crozet, on November 25.

Dr. Roberts has been a practicing physician in the White Hill district, which he will represent, since 1912, when he came to Moormans River after graduating from the Medical College of Virginia. He is a native of Alabama and received his premedical education at the University of Richmond.

He served on the Albemarle Board of Public Welfare until its abolition by a recent change of government, and is a member of the Democratic committee of Albemarle County. He has in the past been a director of the National Bank & Trust Co. Dr. Roberts is an active member of the Albemarle County Medical Society and the Medical Society of Virginia. He is a member of the Baptist Church.

Glass Presses Interest Rate Reduction War

Senator Remains Hostile to Reserve Board and FDIC Rulings.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday indicated that he remains opposed to recent actions by the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ordering banks throughout the country to reduce their maximum deposit interest rates from 3 to 2½ per cent after February 1.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation yesterday suspended until January 31 its order, which applied to insured banks outside of the reserve system, in order that Congress may have an opportunity to clear up doubts as to the legality of the action by amending the law.

This was a victory for Senator Glass who held the FDIC order was an arbitrary usurpation of authority. But the Virginian is not satisfied with this concession to his viewpoint. When he raised the issue several weeks ago he also flayed the Federal Reserve Board for its order to banks within the reserve system.

Raps Uniform Interest Rate.

He did not charge that the Reserve Board lacked authority to regulate the interest rates paid by member banks, but held that the board's action in establishing a uniform interest rate for the entire country was contrary to the intentions of Congress.

It is on this point that Senator Glass intends to press his fight. Involved in the issue is the cheap-money policy of the Roosevelt Administration, as well as the question of centralized banking. The controversy started by Senator Glass may well become the opening skirmish in a stiff battle over whether the American banking system is to be transformed from a structure built along State and regional lines into a highly centralized system controlled from Washington.

Senator Glass contended yesterday that when Congress empowered the Reserve Board to take action from time to time on maximum deposit interest rates of member banks it never intended that a uniform rate should be applied to the entire country.

He pointed out that the law under which the board may act specifically suggests different interest rates on bank deposits "having different maturities or subject to different conditions respecting withdrawal or repayment or subject to different conditions by reason of different locations."

Suspension Fails to Satisfy.

The Virginian argued that there is no more reason why the interest rate should be uniform than there is for a uniform discount rate at all the reserve banks, which does not prevail.

How far Senator Glass intends to carry his opposition was not indicated by him. But it was clear that he has not been quieted by the FDIC's suspension of its order. The suspension until January 31 was important only if it means the action will be abandoned if Congress fails to act since the order was not effective until February 1. Its significance came from the fact that the FDIC conceded some doubt existed as to the legality of what it had done.

Senator Glass yesterday called on Dr. Adolph C. Miller, a member of the Federal Reserve Board. The Virginian did not reveal the purpose of the visit. Both men are old friends. The Senator did not see Gov. Marriner S. Eccles, although the latter's office is only a few feet from that of Dr. Miller.

King Zog Denies Attempt on Life

Reports Monarch Was Hurt by Bomb Unconfirmed.

Athens, Jan. 2 (AP).—Dispatches reaching Athens tonight failed to confirm earlier published reports that King Zog of Albania was wounded when his palace was bombed.

Other reports, however, said Morharen Bairaktar, the aide de camp who defied the King, was heading powerful bodies of rebels, up in arms against the monarch.

Martial law was proclaimed in the northern section of Albania, it was reported, while the Yugoslav frontier was closed.

The report that Zog had been wounded came from the Isle of Corfu, close to Albania on the Greek coast. A general mobilization of Mohammedans to fight the rebellion, in progress for some days, has been decreed, the dispatches said.

U. S. Movie Official Fatally Shot in Africa

Johannesburg, Union of South Africa, Jan. 2 (AP).—Carl Sonin, American manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer interests in South Africa, was found fatally shot through the head in his residence here New Year's Day, police revealed today. A servant found the body, fully clothed, seated on a chair on the balcony. A revolver was on the floor. Friends said they left Sonin, who formerly lived in New York, apparently in good spirits Monday night. He made appointments for yesterday. The dead man left two letters.

Rep. Randolph Misses Place By Eight Votes

West Virginian Finishes Seventh in Race for Ways and Means Body.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, barely missed election to the coveted Ways and Means at the Democratic House caucus yesterday, according to the Associated Press.

Seven vacancies on the committee were filled and Randolph ran eighth in the balloting, receiving 168 votes, only 8 less than the successful aspirant immediately preceding him.

Randolph was placed in nomination by Representative Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, a member of the committee. He had the solid support of the West Virginia delegation.

"I am happy to have made the effort even though it falied," Randolph said. "I would like to have seen West Virginia get a place on the committee after 44 years."

The last West Virginian to serve on the Ways and Means Committee was William L. Wilson, who was in Congress from Randolph's district in the 1890's.

The West Virginia delegation voted solidly for Representative Joseph W. Byrns for Speaker but split in the battle for House leader, Representatives Randolph, Smith, Johnson and Kee voting for Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, and Representatives Ramsay and Edmiston voting for Representative O'Connor, of New York.

Edmiston said today he had dropped plans of trying to get on the Appropriations Committee and instead would keep his present seat on the Military Affairs Committee.

Representative Johnson is seeking a place on the Appropriations Committee and Representative Ramsay will try for the Judiciary Committee. The other West Virginians are expected to keep their present committee assignments.

visit is expected to end 15 years of strained relations between these two great Latin nations.

Fear of Hitler Power Reported Behind Pact

Rome, Jan. 2 (AP).—A growing fear of what Adolf Hitler, emboldened by his expected success in the Saar plebiscite, might do in Austria, lay behind Pierre Laval's decision to come to Rome at once, informed circles said tonight.

In the course of an hour's telephone conversation today the French Ambassador, Count Charles de Chambrun, told the French foreign minister "it was now or never," these sources disclosed.

Laval thereupon decided to lay the whole matter before the cabinet, convinced it was time to abandon diplomatic exchanges and talk to Premier Mussolini face to face. Getting the Cabinet's approval, he made up his mind to come to Rome tomorrow.

Questions directly concerning Italy and France, high sources here said, have now been definitely settled.

France will make Italy territorial concessions in southwestern Libya of considerable extent but small importance, a small concession in French Somaliland of more importance, give Italy joint control of the Jibuti-Addis Ababa Railroad and sign a new agreement regarding Italian citizens in Tunis whereby their Italian citizenship and full rights with Frenchmen will be prolonged for five-year periods, it was stated.

They asserted France is not giving really important colonial concessions, but was conceding something more important—a free hand for Italy in Abyssinia.

Theater Attendance Improves.

New York, Jan. 2.—Revival of the church drive for clean films finds the trade in better position to meet such demands than in the summer of 1934. A moderate improvement in theater attendance will probably continue during the next few months.

Leading Industrial Editors See Upturns in 1st Quarter's Trade

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Business volume in the first quarter of 1935 will be moderately better in most lines in the opinion of editors of leading industrial publications, it was revealed in a survey published this week by Associated Business Papers, Inc.

In some cases, it was felt, profits may not increase in proportion to the greater gross because of advanced hoperating costs throug higher wage and materials bills and price instability. Generally, however, better earnings were seen as a likely accompaniment of the rising activity, by editors of 125 publications which are members of the Association of Business Papers.

Editors in touch with retail merchandising expect department store sales to continue their recent gains into the first quarter, while feeling that profit margins may be thin. Hardware and shoe buying for the spring is already progressing in increased volume, according to observers in those fields.

Production of shoes, which in 1934 was only 10,000,000 pairs behind the 1929 peak, is expected to duplicate this year's performance in early 1935, leather trade journalists stated. Textile production promises to increase some 10 per cent over last year in the opinion of editors.

Automotive trade papers expect a material pick-up in their industry in the first quarter as compared with last year, when plants were hampered by the tool and die workers strike. The profits outlook was regarded as uncertain, with most editors avoiding expressions of opinion.

The steel outlook is encouraging, according to the heads of publications in that industry. The steady small increase in production in recent weeks is seen as likely to run into the early months of 1935. It was estimated that production in 1934 was about 24,700,000 tons, an increase of 2,100,000 tons over 1933.

The State compensation commission notified the board that it had set the salaries and office expenses of the following county officers:

Mrs. McMaster's Funeral Is Held

Burial Services Take Place in Lovettsville, Va.

Funeral services for Mrs. Lula Householder MacMaster, 66, were held yesterday at her residence in Silver Spring, Md., the Rev. Ralph D. Smith, pastor of the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church, officiating. Burial was at Lovettsville, Va.

Mrs. McMaster, who was a native of Loudoun County, Va., had been in the service of the Federal Government for 44 years. She was first employed in the United States Mint at Philadelphia and was transferred to the Appointment Division in the Treasury Department here. In 1931 she was pensioned because of ill health. She and her husband had made their home in Silver Spring, Md., for 19 years and prior to that were residents of Washington for a number of years.

Besides her husband, Herbert G. McMaster, she is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Harry Kearney, Mrs. Claude Phelps and Mrs. Katie McCall, all of Washington.

Shipbuilding Is Steady.

New York, Jan. 2.—No major expansion of shipbuilding activity is in early prospect, although the larger yards are operating at satisfactory rates on naval contracts. Moderate improvement in intercoastal and Florida ship traffic is being experinced.

Fruit Growers Open Session At Maryland U.

Educators, Scientists Also Attend Horticultural Unit's Meeting.

More than 100 fruit growers, educators, and scientists, representing every Maryland county and several Eastern States, yesterday attended the opening meeting of the Maryland State Horticultural Society's annual convention at the University of Maryland.

Speakers who addressed the afternoon session included Dr. A. L. Schrader and A. F. Vierheller of the university; Raymond Hanson, Ellicott City, Md., president of the society; H. W. Miller, fruit grower of Paw Paw, W. Va.; Dr. J. H. Gourly, Ohio State University; Dr. B. A. Porter, Department of Agriculture, and Dr. P. D. Patterson, of New York.

The program included a study of the fruit growers' immediate problems which have recently caused concern to the Maryland growers.

Exhibits included those of an educational and commercial nature. The university's horticultural department exhibited a fruit variety display, and fruit maturity and washing studies. Grading and packing displays were exhibited by the Maryland State Department of Markets.

Those who will address the meetings today will be Dr. John B. Magness, Dr. F. P. Cullinan and Dr. D. F. Fisher, of the Department of Agriculture; E. C. McFadden, American Fruit Growers; Dr. Gourley, Dr. E. N. Corey, of Maryland University, and B. T. Roberts, fruit grower of Marlton, N. J.

Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the university, and H. B. Tolley, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, will be the principal speakers at the annual banquet tonight.

Caucus Names Byrns Leader With Bankhead

personally deliver at a joint session of both houses early tomorrow afternoon.

The President announced he will call five or six Democratic leaders from each side of the Capitol to confer with him at the White House tomorrow night on new legislation.

Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the President's National Emergency Council, and New Deal "coordinator," was the only caller of prominence at the White House. Richberg, whose office has been serving as a clearing house for legislative proposals of Administration emergency agencies, conferred with the President on important details of his message.

Senate Leader Named.

Senate Democrats in conference early yesterday did what was expected of them in reelecting Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic floor leader; Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, Democratic whip, and Senator Hugo L. Black, of Alabama, secretary. Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, was designated Democratic candidate for the office of President pro tem of the Senate.

Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, Senate minority leader, decided to delay the scheduled Republican organization conference until later in the week. The Senate Republican committee on committees met, however, in the office of Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota.

Representative Frederick L. Lehlbach, of New Jersey, was elected chairman of the Republican conference and Representative Harry L. Englebright, of California, re-elected minority whip.

The committee decided to retain both Senators Robert LaFollette, Wisconsin Progressive, and Henrik Shipstead, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, for Republican committee assignments. Assurance was given that the 27 Senate Republicans would be assigned to at least two major committees each, while some few would get three. Republican membership on most Senate committees, however, will be reduced by two.

"Deal" on Bonus Rumored.

A "deal" with the House cash bonus which would assure the proveteran group of an early vote on the bonus issue in return for their cooperation in junking the discharge rule, was widely rumored as House Democrats caucused.

Leaders denied there was a "deal." It was significant, however, that Representative Byrns, taking the floor in support of his discharge motion, promised members that bonus legislation will get intensive committee consideration. He said he thought the matter merited early disposition in the House.

Abandonment of the 145 discharge rule removes a major worry from the shoulders of Administration leaders. Under a sanction of the rule, the necessary number of signatures were rapidly attached to a cash bonus petition last session, and the Patman bonus bill quickly speeded to House passage. The McLeod bank "pay-off" bill and the Frazier-Lemke $3,000,000,000 farm mortgage inflation measure also took the petition route, and were blocked in the House only by sharp strategy of leaders.

Seeking Strong Leadership.

Discard of rule in caucus yesterday may nip these measures, and others just as threatening, in the bud this season, supplying another strong item of proof that the President and his leaders in the House are taking no chances on a legislative record that will serve as a basis for the next presidential campaign. With this hurdle out of the way, Byrns and Bankhead will strive for a strong leadership, smacking on the rule of former House "czars."

The substitute "discharge" rule propounded by Byrns yesterday will require signatures of a House majority on any petition to force legislation. It read:

"When a majority of the total membership of the House shall have signed the motion, it shall be entered on the journal, printed with the signatures thereto in the Congressional Record, and referred to the calendar of motions to discharge committees."

Bankhead Wins Easily.

Northern and Western Democratic candidates for the House floor leadership were quickly outdistanced by Bankhead, a Southerner, in yesterday's caucus balloting. Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, ran the closest second, but the Bankhead lead was nearly 3 to 1. O'Connor will be rewarded with chairmanship of the important House Rules Committee, which Bankhead will relinquish.

Following is a tabuation of the balloting:

	First Ballot	Second Ballot
Bankhead	145	156
O'Connor	54	66
Rankin (Miss.)	33	19
Sabath (Ill.)	33	20
McCormack (Mass.)	21	17
Mead (N. Y.)	21	11
Arnold (Ill.)	5	8
Lea, (Calif.)	1	4
Total vote cast	308	301

When it became apparent that Bankhead was the choice, one after another of the competing candidates withdrew, and resolutions were adopted making the Alabaman's selection unanimous.

Preliminary to the caucus, various State delegations mustered all of their strength behind their favorite sons in the race for floor leader.

Snell Selected by G. O. P.

Early in the day, House Republicans went through the motions of nominating Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, as their candidate for Speaker. As the minority will have no say in the final House vote, the designation was tantamount only to naming Snell minority leader. The vote for Snell was 85 to 1, Representative W. P. Lambertson, of Kansas, casting a lone ballot for Representative Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan.

Even the House Progressive bloc, comprised mostly of Wisconsin La Follette Progressives and Minnesota Farmer Laborites, put up a ticket, designating Representative J. Buell Snyder, of Pennsylvania, for Speaker, and Representative Gerald J. Boileau, of Wisconsin, for leader.

Veterans Group Favors Roosevelt Bonus Stand

The American Veterans Association, an organization opposed to the preferred treatment of war veterans, yesterday rallied behind President Roosevelt in his opposition to the bonus.

In a telegram to the President, made public by Donald A. Hobart, national commander, the association expressed bitter resentment over "the manner in which an insignificant but highly articulate minority of voters attempts to dictate to you and to Congress the course of veterans' benefits."

"Prepayment of the bonus," it was declared, would be followed by "demands for pensions for all war widows and orphans and later by demands for all veterans without regard to need or disability. If this latter should come to pass, the burden on the Federal credit would be intolerable, as is evident from a study of the sordid history of American war pensions."

THE BIGGEST YEAR IN FIVE—
A BIGGER YEAR IN 1935

Our Sales of Real Estate Investment Properties in 1934 Equalled the Total of the Three Preceding Years

THE WASHINGTON real estate investment market is strengthening every week—

IN 1934 OUR CASH VOLUME of sales was more than double that of any single year in the last five years.

SIXTY PER CENT of this increased cash volume was made in the last 6 months of 1934—forty-five per cent of the total cash volume was made in the last 3 months of the past year.

THIS RAPID INCREASE indicates the trend toward accelerated real estate investment activity for 1935.

THEREFORE—NOW IS THE TIME to buy investment property, while good income producing property is still available in good sections of Washington.

THE PREFERRED PROPERTIES, from which dependable incomes may be earned, are listed first with us because of our 29 years as authorities on local investment property. We would like to help you enjoy a happy New Year by including you among our prosperous clients in 1935.

Ickes Defends Burlew, Glavis To White House

By Felix Bruner.

Secretary Ickes yesterday came to the defense of two important employes of the Interior Department after a hint from the White House that they should be discharged. The two employes are Ebert K. Burlew, chief administrative assistant, and Louis R. Glavis, director of investigations.

The defense took the form of an extensive memorandum addressed to President Roosevelt, outlining in detail the official activities of Burlew and Glavis. Ickes himself assumed the responsibility for the acts of his two subordinates. He declared publicly that he had no intention of removing either.

In spite of the fact that Ickes already has prepared his communication to the President, official denials that a tense situation existed between the White House and the Secretary of the Interior came from both sources.

A Serious Affair.

Regardless of denials, however, the affair was regarded in many quarters as one of the most serious that has arisen in the Cabinet since the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration.

Burlew has charge of personnel in the Interior Department, including the Public Works Administration. He also has charge of the departmental budget. In such a position he can wield a powerful influence, perhaps more powerful than anyone other than the Secretary himself. It is understood that most of the complaints have to do with administration of personnel affairs. The Interior Department, with its thousands of employes, is looked upon as a rich field for patronage.

The complaints against Glavis concern his "over enthusiastic" activities as an investigator. There are reports that his men have listened in on telephone conversations by high Government officials, that they have investigated the personal lives of other officials and that at least one United States Senator was subjected to an investigation. The Senator is Clarence C. Dill (Republican), of Washington. The investigation concerned alleged real estate activities in connection with the Grande Coulee Dam project. The investigators found there had been none.

Burlew's Action Checked.

In defending Burlew, Ickes declared that the administrative assistant could take no action concerning personnel without Ickes' own approval.

"I check every new appointment, every change of status and every removal," Ickes said. "Not one personnel change is made in this department without my personal approval."

There also had been reports that some of the complaints against Burlew were based on the idea that he was giving Glavis his instructions.

"Burlew never gives orders to Glavis," Ickes said. "Glavis receives his orders only from me. They might be transmitted through a third person, but they are my orders."

The whole tone of Ickes' remarks indicated that he intended personally to assume responsibility for any acts concerning which complaints might be made.

Ickes said that he had received numerous complaints about both Burlew and Glavis.

"I wouldn't think they were any good if I didn't get complaints about them," he said.

Earlier in the day President Roosevelt at his press conference said the report that he had hinted Burlew and Glavis should be removed looked as though it had been made up of whole cloth.

"Bushwhacking" Hit.

Later at a special press conference Ickes referred to Burlew and Glavis as "two of the most valuable men on my staff." "There is always a lot of bushwhacking," he said.

Both Burlew and Glavis are under civil service. Burlew has been in the Interior Department during four administrations, having served as administrative assistant to Secretary Ray Lyman Wilbur during the Hoover Administration. One of the charges against Burlew is that he was obstructing the New Deal. Ickes indicated that he had overcome any suspicions he might have had of Burlew because of his services under Republican administrations and that now he had the utmost confidence in him. Ickes declared that his department was pledged to the New Deal and that men who were a part of his department were a part of the New Deal.

Glavis owes his civil service rating to President Roosevelt himself. He had been removed from a position as chief of the field division of the Interior Department in 1908 at the personal request of President Taft. Taft ordered Secretary Ballinger to remove Glavis for insubordination. Glavis lost his civil service standing, which was not restored until exactly 25 years later, by executive order of President Roosevelt.

The Ballinger Scandal.

Glavis was responsible for the so-called Ballinger scandal during the Taft Administration, the scandal resulting from disclosures of illegal coal land entries in Alaska. The Glavis report at that time resulted in a congressional investigation and the eventual resignation of Ballinger after Glavis himself had been fired.

Ickes said that Glavis' duties were in three divisions: investigation for the Interior Department, investigation of all public works projects and investigation in connection with enforcement of the oil code. He denied that Glavis made a practice of investigating the character of individuals, except at the direct request of the Secretary. Ickes said that he had heard reports that Interior investigators had checked up on people in other departments but that these reports were untrue.

Only a few days ago two employes of the department were discharged "for the good of the service" after Glavis had made an investigation. There have been repeated reports that employes of the department generally have been under surveillance, and some of the orders concerning the conduct of the department would seem to bear this out.

One of the causes for complaint is said to be the fact that PWA housing and subsistence homestead projects have not been going forward as rapidly as many had hoped. This situation has led to some of the charges that the New Deal is being obstructed. Secretary Ickes has repeatedly said that the slowness of procedure has been due to care and a determination that no money should be spent dishonestly.

Hawaii Rocked By Earthquake And Landslide

Kilauea Volcano Activity Feared; Shocks Felt in Lower California.

Hilo, Hawaii, Jan. 2 (AP).—The entire island of Hawaii, largest of the territorial archipelago, was swayed by a strong earthquake today and residents turned their eyes toward Kilauea volcano to see whether the shocks would start activity in the great crater.

Bottles toppled from drug store shelves and dishes and pictures were broken in some homes. The shocks caused a landslide on the Hilo side of Hakalau Gulch, blocking the highway at that point.

Coming at 6:46 a. m. (12:16 p. m., Eastern standard time), the shocks awakened sleepers. Residents of the village of Kau, on the volcanic mountain's slope, said the earth movements were accompanied by a deep, rumbling roar.

Shocks in Lower California.

Mexicali, Lower California, Mexico, Jan. 2 (AP).—Reports of additional serious damage in Lower California from Monday's severe earthquake were received today and two more tremors were felt.

Quakes occurred at 2:30 and 9:25 a. m. They were slight along the United States-Mexican border, but were reported to have been heavy some miles south of here.

Monday's quake badly damaged a 25-mile stretch of the Inter-California Railway, 28 miles south of the border between Laguna and Medanos, E. G. Burdick, general manager of the line, said.

Three bridges were wrecked and five will need repairs.

Irish and English Reach Trade Peace

Pact Will Bring General Amity, Paper Says.

London (Thursday), Jan. 3 (U.P.).—Foreshadowing an early peace between England and the Irish Free State, a new trade agreement has been concluded after secret negotiations, the Daily Telegraph said today.

Under the purported pact, the Free State is to purchase all coal imports from Britain, while Britain will take additional imports of Irish cattle.

The negotiators included Dominions Secretary James Thomas, Walter Runciman, head of the British Board of Trade, and Maj. Walter Elliot, secretary for agriculture and fisheries, for England, and the Irish Free State high commissioner in London, John W. Dulanty, for Dublin.

The reported agreement would end a bitter trade war which threatened to wreck commerce between the two nations.

Subsistence Homes To Study Living Costs

The 60-odd subsistence homesteads set up all over the Nation by the Interior Department constitute an experiment to find out how much such projects can help low-income groups to support themselves, the subsistence homestead division's chief counsel, Paul D. Schriver, said yesterday.

He spoke at a luncheon meeting of the American Business Club in the Hay-Adams House. Robert Norman presided.

Toll of Injured In Saar Fights Is Set at 100

Saarbruecken, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 2 (AP).—Nazis and anti-Nazis in the Saar tonight counted bullet wounds and bandaged heads after the turbulent opening of the new year.

The League of Nations governing commission, meanwhile, moved to forestall further political strife, warning Nazis the order against political demonstrations bans any such rousing welcome as was given the first American Saarlanders arriving to vote in the plebiscite January 13.

To Meet New Arrivals.

In consequence, the next group of 300 arriving from America aboard the steamer Deutschland January 4 will be met at Hamburg by 100 Nazis from Saarbruecken. A big reception is planned for them, and they will be taken on a trip through Germany.

Thirty former Saar residents arrived from Chile today. They were quietly taken in taxis to their places of residence in the Saar.

As reports of heated clashes throughout the territory continued to trickle into Saarbruecken tonight, the toll of those injured in the last 48 hours was set at 100 or more. Two men were found dead—one stabbed, the other shot—but it was not certain their deaths resulted from political quarrels. The German front set its injured at 60.

11 Days Until Vote.

With the plebiscite only 11 days away, Col. G. G. Knox, head of the league's governing commission, was striving to keep under control the political passions that brought five major clashes between Nazis and anti-Nazis and numerous minor disturbances over the holidays.

Workers with buckets of paint were scouring the territory smearing over all Swastikas and "Hell Hitlers" scribbled on bridges and other public places.

Locomotive Runs Away, Captured After Chase

Pine Bluff, Ark., Jan. 2 (AP).—A Missouri Pacific Railroad locomotive, under repair in the shops, literally ran away from its crew here today, sped through the business section at an estimated speed of 30 miles an hour and ran out of steam seven miles north of here without causing any damage.

The crew of a freight on a siding hastily uncoupled their locomotive and sped in pursuit, overtaking the engine at Baldwin Switch, seven miles north on the main line to Little Rock. The dispatcher's office said, "Luckily, no train was due in from Little Rock."

Twins Aweigh!

Tiny Girls Gain Pounds Under Incubator Care.

The incubator twins, whose total weight was only 4 pounds when they came into the world Saturday, are gaining weight rapidly, their nurse reported.

Patricia weighed only 1 pound 15½ ounces when she opened her eyes on life last Saturday. Her twin, who arrived five minutes earlier, tipped the scales at 2 pounds 1 ounce.

Today Patricia's weight had increased to 2 pounds, and Henrietta weighed all of 2½ pounds.

"They're thriving, and we're very proud of them," a nurse at the hospital said.

The twins, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Ware, of Gordonsville, will be kept in the incubator until they weigh 5 pounds each, the nurse said.

Kiwanis Club's New Officers Assume Duties

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The newly elected officers of the Arlington County Kiwanis Club were installed at a luncheon meeting held yesterday at Windsor Arms, by Edwin F. Hill, past president of the Washington club and International Kiwanis trustee.

Those who were installed are Charles W. Smith, president; Frank H. Rowe, immediate past president; Dr. Lamar Harris, first vice president; Lyman M. Kelley, second vice president; John A. Cummins, secretary; Earl W. English, treasurer.

Members of the board of directors—Bailey P. Byars, William K. MacMahon, Lawrence Manning, William E. Robey, Arthur C. Stickley 2d, John F. Webster and Harold A. Whittle.

President Smith announced the following committee appointments:

Dr. Lamar Harris, general chairman and club whip.

Boys' and girls' work—Frank H. Rowe, chairman; Arthur F. Campbell, Lawrence Manning, Dr. J. Ed Payne and John F. Webster.

Interclub relations and Kiwanis education—Harold A. Whittle, chairman; Thomas A. French, Frank H. Rowe and John F. Webster.

The president announced that it is the plan of the club to carry on its boys' and girls' work and to aid underprivileged children. Frank H. Rowe will be in charge of this work, which will be carried on at Camp Arki, the new camp constructed by the club and which was formally dedicated with appropriate services last Sunday.

Among the honor guests present were Harold Marsh, president of the Washington Kiwanis Club; L. T. Bruninger and James Edmunds, past presidents of the Washington club; Charles Pimper, lieutenant governor Capital district; Irving Deiner, of Alexandria, past lieutenant governor Capital district, and Thomas S. Jones, jr., president of the Alexandria club.

Bert Carter, 35, colored, of Halls Hill, Arlington County, was killed yesterday when crushed between two trucks. The accident occurred on Glebe road and Alcova avenue, Alcova Heights.

Carter, who was a driver for Weinbrum & McLane, contractors having a sewer contract in the county, was in the act of untying the tow line, when a third truck crashed into the rear of Carter's vehicle. Carter was instantly killed. The body was removed to C. J. Ives' funeral parlors in Clarendon.

W. Cameron Pullman, of 514 Cameron street, driver of the oil company truck which crashed into Carter's, was taken to the Arlington County Jail. He was later released by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas in custody of his employer. A hearing will be held Saturday morning before County Judge B. M. Hedrick.

The Edward Douglas White Council, No. 2473, Knights of Columbus, will meet tonight in the hall at 14 Garrison road, at Clarendon.

After the meeting, the Columbus Club will meet and elect its officers for the new year.

Boston Bandits Get $15,000 in Jewelry

Rob Tremont Street Shop as Crowds Pass By.

Boston, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Three bandits held up Homer's, Inc., retail jewelers, on busy Tremont street, late today and stole diamonds valued at from $15,000 to $20,000.

While hundreds of late afternoon shoppers passed by on Tremont street, opposite Boston Common, the trio held up nine clerks and three customers in the street-floor shop.

One of the three stood guard in the door and another covered the store occupants. The third scooped up 150 diamonds from two trays and dumped them into a bag. Then all three fled, afoot.

A pedestrian, Richard Mahan, of Boston, chased and caught a man after the robbery, but police doubted that he was a participant. He carried a bag which contained neckties.

Gang Massacre Defense Loses Acquittal Plea

U. S. Rests Case Suddenly; Turrou Flies to N. J. for Hauptmann Trial.

Kansas City, Jan. 2 (AP).—Defense witnesses moved to the stand today as the Government unexpectedly rested its case in the trial of four men and three women on charges of conspiracy in the Kansas City Union Station massacre.

Richard T. Galatas, 45, owner of the Hot Springs, Ark., cigar store and pool room where Frank Nash, escaped convict, was arrested by Federal agents June 16, 1933, said he knew Nash only by the name of "Doc Miller."

"It's probably the second-highest-class room of its kind in Hot Springs," Galatas said of his establishment, "and has a clientele composed almost entirely of doctors."

Directed Acquittal Denied.

Handed a photograph of the baldheaded Nash, who was killed with four officers at the Kansas City station while en route back to the Leavenworth, Kas., prison, Galatas was asked if it resembled "Doc Miller."

"Absolutely not," he said. Nash was wearing a wig and a mustache at the time of his arrest.

Judge Merrill E. Otis overruled defense motions for a directed verdict of acquittal after Government attorneys rested.

Defense attorneys sought to prove that Fritz Mulloy, another conspiracy defendant, had been subjected to cruel treatment by Federal agents.

Mulloy, in absence of the jury, told Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis that Leon G. Turrou, Federal agent, had threatened to "throw me in jail and let me rot if I didn't make a statement."

Turrou, one of New Jersey's star witnesses in the trial of Bruno Hauptmann for the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., denied Mulloy's accusation and was corroborated by Walter G. Trainor, another agent. The defense was overruled and the jury brought back.

Will Fly to Jersey.

Turrou testified Mulloy made a voluntary oral statement to him concerning a telephone conversation June 16, 1933, in which he was asked to get in touch with Miller.

The agent also testified Mulloy admitted sending a money order for $500 to Nash at Hot Springs, Ark., May 16, 1933. The order was signed "V. Page," an alias of Vivian Mathis, who pleaded guilty Monday to one count of conspiracy.

Turrou, completing his testimony at noon, planned to fly to Flemington, N. J., where he will testify against Hauptmann. Turrou was the Federal agent who found most of the remaining Lindbergh ransom bills at the alleged kidnaper's Brooklyn home.

France Seeking To Ease Credit

Government Wields Power Over National Bank; Moret Ousted.

Paris, Jan. 2 (AP).—The government wielded its power over the Bank of France today to ease credit and pave the way for financing its operations in the difficult months to come.

Clement Moret, governor of the bank, a strong defender of the franc and the bank's independence, was displaced by Jean Tannery, charged with carrying out a policy of discounting treasury bonds and accepting them as collateral.

Moret had refused to concur in the program, intended to enlarge short-time credit by enabling the banks to unload some of their government paper.

Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin recently announced interest rates must be lowered "with or without the cooperation of the banks."

Louis Germain-Martin, minister of finance, told Parliament last month the government planned later to ask an increase in the limit of treasury bonds from the present 10,000,000,000 francs to 15,000,000,000 francs to enable it to meet obligations in the spring when tax receipts are small.

Government circles denied, however, that there was any change in the government attitude against devaluation of the franc.

T.F. Tobin Gets Writ for a Test Of Detention

Was Arrested Four Months Ago in Connection With Slayings.

Held in the District Jail for almost four months without a charge being placed against him, Thomas F. Tobin, who was arrested in connection with the slaying of Bryant (Big) McMahon and Sam Melincov in the Houston Hotel last September, yesterday obtained from Justice Jesse C. Adkins, in the District Supreme Court, a writ of habeas corpus to test the legality of his detention.

Tobin was arrested a block from the hotel. He has been held ever since. The coroner's jury reported the slaying was done by "unknown" persons, and in a subsequent investigation by the District grand jury that body declared it did not know the identity of the slayer or slayers.

John J. Sirica, attorney for Tobin, asked Justice Adkins to require Thomas M. Rives, superintendent of the District Jail, to bring Tobin to the court Friday for a hearing. At that time the police will be required to present any evidence they have connecting Tobin with the shootings.

Melincov and McMahon were shot to death early in September. They had been together early in the evening, and had gone to the hotel in a cab accompanied by several men. None of the witnesses remembered what happened at the hotel, and four of them were indicted for not telling all they knew when the coroner held an inquest.

Mr. Sirica charged that the only excuse for the detention of Tobin was a commitment issued by the coroner, although the coroner's jury reported the shooting done by "unknowns."

Former Governor Of Arkansas Killed

Falls Down Embankment Into Scalding Water.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 2 (AP).—Xenophon Overton Pindall, 61, who at 36 was the youngest man ever to serve Arkansas as Governor, stumbled and fell to his death in the Arkansas River here today.

The peculiar manner of his death was related to Coroner L. C. Aday by two men who, crossing a bridge above the scene, said they saw him stumble on a railroad cross-tie and fall down the embankment. They said Pindall's head struck some rocks, inflicting a severe gash, and then the body rolled into a pool of boiling water at the river's edge coming from a power company's steam boiler exhaust nearby. Aday held the death to be accidental, and said it resulted both from the scalding water and the head injury.

2 Policemen Face Trial for Drinking

Pvts. E. C. Moore and F. W. Gordy Are Accused.

Two policemen, under suspension for alleged intoxication New Year's Day, will face a police trial board next Wednesday. They are Privates E. C. Moore, of the Eighth Precinct, and F. W. Gordy, of the Second Precinct.

Moore, it was charged, appeared under the influence of liquor while directing traffic near Connecticut avenue and Porter street northwest. He was suspended by Lieut. Harry R. Lohman, of the Eighth Precinct, after several complaints from citizens were made.

Gordy was accused of being intoxicated in a drug store at Seventh and R streets northwest. Although off duty, Gordy was in uniform and was ordered suspended by Acting Captain J. P. Weber, of the Second Precinct.

Governor Puts Georgia In Insurance Business

Atlanta, Jan. 2 (AP).—Gov. Talmadge, an outspoken critic of the Government in business, today put Georgia into the insurance field.

Asked how he reconciled his position, the Governor replied:

"This is saving money to the State and does not involve any patronage or increased pay roll."

The Governor said the State would insure its property against fire with itself. Funds which ordinarily go to insurance premiums are to be put aside in the treasury and used to meet losses by fire.

2 NRA Actions Delayed by U.S. In Court Here

Section 7(a) Involved in Suits Fighting Loss of Blue Eagles.

Judicial consideration of section 7(a) of the national industrial recovery act, scheduled for District Supreme Court in two cases yesterday, was postponed at the request of the Government.

The clause, commonly known as the "collective bargaining" requirement of the NIRA, was involved in suits brought by the Ames Baldwin Wyoming Co., tool makers, of Parkersburg, W. Va., and the Ely Walker Co., of St. Louis, Mo., wholesale dry goods firm.

Both firms seek to restrain the Government from withdrawing their Blue Eagles because of alleged violations of mandates of the National Labor Relations Board. The board held hearings on labor disputes and then sent word to the firms that the compliance division of the NRA would be asked to remove the Eagles until such time as complete compliance with the code was obtained.

The Ames company maintained it was an "intrastate" firm and not subject to Federal regulation, through intervention in labor elections, while the Ely Walker Co. said it had sold the shipping part of its business to another firm and could not control the other firm's dealings with its employes. In all other respects, the Walker concern said it observed the Government's requirements.

January 18 was the date set for a hearing on the Ely Walker suit, and February 4 was set for the West Virginia company.

Democrats Win Complete Sway In Rhode Island

Unprecedented Power Is Shown in Full Overthrow of Former Regime.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 2 (AP).—For the first time since the Civil War, Democrats held the political scepter in Rhode Island tonight and no concerted challenge to their rule was in sight.

Skyrocketed into power last night in an unparalleled political upheaval which saw the traditional Republican control wiped out by carefully planned strategy, Gov. Theodore Francis Green and his Democratic cohorts razed the governmental structure of the State in one swoop and planned a set-up of 11 departments which would carry on under Democratic auspices the work of approximately 80 commissions, bureaus, and agencies.

The General Assembly, having a Democratic majority in both its branches, rested on its oars today, satisfied with last night's work which saw five bills rushed through and signed—a task that in other years had taken weeks and months.

The major attack was directed at the State Supreme Court and the Republican-controlled Public Safety Board of Providence. The entire Supreme Court membership, wiped out by legislative act, was immediately replaced by Green appointees; the safety board was dismissed and the head of the State police placed in temporary control of the police and fire departments of Providence, which had been under State control for four years.

From Times To Times.

The Times, of London, has just celebrated its 150th anniversary. Appearing first in 1785, its founder frankly admitted that his chief purpose in publishing it was to advertise a new method of typesetting. The four-paged paper made its appearance as "The Daily Universal Register" and began with an extremely modest circulation in the coffee houses of London. Yet before many decades it became known as "The Thunderer." Even now, when competition is more keen and criticism of journalistic failings more acute, no analyst would deny its right to be listed as one of the greatest achievements of the newspaper craft.

So it is with no intention whatsoever of belittling the London Times that we find joy in contemplating the fact that there are hundreds of newspapers throughout this land that will never become of international, national, or even State importance.

There is something inherently and unshakably American in the words "Tabernash Local Lore," which is the head for a society column in another Times, that of Middle Park, Colo. In this era of foreign correspondents, comics, wirephotos and wise-cracking columnists, it is undeniably restful to read in the Middle Park Times that "when it was all over the ladies departed with Christmas joy in their hearts, even though a terrific blizzard was raging outside."

So, congratulations to the Times of London on one hand. And on the other hand, congratulations to all those small-town newspaper editors who realize that there is as much news in the item that "Mrs. Abe Short's little boy, Abe, is still right puny," as there is in war clouds, gold movements, or five-year plans.

Design For Doukhobors.

It has been some time since anything has been heard of the Canadian Doukhobor girls, who insisted on parading the streets nude as a protest against conforming to certain provincial laws. This is not surprising, since these defiant maidens were imprisoned on an island in British Columbia two years ago, and are not due to be released until this summer.

The end of their confinement will probably be as much cause for rejoicing on the part of the jailers as that of the jailed. For it now leaks out that these Canadian Godivas have given their keepers a bad time. They have consistently refused to do any more than was absolutely necessary toward keeping up a civilized appearance. They even carried this to a point of refusing to comb their hair, preferring to let it fall down their backs in wild disarray. Frankly, the officials were stumped. Here was a group, and a group of girls at that, who apparently possessed no pride in their appearance. They even seemed to delight in their disdain of all feminine artifices.

Finally a subtle masculine plan was adopted to feminize these feminists. Movie magazines and combs were casually distributed about the prison. A few days later a decided change was noted. The girls had "gone Hollywood," frankly emulating the coiffures found in the magazines. They have now admitted that they never expect to revert to "old customs."

There is no doubt that the Canadian officials have had a problem in the Doukhobors. But the wisdom in the course adopted is questionable. In view of the fact that these girls were jailed for nudity, is it likely that a study of movie magazines will arouse contrition in their minds?

An Essential Service.

The opening of bids for widening and resurfacing Wisconsin avenue from the District Line to the Old Georgetown road in Bethesda calls attention to the important work which is being quietly but effectively done by the United States Employment Service. All of the labor for this project will be hired through the Rockville office of this Nation-wide employment exchange network. Residents of that vicinity who have registered with the Government's employment service will have the first chance of obtaining the jobs thus opened.

Every contractor who bids on a Federal-aid highway project must agree to hire his labor through an agency designated by the United States Employment Service. That requirement is both a tribute to the efficiency already attained by this agency and a guarantee that its prestige will continue to be enhanced. No such provision would be practical if the employment service were not winning the confidence of employers and workers alike.

Many of the workmen who will be hired on the Wisconsin avenue project have no jobs at present. In numerous cases, therefore, use of the employment service will serve to reduce the relief rolls without affecting the efficiency of personnel, which all private employers require. As a result, the prestige of the employment office is likely to be strengthened among employers, jobseekers and relief workers.

Development of a well-organized, nonpolitical system of public employment exchanges is recognized as one of the essentials of a modern industrial civilization. It becomes especially important when the Government is launching vast public works and supporting millions of jobless men on the dole. There is no other way in which an efficient work test can be given to dole recipients, or in which the employment of the workless on public enterprises can be scientifically handled.

Divided Councils.

The Federal Trade Commission is recommending an extension of its powers to eliminate the "steady trend toward monopoly." As a means to that end, it asks for authority to prevent one corporation from obtaining control over another by buying its stocks and assets, or by consolidations or mergers. While the present law is admittedly defective insofar as holding companies are concerned, and has been greatly weakened by adverse court decisions, these weaknesses could be removed without vesting in the commission the right to determine the permissible size of a business unit, regardless of whether it restrains or monopolizes trade.

The proposed changes in the law are patently based upon the assumption that the trend toward large-scale production should be checked as inimical to competition, and hence socially undesirable. Neither the premises nor the practices currently followed in regulating business enterprise under the NRA warrant such a conclusion. In some industries competition has proved to be wasteful as well as ineffective to give protection to the consumer against exploitation. In fact, the recovery act itself is an outstanding testimonial to the breakdown of competition over a wide field. The recovery legislation may not provide the best solution of the problems of control that have arisen, but it certainly indicates that the remedy does not lie in an attempt to turn the clock back.

If the Federal Trade Commission were given a mandate to check the process of industrial integration and combination by arbitrary decree, it might very well become a dangerous reactionary agency. Furthermore, it would probably find itself or in at cross purposes with other regulatory agencies. Large-scale production per se is neither inherently social nor antisocial, and even monopolies are not entirely bad. They may be—and for certain types of activity they are—the form of industrial organization best suited to the needs of the period, provided they are adequately regulated. It is not mere size, but the character of the policies adopted by large-scale enterprises that decides whether governmental intervention is justified.

In asking also for authority to prohibit unfair trade practices that merely "affect" interstate commerce, the commission is apparently desirous of strengthening the hand of the Administration in its attempts to regulate businesses heretofore regarded as intrastate in character. That such is its purpose seems clear from the statement that: "In many of its investigations the commission has found numerous unfair methods of competition and numerous deceptive acts and practices which, although done in intrastate commerce, seriously affect honest competitors engaged in interstate commerce."

It would be decidedly premature to arm the Trade Commission with new powers of the sort requested until we know the aim of our experiment in industrial self-government. Even if we should decide to arrest the evolutionary development that is responsible for the growth of large-scale businesses, it is highly doubtful whether the Federal Trade Commission should be left to control our future industrial destinies by exercising the powers for which it asks.

Striking At The Cause.

The advent of the New Year brought no relief from automobile accidents. Indeed the storm of Monday night and the cold weather since have multiplied the hazards of motoring in the District, with a consequent heavy accident toll. People who believe in omens will not find this one encouraging.

For several months the District has been expecting a break in the steadily mounting accident rate. In other words, improvements have been anticipated without any special effort to eliminate the underlying causes of this needless loss of human life. Now it is beginning to be apparent, even to the optimists, that restoration of Washington's previous safety record will be a major task.

The Commissioners have done well to tighten enforcement of the traffic law. As suggested by Ernest N. Smith, executive vice president of the American Automobile Association, their efforts ought to be concentrated upon habitually reckless drivers. More frequent revocation of licenses would help to bring death-dealing motorists to their senses. At the same time the need for more stringent traffic laws might well be reexamined.

In the latter field the so-called safety-responsibility measure sponsored by the A. A. A. comes immediately to the fore. For six years this bill has been ignored by Congress because the rate of traffic fatalities here has not appeared to be excessive. Now the picture has radically changed. Washington has taken its place among those cities with a particularly black record. The acute problem thus created calls for special attention in Congress.

The safety-responsibility law is not a guarantee against fatal accidents nor even reckless driving. But in those States where it has been adopted it has given authorities a most useful weapon against irresponsible drivers. Motorists who cause a serious accident, who are convicted of grave traffic offenses or fail to satisfy judgments growing out of automobile collisions, would be compelled to take out liability insurance or lose their right to drive in the District.

Massachusetts has discovered that compulsory insurance for all drivers tends to encourage carelessness, thus increasing accidents. At the other extreme, want of any statute of this sort leaves irresponsible motorists in a position to inflict death, injury or damage upon innocent persons with comparative impunity. The A. A. A. measure, which seeks to strike a happy medium between the two extremes, might well be enacted during the current session of Congress as the first legislative attack upon a problem that has become truly intolerable.

Fundamentally Similar.

It seems a far cry from the demand for immediate cash payment of the bonus to advocacy of the Townsend plan to bestow pensions of $200 per month upon persons who have reached the age of 60. The bonus payment would entail only a single outlay of about $2,000,000,000, whereas it is figured that the Townsend proposal would cost the Government approximately $24,000,000,000 annually, as a starter. Nevertheless, Commander Belgrano's arguments in favor of the bonus payment are fundamentally akin to those offered in support of the pension plan.

Advocates of each assume that business will benefit if the Government will only vote enough money, in the form of subsidies to a special class, to stimulate immediate buying. The economic and social advantages of deferred payment of the certificates were lost to sight long ago in the reiterated emphasis placed upon the value of cash payments as a recovery measure. Similarly, the Townsend plan is not designed to make reasonable provision for the aged, being urged primarily as a device for encouraging lavish spending.

"The foundation of good business is good credit," Commander Belgrano correctly observes, in attempting to answer the President's argument that previous bonus disbursements were used to repay debts and failed to stimulate business. Undoubtedly debt repayments discharged out of surplus income are of aid to business. But it is a very different matter when private debts are repaid through Government largesse, which merely shifts purchasing power and adds to public indebtedness. If one indorses Commander Belgrano's reasoning, it is only a step further to acceptance of the arguments of the Townsendites, who also ignore the effect of an outpouring of funds upon the credit of the Government. And that is the real foundation of good business.

In neither case is consideration given to the consequences of attempting to create purchasing power out of nothing. In the case of the Townsend plan, of course, all but the blind should be able to appreciate the absurdity of supposing that the country can be miraculously restored to prosperity by additions to money income voted by the Government for purposes of spending. The inflationary advances in prices of consumers' goods that would result would be catastrophic. And if attempts were made to finance the pensions by taxation, the burden would crush productive enterprises. Real wealth would not increase. It would decline.

While the effect of cash bonus payments would be mild by comparison, there is no denying the connection between all recovery proposals that rely upon subsidized spending to provide a quick and costless cure for depression. The widespread inability to distinguish between real wealth and the monetary evidences of wealth are at the root of the mental confusion that wins advocates for these specious schemes. If the material, as distinct from the pecuniary, aspects of economic existence were always kept in mind—if we merely understood that we can not successfully consume more than we produce—it would be impossible to deceive anybody with the thesis that such raids upon the Treasury can be justified in the name of recovery.

Senator Schall And His Canal Scheme.

(From the Des Moines Register.)

Senator Schall, of Minnesota, who can be counted on to be more extreme and more ridiculous in his criticisms of the Roosevelt Administration than anybody else, now proposes that we start at once to build the Nicaragua canal and draw workers for it from the United States on the basis of the States' population. He would have the men chosen from relief rolls by State chambers of commerce, so as to avoid politics.

Perhaps the crack at politics is to the good. That crack usually is, no matter which party is in power, and the present is certainly no exception.

But as for the canal scheme, it is exceedingly unwise because the whole world would take it as the signal for starting off the naval race with Japan. It would be definitely provocative.

And as for having chambers of commerce choose workers, that is the last thing the country's labor would consent to.

The gentleman from Minnesota should be more realistic.

The President.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Speaking of Presidents, we have never had in the White House any one to equal this great man, Franklin D. Roosevelt. He is really a genius and a hero. In a great battle he is leading us out of strife. I look upon him as a great engineer running the train of progress.

It took a genius to bring this country out of the terrible condition in which it found itself. His motive power is will, his arms are courage and zeal. Providence has laid upon him the task of doing noble things, as we will see as time goes on.

Greatness is always powerful and this is what we have in President Roosevelt.

President Abraham Lincoln's great aim was to save the Union, but President Roosevelt's is to save the human race from starvation in a land of plenty. I am sure he will go down in history with the great men whose monuments we now worship.

President Roosevelt has recognized in women their quality and worth by placing them in some of the most important places. This, too, shows the greatness of the man.

This is my daily prayer: God save the President of the United States—he will save God's country!

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a regular reader of The Washington Post and enjoy it very much—in fact, I never miss a day without reading The Post. I have noted in it several feature items written by Edward H. Lawson and I want to take this occasion to say to you that Mr. Lawson's work with your paper is appreciated by Washington's colored population.

A Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was a great pity that some writer other than Dr. Kirsopp Lake was not chosen to write the essay, "History of Christmas Is of Pagan Origin," which appeared in The Post on Christmas Day.

Dr. Lake intimated that he believes in the pagan inevitability of human affairs rather than in the Christian doctrine of free will and freedom of choice. He quotes a European scientist in support of this belief.

It is a great mystery to me why you selected an enemy of Christianity to write an essay on Christmas, birthday of the Christ Child who came into this world of His own free will that we might freely and voluntarily follow His example and imitate His teaching.

Nothing New?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The address of Dr. J. H. Breasted on the evening of December 28, before the Historical Association, meeting here, reveals the larger view which a man of profound study and wide observation brings to mankind. Without strut or pretense, this man who possesses both a knowledge of history and its eternal principles, places many of our public men in their true light.

Dr. Breasted knows as few men know, the oldness of "new deals," and the futility of trying to correct evils by legislative enactment without reference to human character. If our civilization is to proceed, it must proceed upon truth. We make no real progress by going on the supposition that our age or Nation or form of religion is responsible for everything good. There is scarcely a moral precept, or a religious impulse, or a formulated command which, as Dr. Breasted has so clearly demonstrated in both his books and in his rostrum addresses, that has not years ago found expression in some form.

An intelligent appraisement of any great movement for human betterment is correctly made when due credit is given to those who preceded the men who make claim to being "originals." Truly, we may say, "There is nothing new under the sun," not even this expression which is credited to Solomon.

Checking Up.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note that in The Post of December 31, under the column, "Strictly Speaking," it is claimed that "Czech" is pronounced like "check."

This is not correct. The combination "ch" in the word "Czech," as in all words of that language, has the same sound as it has in the German language (there being no exact English equivalent).

Incidentally, the combination "cz" in the word "Czech" is Polish and not that of the people designated by this name.

"Once A Democrat——"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to join "A Long Suffering Investor" in his recent complaint in The Post. I am an hereditary Democrat. All of my family have been Democrats and I am still a Carter Glass Democrat.

I was employed on a railroad for more than 52 years, with a record that could be equaled by few, but I was let off when I got old and afflicted and was given nothing.

I had saved my money and invested some in real estate, a good deal of which is now a liability; some in Government bonds, from which the income is practically wiped out, and some in public utility stock. If this is wiped out I see nothing but the poor house for me.

For A Way Out.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The only way out of the depression is to plant trees on the plains. Open our millions of acres of idle land for homesteading, build bungalows and give the settlers a push. Teach man how to find himself, not to be Government-fed.

Today let man go to work. Chop the red tape and let business take its place. Give him a home, schools, churches and factories and let him know that there is no such word as "I can't." If man wishes to live and grow he must go back to the land.

Einstein's Surrender To Infinity.

Prof. Einstein's admission in Pittsburgh the other day that the universe may, after all, be infinite is comparable to a hypothetical concession by President Roosevelt that recovery should precede reform. An important factor in Einstein's theory of relativity was the conception of space as finite, but unbounded. Since Einstein first announced the results of his calculations various modifications have been suggested by Hubble, Bohr, Lematire and others. The growing concept of a universe that is steadily expanding, as if the result of a vast, primordial explosion, now would appear to make necessary the thesis of limitless space.

There is no indication that Einstein's tentative surrender to infinity will work fundamental changes in his empirical mathematics. Even if his theory should in ages to come be thoroughly discredited he has performed an invaluable service in establishing new outposts on the frontiers of thought. Moreover, the humblest of men for many centuries have believed that they were part of an infinite plan, embarked upon an infinite journey in an infinite universe. Einstein, thus, is not alone.

If at last science seems to be catching up with the strong conviction that abides in the hearts of many men, it should be no shock to the scientists. The only reason for their surprise should be that it has taken them so long to prove what poets and philosophers have believed to be true.

Happy New Year, Impressionist!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How cleverly your Post Impressionist used the quotations from Johnson (Samuel) on the New Deal! I enjoy all this columnist writes, and I think The Post is to be congratulated on him.

Washington, Dec. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My sincere, if tardy, congratulations on The Post Impressionist's recent column about dolls, and especially on his paragraph about the rag doll. I am much obliged for that column.

It's always good to read about young folks playing with dolls, looking forward to the real live dolls which the stork will bring them in that time the child dreamers call some day. And this column was particularly refreshing in these times. For so many little girls have now forgotten their dolls as they watch mother and big sister getting ready to go to a gin party—a cigarette held between painted lips—practicing sophistication before the mirror to make sure that the feminine ensemble is up to date!

The Post Impressionist did a good job!

Post Office, Thursday.

DOES it pay to kick?

One of our learned editorial friends the other day raised this question for the sprightly columns to the left of our own. It seems, however, not to have arrived there. And we are glad of that, because his piece didn't answer the question.

He pointed out that large corporations were requesting criticisms from their patrons, and then heeding some of the complaints—yet he didn't specify what kind of complaints they were heeding. He hinted that the corporations themselves were kicking against the only thing against which a corporation ever kicks—obviously meaning the Government—yet he didn't tell us whether their kicks ever received any reward. He intimated that there was an Art of Kicking—and then he failed to furnish any instruction in it.

Why didn't he answer his question and give us some lessons? We know a man who has.

This man says that, only a few months ago, he got an unsatisfactory meal on a dining-car. He didn't wail to the waiter. He disgorged his wrath in a letter to the president of the railroad, whereafter he forgot about it.

But the railroad-president didn't. He wrote to the complainant, thanking him—and sent one of that army of leisured officials called vice-presidents to talk things over with our traveler, who tells us:

"An entire schedule has been altered, and fast trains stopped at certain stations, due to lone protests. Once they received a kick that their meals were too expensive . . . Said a traveling salesman, 'Why not install cafeterias on trains for folks who don't want to pay $1.65 for a luncheon?' They tried the scheme out, and it has been a great success."

It is from John R. Tunis that we get this information. He provides it in the Review of Reviews.

He says: "The president of a shoestore chain told me recently that his firm made not a cent of profit, on all odd sizes carried in stock . . . Why carry them?

"Because of kicks! A six-foot four used to come into the store and ask for a shoe to fit. When there was no such size in stock, he would go away grumbling. Now the concern keeps these sizes, expecting that a satisfied customer with an odd-size foot will tell his friends and family, who wear more normal shoes."

There is at least one telephone company that, not content with pacifying an individual kicker, has made a practice of dramatizing the more helpful complaints. They make them, with the proper answers for them, into little plays "worked out on a real stage with a cast of telephone-operators" or other 'phone-employes. And they are then presented to the employes at large, in order to instruct them in the customers' prejudices and in what to do—or not to do—about them:

Characters—Mrs. Budd and an Installation Man.

Scene I, As It Should Not Be Done—the Budd Living-Room.

Mrs. Budd tells the Installation Man where she wants the 'phone. He tells her it can't go there—without explaining why. She, going out, swallows her anger and audibly hopes that, anyhow, he won't litter the room more than is necessary. He completes his task—leaving shavings and bits of wire all over her pet rug. She returns and solemnly vows to have the 'phone discontinued.

Scene II, As It Should Be—same "set."

Where does she want the 'phone? There! It can't be put there—but the reasons are given, and given politely: Mrs. Budd immediately sees their sweet reasonableness. The Installation Man sweeps up the debris and inquires:

"Madam, where shall I put this?"

The curtain probably descends upon Mrs. Budd ordering an extension for the library.

Each of the thrilling plays—and there are lots of them—has had its origin in some subscriber's complaint. "The company figures that these little dramas of real life cost them about $50,000 a year. They also consider them worth every cent, to satisfy their customers."

It is on this sort of evidence that Mr. Tunis bases his concluding conclusion: "It pays to kick."

Well, we agree with the conclusion. But we don't think it follows from the evidence.

All those examples are constructive kicks—or the outcome of them. The kicks registered because they made or saved money for somebody, in the long run. They were not art-for-art's-sake kicks. They were merely utilitarian kicks.

We are for art in kicking. We believe that kicking should be its own reward. We like the kick that is delivered without just cause, without hope of reimbursement, and for the love of it.

There are kicks like that. There are people who regularly practice them. And the satisfaction such people get out of it all is finer than any sop handed the kicker by any corporation—far, far greater than any sum ever saved by the kicked.

Collective Bargaining Is Indorsed By Millis

Outgoing President Of American Economic Association Urges Balance Of "Pressure Groups."

THE economist finds a sufficiently stronge case for collective dealing in industry through unions, Prof. Harry A. Millis, chairman of the department of economics of the University of Chicago, said in his recent presidential address to the annual meeting of the American Economic Association at Chicago. This summary of his remarks, prepared by the alert department of public relations of the university, is of general interest because of the fundamental importance of the issue to industrial relations in this country.

Prof. Millis, who is a member of the National Labor Relations Board and whose background includes experience as trade board chairman and arbitrator in the men's clothing industry in Chicago, ten years as arbitrator for the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the Pressmen's Union under the international arbitration agreement, said that his conclusions were influenced by the realism deriving from that experience.

"The results achieved by unionism are not to be expected merely from codes or other governmental regulation," Prof. Millis said. "Frequently it is contended that code-making and enforcement render or should render organization of labor unnecessary. Experience has shown this to be untrue.

What a code contains largely depends upon whether labor is effectively organized and articulate. Code administration depends almost as much upon the same thing. Pressure group must be balanced by pressure group under democratic government.

• • • •

"Unionism," Dr. Millis told the meeting, "means a new government in industry. Any government is what that government does with its problems. Employers should accept the principle of collective bargaining in good faith. Labor organizations, while militant on occasion, must be cooperative in production."

Discussing the role of public policy, Dr. Millis said government should supply machinery for conciliation and arbitration "to smooth the way for joint dealing to the end that the unsocial powerful may be held in check and that reason may be permitted to prevail."

Collective bargaining theory has evolved in three stages, according to Dr. Millis' analysis. First, emphasizing the need of equality of bargaining power; second, the need for control due to market and competitive conditions; third, the need for progressively increasing wages to supply purchasing power. A critical examination of this theory "in an industrial world that is essentially changing and dynamic" constituted the major part of Dr. Millis' address.

• • • •

ALTHOUGH supporting in part the labor doctrine of wages, "the possibility of raising wages rather generally through collective bargaining, unless there is increased efficiency and less waste, is decidedly limited however extensive and powerful unionism becomes," Prof. Millis said.

"The level of wages and the welfare of the masses turn much more upon progress in production and upon the taxation and spending policies of the government than upon any such thing as the control of wages through law or through collective bargaining."

Dr. Millis criticized current beliefs in regard to high wages and purchasing power, finding, however, that they do contain "a large kernel of significant fact."

• • • •

THE Chicago economist expressed disagreement with the idea that consuming power may be increased during a depression by raising, as against lowering, wages.

"Insofar as this concerns recovery as against reconstruction, the position taken by organized labor must be regarded as a mistaken one when applied in private industry, which is motivated by prospect of profit." Wage reductions, on the other hand, have been entirely too much emphasized as a means of recovery.

"There is also a problem of heavy fixed charges due to unwarranted emphasis upon mortgage bonds in corporation finance. The bondholder is insured as against everyone else. Good policy rejects wage cuts until waste and other elements in costs have been removed or deflated."

Brown to Resume Work As Oil Group's Counsel

Resignation of Russell B. Brown as first secretary of the planning and coordination committee under the petroleum code to return as general counsel of the Independent Petroleum Association of America was announced yesterday.

Before he was drafted to serve on the planning and coordination committee, Mr. Brown had been associated for a considerable period with the independent oil group. For a brief period he was also compliance director of the committee.

50 Degrees Forecast With Sunshine Today

A bright sun and clear skies will send the mercury up to 50 degrees today, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. Throughout the day it will be fair and warmer, officials said.

Yesterday's low was 23 degrees at 6 a. m., with a high of 44 degrees established at 3 p. m. Steady sunlight melted New Year's Day snow, except far out in the suburbs and in shady areas.

Grocer's Wife Robbed By 2 Armed Bandits

Mrs. Jennie Horwitz faced a pair of pistols as she turned from the cash register after making change for two men who entered the grocery store of her husband, Isadore Horwitz, at 1346 B street northeast, about 5:30 p. m. yesterday.

"Stick 'em up," chorused the armed pair, one of whom was short, the other tall.

Mrs. Horwitz was alone in the store. She stuck them up. The men fled with $10.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Eide Norena, soprano, and Beveridge Webster, pianist, in joint recital Wednesday morning in the Mayflower Hotel ball room. Program: songs by Handel, Donaudy, Mozart, Faure, Liszt, Debussy, Schubert and Grieg; piano pieces by Mendelssohn, Chopin, Brahms, Weber, Debussy and Ravel.

Light in timbre and limited in color range, the voice of Eide Norena has plasticity and a silvery sheen which were displayed to admirable advantage in the floratura passages of Handel's "Care selve," Donaudy's "Spirate pur" and a Mozartian area from "Die Entfuerung aus dem Serail." Therein the tenuous delicacy of the vocal line exerted a singular charm, as of an almost disembodied tone moving in cool arabesques.

This ethereal quality was put to apt use also in the lyrics, which had been for the most part well chosen to emphasize that very virtue. The airy and weightless tone conformed delightfully to the mood of Faure's lovely "Clair de lune" and his "Recontre," fitted itself deftly to the "Quand je dors" of Liszt, and was wistfully appealing in Schubert's "Du bist die Ruh'" and "Wohin," and in the two Grieg selections, "Det forste Mote" and "Hytten."

But in the whimsical "Fantoches" of Debussy, the limitations of volume and color resulted in an ineffective reading. As long as the singer confines herself to unforced and smoothly flowing tone, the ear is pleased by its argentine clarity. Any excess of pressure on the vocal chords, however, particularly in sustained tones, betrays a latent tendency to hover on the edge of the pitch, and the high notes are almost invariably covered.

Of Beveridge Webster one has heard many eulogistic reports since his return to his native land this season. Undoubtedly, this young American has a sterling pianistic talent; that much was obvious in its partial disclosure on this occasion, but its full potentialities were left in abeyance by the character of his selections.

Virtuosity Revealed.

The salon brilliance of Mendelssohn's Rondo Capriccioso, the fourth Etude of Chopin, the Weber Rondo, Debussy's Poissons d'Or and Ravel's Alborada del Grazioso revealed Mr. Webster's technical skill and surety, the crispness of his passage work, and the dexterous speed of which he is capable. On the basis of these pieces alone, one would adjudge him a detached and accurate player with the physical equipment, but not the temperament, of a virtuoso.

Yet in his readings of the Berceuse and the B flat minor Scherzo of Chopin and an Intermezzo by Brahms there were evidences of interpretative impulse. Here he seemed more concerned with tonal quality and with the poesy that underlies mere notes. These glimpses of an intuitive musicianship were tantalizing rather than satisfactory, for one felt that a great deal of eloquence was being restrained.

While his playing yesterday was predominantly objective and scintillant, stressing his notable ability as a technician, one surmises the presence in him of strong subjective potentialities. He can be lyrically persuasive when he wishes, and his control of dynamics includes a fine singing tone which he uses too sparingly and without an exact coordination of pedaling. There is in his playing so much reward for the listener that one would like to hear him in a program which would reveal more of the individuality behind the brilliant executant.

Sales Tax Boost Asked.

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 2 (AP).—Gov. Guy B. Park asked the Missouri Legislature, which convened today, to double the one-half per cent State sales tax and recommend drastic changes in the State liquor laws. Repeal of the "purely statutory distinction" between beers of different alcoholic content was urged.

Him Or His Money?

IT must be utterly impossible to the layman these days to understand the paradox of a President's having the country eating out of his hands and yet being unable, it is said, to stop the bonus. No man ever had greater influence, we are told, and this writer would be the last to deny it. No man ever more strongly held the confidence of the masses.

BARGERON.

Yet he can not head off the bonus and he says we haven't got the money to pay it with.

For the past several days virtually every arriving train has brought Congressmen and Senators beating their breasts in emphasis of their great affection for him. The greatest man who ever lived, they say. Their cup of friendliness toward him overflows. There is no limit to their praise or their avowals of what they would do for him—except on the bonus.

Manifestly, there is something wrong somewhere. Mr. Roosevelt must wonder just what sort of an affection it is that is held for him.

• • • •

It is a picture impossible to accept. Of course, it may be explained that the gentlemen of the legislative branch are beyond the reasoning stage, that they have come here all fired for the bonus and because of their political composition see no inconsistency in their professed great love for the President and their refusal to go along with him in opposition to the bonus. This may be because of the seeming lack of firmness with which he has dealt with the matter. It may easily be that most of them consider it will be perfectly all right and no hard feelings left for them to pass the bonus, let him veto it and then pass it over his veto.

This has been the usual political play on these veterans' matters. The politics has been to put the President out as a big, strong man who would not stand for such childish stuff, while the members of the legislative branch posed as friends of the veterans.

• • • •

But that won't work this time. It can't be claimed that Mr. Roosevelt is a great leader, it would seem, unless he checks the bonus fire. At least, it will be difficult for us to understand what constitutes leadership.

The first step would appear to be for Mr. Roosevelt to let it become unmistakably known that he will consider it a distinctly unfriendly act if the bonus is passed over his veto, and then if the gentlemen are still hell-bent for it, to take the matter up with the country.

It is inconceivable that with the hold he has on the country he could not go on the radio and arouse the people in his behalf, to point out that the great majority of the gentlemen of the legislative branch were elected on their fervent promises to support him.

"I need support now, my friends, as I have not needed it before and they are failing me," he could say.

• • • •

It is a good bet that they would respond. After all, one of the things that set him off to such a good start was his boldness in cutting the veterans' allowances. That economy bill—it set him up as a man of strength. He closed the banks and reduced the veterans' allowances! A man of courage at last, the country exclaimed. Admittedly, it was a funny psychology, but nevertheless it worked.

Of course, it might not work this time at all. Maybe the people would ignore him and instead of rallying to his support, would deluge their Congressmen with telegrams of encouragement.

But wouldn't it be best for Mr. Roosevelt to learn this, to learn just what sort of affection it is that's professed for him.

Like the boy who takes the girl to the theater every night, Mr. Roosevelt should find out now whether the people really love him or whether it's his money they love.

No End Of Books

By Theodore Hall

"Delay in the Sun" Narrates the Sun-Change in English Travelers Stuck in Spain.

"THIS sirocco! It makes me feel so funny," said Miss Wilberforce, that astonishing but amiable lady drunk in "South Wind."

Less bizarre, but equally affected by an alien climate, are the nine English travelers whom Anthony Thorne's sense of dramatics (plus a strike of the Spanish bus-drivers) set down together in the quiet little town of Querinda. "Delay in the Sun" (Doubleday Doran, $2.50) shows them before and after their dose of sunshine, idleness, and the flavors and colors of Spain. They are changed people.

Querinda had no train service, a mistaken clock, a church with a useless chimney, informal bullfights (in which the bull often escaped and upset a lemonade stand), and a good long siesta of seven or eight hours.

English tourists, endowed with that precious sense that they must get somewhere and do something or their stock would degenerate, found it slow. Only Julian Selver, 46-year-old dilettante author of unplayed dramas and unpublished poems, had words for the true quality of the place.

"This whole town," he said, "seems to be the perfection of futility. The sort of futility which, though it is the outcome of genius, can not be attained without painstaking attention to detail. It is a futility typical of Spain; the Russians could never have achieved it. Their futility was never so competent. It had not this infuriating benignity, this thwarting, damnable good humor. Querinda is a masterpiece."

• • • •

Now "Delay in the Sun" is of the "Grand Hotel" tradition—it puts its few selected characters into a milieu, stirs them around together, produces its action within those limits. But Miss Baum never found so much joy in her hotel as Mr. Thorne finds in his Spanish scene. Lovingly, persuasively, he pictures market-place and tavern, inn keeper and rose-crowned wench, and all the smell and the feel of this sun-drenched stillness, so that the reader finds it no arbitrary decision of Mr. Thorne's that what's-his-name does such-and-such.

For spoiled, Greek-godly Leighton can not keep telling his anxious wife that he loves her, and they drift apart. Mrs. Tassall, the widow, finds that she and the troubled Jewish salesman, Mr. Grunbaum, have more in common than she had supposed. The two young girls, warmed out of British reserve, draw closer and closer to each other. Miss Mason, thin arid spinster, finds that she can not keep up a decade and a half of secretarial devotion to her domineering boss. John, Julian Selver's 20-year-old son, though he (John) does not know it, falls in love with a local lass and chooses to stay, after the bus comes again, with his paintbrush. Querinda put an "unexpected semicolon" in the middle of the sentence of each of them, and the sentence wasn't the same again.

Mr. Thorne does an extraordinarily good job with his mixture of characters, his enticing scene. He has intelligence and humor and honest enthusiasm, and his novel, his second, should please readers as much as it has the judges of the Literary Guild, who have made it their January choice.

Mr. Thorne is of mixed English, Irish and French blood. Not long out of Oxford—where the blurb says he had the curious distinction of throwing all eight of his crew into the water because he paused to stare at a kingfisher—he now writes advertising copy in London. Add novel-writing and a gusto for traveling as activities ("Go alone," he says, "and go cheaply; avoid luxury liners, large hotels, kind friends, and phrase books.") Spain is his favorite country, and all the pleasure he found there he gives to the reader of "Delay in the Sun."

Marginalia.

James Hilton, the English novelist, came into his own in 1934, with his "Good-By, Mr. Chips," (106,000 sales) leading the best sellers in the United States during the holiday season.

Born in 1900, Hilton wrote his first novel at the age of 17, although it was not published until two years later. He has been a steady producer of novels since 1920, but it remained for his little masterpiece about an English schoolmaster, written primarily for a single issue of The Atlantic, to win him fame. "Mr. Chips" has been sold to M-G-M for film production.

U. S. Acts to Halt Whisky Shipments Into Dry States

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 2 (AP).—The Federal Government moved today to halt shipment of liquor from wet States into dry ones.

Alcohol tax unit investigators seized part of a carload of liquor consigned to an operator of a warehouse here at the request of Commander John D. Pennington, supervisor of the unit at Newark, N. J., the point of origin.

The commander said the seizure was requested because of the Federal law forbidding shipment of intoxicants from a "wet" State to a "dry" one.

Speakeasies and open bars have been operating in several cities of the State in defiance of Georgia's rigid dry laws.

R. E. Tuttle, supervisor of the Federal alcohol tax unit in Atlanta, from whose office the investigators who made the seizure came, said the shipment was consigned to the Green Beverage Co. here. Only a part of the shipments were seized, he added, because the car, which reached here several days ago, had been unloaded.

Colon, Panama, Jan. 2 (AP).—Lieut. Cornelius W. Cousland, United States Air Corps, of Pinas Altas, N. Mex., was decorated with the Distinguished Flying Cross today before a review of all troops of the Atlantic sector at France Field.

Twenty-one airplanes flew overhead in an aerial review as Gen. Harold B. Fiske, department commander, pinned the cross on Cousland's tunic. The lieutenant received the award for his coolheadedness and expert piloting when, last May, a transport ship he was flying went into a tailspin over Gatun Lake. Cousland managed to bring the ship to a safe landing.

English Oddities

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

JUST as some people love their most intimate friends not only for their virtue, but for their faults, so one of the reasons why I love the English language is for its irregularities, inconsistencies and peculiarities. I would not have it reformed for anything.

An illustration of some of its most delightful whimsicalities is in the following poem, which was originally published in the Pathfinder, and I would give the author's name if I knew it.

If a female duke is a duchess,
Would a female spook be a spuchess?
If a male goose is a gander,
Then would a male moose be a mander?
If the plural of child is children,
Would the plural of wild be wildren?
If a number of cows are cattle,
Would a number of bows be battle?
If a man who makes plays is a playwright,
Would a man who makes hay be a haywright?
If a person who fails is a failure,
Would a person who quails be a quailure?
If the apple you bite is bitten?
Would the battle you fight be fitten?
If a young cat is a kitten,
Then would a young rat be a ritten?
If a person who spends is a spendthrift,
Would a person who lends be a lendthrift?
If drinking too much makes a drunkard,
Would thinking too much make a thunkard?
But why pile on the confusion?
Still I'd like to ask in conclusion:
If a chap from New York's a New Yorker,
Would a fellow from Cork be a corker?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Resolutions I Forgot to Make.

Not to ask by word or letter,
"Do you think conditions better?"—
Not to talk with manner knowing
On the question where we're going—
To attack our leaders never—
(Oh, well, make it hardly ever!)

Not to hoard away each penny—
(That's a cinch; I haven't any)—
Not to say when short of bliss,
"Washington's to blame for this!"—
Not to join the nitwits raving
That the country's beyond saving.

Not to try to memorize
All those kinds of scotch and ryes—
Not to chirp with bulging eyeballs,
"Well, it's good enough for highballs"—
Not to play a hand of poker
With the deuce wild—and the joker!

Not to make the bid too steep
Playing bridge when half asleep—
Not to say so very lightly
"Seven spades!" . . . and almost nightly!—
Not to bid on clubs and hearts when
All I have's the seven, nine, ten!

Not to swing at balls so wildly,
And to take my golf game mildly—
Not to break my cleek or putter
And to guard the way I mutter—
Not to spend the summer mainly Demonstrating I'm ungainly.

Not to let my reason leave me
When more taxes come to grieve me—
Not to curse the oafs that pass 'em—
Not to wish some one would gas 'em—
Not to squirm and strive to shake 'em;
Boy, I've got to learn to take 'em!

Not to drive my bus by ear,
Running it by horn all year,
Tooting, tooting all the day,
Driving peace so far away,
Acting like a selfish chump,
Making everybody jump!

Not to leave my radio
On all night when out I go—
Not to lose my temper at
Programs awful, programs flat—
And to try to be forgiving—
All those guys must make a living!

Not to blame on Franklin D.
All that bothers you and me—
Not to squawk all night and day
Of the codes and NRA—
Not to say with face so glum,
"And the worst is yet to come!"

• • • •

These are resolutions swell;
Would that you would never break 'em!
I could leap and dance and yell
Since I quite forgot to make 'em!

You've Probably Heard Him.

A penguin was heard over the radio a few days ago. Or maybe it was just another announcer.

The editor of this department was playing golf at a winter resort the other day. More than mildly exasperated by his terrible game, he paused and inquired of the colorod caddy, "What a. . I doing? Can you tell?"

Some people are calling it the New Dole.

A man just named to head the street cleaning department in New York began as a street cleaner. He always had the feeling he would clean up in time.

Dairy Authorities Will Meet Today

Nice's Committee to Hold First Session.

Baltimore, Jan. 2 (AP).—Maryland and District of Columbia dairy authorities will attend the first meeting tomorrow of the special committee appointed by Governor-elect Harry W. Nice to study the desirability of creating a State milk control authority.

D. G. Harry, of Harford County, is chairman of the committee. He is a director and former president of the Maryland State Dairyman's Association.

Dr. Thomas B. Symons, of the State agricultural service, and I. W. Heaps, founder and secretary of the State Dairymen's Association, will be heard.

King Gets New Year Calls.

Rome, Jan. 2 (AP).—King Victor Emanuel received New Year's calls today from all the foreign diplomats stationed in Rome. The United States was represented by Alexander Kirk, of Chicago, charge d'affaires of the embassy in the absence of Ambassador Breckinridge Long.

New Deal Faces Test On Gold Clause Case

Vital Issues Of "Repudiation" And Dollar Costs Come Before Supreme Court.

By Elliott Thurston.

THE so-called gold clause cases are set down for hearing before the United States Supreme Court next Tuesday. These are the most important New Deal cases likely to come before the court. Two major issues are raised. The first is whether "repudiation" by Congress of the promises to pay in gold as contained in $100,000,000,000 of Federal, State and private securities is legal. The second is whether, if it is legal, the promises to pay may be discharged at their face amount in dollars.

The second point raises the question of how many dollars shall be paid instead of the gold. Shall the number of dollars be computed at the old statutory price of gold, $20.67 an ounce, or at the new price of $35 an ounce?

In an impressive brief, just filed, Attorney General Cummings, who will argue the cases for the Government, contends, as to the first issue, that there can be no doubt of the right of Congress to do away with the gold clauses in the exercise of its constitutional power to "coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin . . ." This view has been sustained in all of the lower courts. The argument, summed up, is that the gold clause obstructed Congress in the exercise of its recognized powers to assure the parity and legal-tender qualities of all forms of money, to protect currency reserves, to borrow for emergency and other needs and to safeguard foreign trade.

For the layman the facts rather than the law are interesting. The Attorney General's brief is an economic as well as a legal document. It gives graphs, charts and statistics culled from economics, along with the lore of the lawyer. It shows, not merely that gold clauses were "peculiarly American," that there was only $4,000,000,000 of gold in the country to redeem $100,000,000,000 of promises to pay in gold, but that the whole economy of the Nation is always in peril when everybody can get gold and there is not nearly enough to go around. Gold hoarders who are lucky enough to get into the redemption line early are the only ones who could get their gold. All the rest of the holders of promises to pay in gold would go empty-handed.

THE brief shows that $476,000,000 of gold was drawn out for hoarding or flight from the country early in 1933. The Attorney General notes that the important feature was the rate at which this gold was hoarded rather than the volume hoarded before the Government intervened to stop all withdrawals. One chart shows how the gold clause added to the debt burden. Thus, when the national income was over 80 billions, as it was in 1929, 9.2 per cent of it went for debt charges. When the national income fell to less than 40 billions in 1932, the debt charges remained about the same, so that 21.1 per cent of the total income was required to pay the charges. The effect of the gold clause, according to the chart, was to increase this debt burden to 27.8 per cent of the national income.

These and other computations in the brief are not necessarily new, but it is unusual to find such a combination of economics and law. The Attorney General argues not merely that the Government must have sovereignty over its currency, that public policy overrides private contractual promises, but that in the end the courts must be concerned with the reasonable exercise of such sovereign power rather than with the wisdom of it.

"We have not lost sight of the contention of respondents," says the brief, "that Congress acted improvidently, that property rights can not be maintained or prosperity restored upon a policy of repudiation and that the measure adopted is economically unsound • • • the • • • answer, however, is that this court will not narrow the discretion of the Congress to one view or the other, so long as the means employed is not clearly arbitrary or capricious." The court's dictum in Juilliard vs. Greenman is cited that whether a given expedient is wise "is a political question, to be determined by Congress, when the question of exigency arises, and not a judicial question, to be afterward passed upon by the courts • • • "

• • • •

TO THE lay mind, the Attorney General's argument on the second issue is especially interesting. He holds, in effect, as this layman reads his brief, that, being unable to get gold to redeem the promise, the maker of the promise may pay the same number of dollars that the holder of the promise would have received had he in fact received and converted gold. Thus, he holds that the old not the new rate should be paid—$20.67 per ounce instead of $35—and that claimants of more than the old rate "are seeking a windfall—not indemnity for loss."

Assuming that the validity of the gold clause abrogation is upheld, it becomes of great importance to have it decided finally whether the debtor has to pay the old or the new price equivalent of gold. Manifestly if more than the old dollar face value of the promise must be paid it would add enormously to the cost of redemption.

The Attorney General turns the much-cited decision of the British House of Lords to his side by arguing that it is not inconsistent with his own reasoning. In that case it was decided that bondholders were entitled to an amount of currency equivalent to the current price of gold. However, the Attorney General emphasizes that when those bonds were issued there was no gold coinage, and the promise made to pay in gold was an effort to guarantee whatever equivalent in currency should later prevail. That, he contends, is quite different from the purpose and meaning of our gold clauses.

Not only are the gold clause cases of utmost importance in determining how many dollars must be paid in lieu of gold, but if the gold clause abrogation should be held invalid, the whole structure of the New Deal's monetary policy—devaluation, the gold price, the Treasury's $2,800,000,000 "profit" and stabilization fund created out of the profit—would come tumbling down. It would be impossible to calculate the results—the effects upon the dollar and the entire price level. Hence, these cases are easily the most crucial New Deal tests to come before the court of last resort.

Ten Jurymen Selected as State and Defense Speed Trial.

pear at opening of court. It was considered highly improbable that it would be necessary to go beyond the panel to fill the jury box with only three places vacant.

The questions the State asked were the stock questions generally asked—whether the veniremen had any preconceived notions of the innocence or guilt of the defendant, whether he was opposed on religious grounds or conscience grounds to capital punishment, whether he had expressed opinions, discussed the case or felt that he could give an unbiased verdict.

The defense was similarly brief in its interrogation and followed with the same trend of questioning.

Hauck and Fisher knew the type of persons they were questioning—country people, for the most part, of old American stock, many of them elderly, many of them parents. For the benefit of the chief counsel on each side, Edward J. Reilly, of New York, for the defense, and Attorney General David T. Wilentz for the State, there were typewritten lists of the names, each carrying biographical data on the talesmen.

Few Interruptions.

The interruptions to the proceedings today were few. Once in the afternoon Justice Trenchard ordered a five-minute recess while the courtroom, overheated since morning, was aired. Another time there was a point of law that needed clarifying.

For the most part the parade of the veniremen moved steadily on, the court clerk intoned the oath, the attorneys repeated their questions anew, Justice Trenchard, black-robed, paternal in appearance, gazed benignly down at the two sets of lawyers, one preparing to fight for Hauptmann's life, the other determined to convince the court and jury he is the man who stole the golden-haired baby on the night of March 1, 1932.

Wilentz sat at the side of the prosecution table, dark-haired and dapper, showing no nervousness, though this is his first big court case and his first capital case.

Once when Fisher framed a question, seeking to learn if the presence of State troopers guarding Hauptmann would create prejudice in the mind of the prospective juror, Wilentz jumped to his feet with an objection. He was sustained.

"There appears no justification for that question," Justice Trenchard remarked.

Air of Good Nature.

About all the proceedings there was an air of good nature which belied the battle that will get under way with the selection of the last juror. Justice Trenchard, regarded as a strict disciplinarian in court, now and then uttered a comment which sent a titter running through the room.

A man, called for jury duty, offered a letter from a physician stating his wife recently had suffered a stroke and was in imminent danger of collapsing again and dying. She ought not to be left alone, the doctor wrote.

"That seems to be a good reason for not leaving her alone," Justice Trenchard remarked.

An unusually large number of talesmen were excused for similar reasons, both sides agreeing it was better not to deprive those at home of necessary care.

The ten selected all are small-town or country people of moderate station. Three of the men are fathers of grown children; one of the women has a 7-year-old son.

Four were chosen at the morning session; the others during the afternoon sitting, which lasted less than three hours.

The speed with which they were chosen astonished those who had believed the task would require at least a week.

Handcuffs Eschewed.

Hauptmann, by court order, was not handcuffed at any time. Deputy Sheriff Hovey Low, his chief guard on the walk from the county jail to the adjoining courthouse, carried handcuffs in his pocket, but did not use them.

Low said afterward that Hauptmann was silent throughout the day. He asked no questions, accepting everything that happened with the same calm that has characterized him since his arrest.

At the noon recess, however, he bolted out of his chair and strode rapidly toward the door leading to the jail, where lunch of fried potatoes, soup and onions awaited him. His guards were hard put to keep up with him.

Sheriff John Hughes Curtiss, chubby and genial, called the names of those on the jury list. He paid no particular attention to Hauptmann, whose entrance at the start of the trial sent a flutter through the jammed courtroom.

Col. Lindbergh arrived within a minute or two after Hauptmann. He strode quickly past the defense counsel table, did not look at the defendant and settled at once in his chair.

Mrs. Lindbergh was not in the courtroom.

U. S. Given British Gun Captured at Princeton

On the eve of the 158th anniversary of the Battle of Princeton, the National Park Service yesterday announced it has accepted from the New York City parks department a brass cannon captured from the British in that engagement.

Bearing the inscription, "Taken at Princeton, 3 January, 1777," the relic will be displayed in Morristown National Historical Park (New Jersey). It is one of two brass field pieces which were included in the artillery captured by the Continentals under Col. Daniel Hitchcock.

Take the Witness: 'He Never Heard Tell' of Lindbergh Case

The Colonel and Hauptmann and Courtroom Roar at Admission of Farmer Borowiec—and Judge Excuses Him.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 2 (AP).—The man who never heard of the famous Lindbergh kidnaping case, the man who never heard of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, came to town today, arrayed in his Sunday best and told the court and the world about it.

Bushy-haired, perfectly natural and completely at ease, Frank Borowiec, a farmer from "over to" Readington, took his solemn oath as one of the jury panel drawn for the Hauptmann murder trial, then calmly announced he never had heard of the Lindbergh case, never had heard of a man named Hauptmann.

The packed, incredulous courtroom tittered. Legal eyebrows arched. Even Col. Charles A. Lindbergh smiled broadly and Hauptmann—the impassive, emotionless—broke into a broad grin.

Stoicism Vanishes.

Hauptmann had sat there for hours between his burly uniformed State police guards, his expression immobile, his gaze fixed. But when the forthright Borowiec was being examined as a prospective juror, the Hauptmann stoicism vanished.

"Now, did you know what the Hauptmann case was?" the Readington farmer was asked.

"No," popped the prompt answer.

"You did not know there was such a case, did you?"

"No," quoth Farmer Borowiec.

Hauptmann's face twitched as he tried hard to suppress a grin from spreading over his sharp features.

"You never heard the name Hauptmann until you got this (jury service) card?" Defense Attorney C. Lloyd Fisher pursued.

"No."

Fisher fixed the farmer with his eyes, and demanded:

"You never heard tell of the Lindbergh case until you got this card?"

Farmer Borowiec hesitated not a second.

Courtroom Roars.

Hauptmann broke into a broad ear-to-ear grin, raising his hand to cover his face and shield his amusement. Counsel on both sides smiled, and the spectators roared despite a court injunction against such merriment.

Fisher moved that Barowiec be dismissed for "lack of intelligence." On motion of Attorney General David T. Wilentz the statement was withdrawn. Fisher expressed the opinion the court should be skeptical about the juror's responses.

Fisher returned to his questioning, and finally had Borowiec conceding that maybe "once in a while" he had heard of the Lindbergh case or Hauptmann. "We hear some time on the radio," he acknowledged.

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard took a hand in the interrogation. Like a patient pedagogue with a backward pupil, he quizzed the man and finally gave up.

"You may be excused," the justice said.

Long Illness Fatal To W.F. Bergmann

William F. Bergmann, 44, long prominent in Washington business circles, died early yesterday at his residence, 1343 Ingraham street, after a lingering illness.

Mr. Bergmann was owner of the cleaning and laundry business bearing his name, and of the Bergmann laundry and dry cleaning firm in Rosslyn, Va. He was born in Washington, August 10, 1890, and resided in the Brightwood section all his life. He had been ill for the past seven years.

Surviving Mr. Bergmann are his wife, Mrs. Lenora Payne Bergmann, and two sons, Harry P. and William F. He also leaves his father, five sisters and four brothers.

Funeral services will be held today at the residence at 2 p. m., with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

2 Jailed in Luray As Mail Robbers

Youths Are Accused of Robbing Postoffice.

Luray, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Kirby Weaver, 20, and Clarence Lang, 19, have been lodged in the Luray Jail, charged with robbing the Beahm postoffice in this county three weeks ago.

Evidence against Weaver and Lang was unearthed by postal officials. They were found at their homes at the head of Jewell Hollow and the Morning Star section of this county.

Both Weaver and Lang deny any connection with the robbery. Weaver said that when the Beahm postoffice was robbed he was in Rappahannock County and Lang said he was in Warren County.

43,000 Family Units on Relief In Free State

80,000 Children on Rolls, Sessions of Social Institute Hear.

More than 43,000 families, including 80,000 children, are on relief rolls in Maryland, it was announced yesterday at the Institute of Social Workers and Home Demonstration Agents, in session at the University of Maryland.

Miss Anita J. Faatz, supervisor of social welfare work in Baltimore, who made the announcement, declared that social workers and those engaged in rehabilitation work are spending a great deal of time teaching stricken families and individuals how they can regain their places in a rapidly-changing economic world.

Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the university, welcoming the group to the campus, praised the type of individuals carrying on social work in the State. He said the university's board of regents had recently authorized the establishment of a course in social work.

Paul Maris, director of field service for the United States Rehabilitation Development, declared that "public welfare will be accomplished as a result of a slow educational process. A fine start has been made in that direction."

Other speakers on the morning's program included Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the university's Extension Service, and L. D. Kelsie and L. Nelson, of the Rehabilitation Development.

The group was divided in the afternoon. The social workers were addressed by Miss Helen Shelby, Miss Florence Mason and Miss Margaret McPheeters, of the Extension Service, and Miss Theodora Peck, of Baltimore.

The home demonstration agents were addressed by Miss Venia M. Kellar, State home demonstration agent, and Mrs. Christine F. Adams, of Baltimore. A joint meeting of the two groups was later addressed by A. H. Snyder, editor of the Extension Service.

The meetings will continue through Saturday.

Florid be-spectacled Edward Reilly, chief of the defense counsel, sat quietly while his associate, Lloyd Fisher, questioned the veniremen. Across, svelt, dark Attorney General David T. Wilentz made the queries. Lindbergh looked intently at each venireman.

Newspapermen formed a double line in front of the rail, another down one side of the courtroom and filled the balcony. They worked at new plank tables, long and narrow, like the lunch tables in parks.

Reich Press Ignores Trial of Hauptmann

Berlin, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, a German, at Flemington, N. J., for the Lindbergh baby murder was ignored by most German newspapers today.

Brief dispatches were printed chiefly on inside pages. The foreign office said the government was not interested, and that the German consul had been given no instructions to watch the case.

Past Masters Pick Donaldson

Made Head of Southern Maryland Unit at Mt. Rainier Session.

L. C. Donaldson, past master of Laurel Wreath Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Laurel Md., was elected president of the Past Masters Association of Southern Maryland at a recent meeting held in Mount Rainier.

William A. Duvall, recently elected most worthy grand patron of the General Grand Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, was elected first vice president. Mr. Duvall is a past master of Birmingham Lodge in Beltsville.

Other officers named included E. H. Burroughs, past master of Centennial Lodge of Marlboro, second vice president; Joseph S. Haas, of Mount Rainier, who is a past master of Mount Hermon Lodge of Hyattsville, was elected secretary to succeed the late Dr. S. M. McMillan, who held the post for the past 12 years. Mr. Haas is a past junior grand warden of the Grand Lodge of Maryland. William A. Duvall was reelected treasurer, a post he has held for many years.

The meeting, which was called by the retiring president, L. B. Gordon, of Mount Rainier, was attended by 49 past masters. Mr. Gordon is a past master of both Mount Hermon and West Gate Lodges in Hyattsville and Mount Rainier. After the meeting the annual banquet was held, being served by the members of Adah Chapter, No. 25, O. E. S., in the Star Hall at Mount Rainier.

Cupid's Aim Improves In Montgomery in 1934

Cupid roped some 1,305 couples in Montgomery County, Md., in the past year, Clayton K. Watkins, clerk of the circuit court at Rockville, announced yesterday. The number was not a record for the county, but was larger than for the past several years.

The licenses were issued as follows: 577, District of Columbia residents; 340, Virginia residents; 212 Mongomery Countians and 176 couples from other sections of the country.

Bathing Over, Girdle Loosed On Monument

Reconditioning Enhances Interest in Obelisk, Officials Reveal.

Signifying the official end of a long period of public bathing and remodeling, a steel worker removed the first bolt from the 555-foot scaffolding of the Washington Monument at 10 a. m. yesterday and the job of uncrating the giant obelisk was begun.

National Park Service officials estimated that three weeks will be required to finish the task of dismantling the approximately 50,000 pieces of steel tubing weighing 600 tons.

At the same time service authorities released a few figures showing that it takes a bath and a reconditioning to attract public interest in a monument.

Since the beginning of the scaffold's erection, August 20, about 125,000 tourists have taken the elevator to the shaft's top; thousands more have viewed the cleaning process from the ground; five news reels were made of the work; two radio programs were broadcast and hundreds of newspaper photographs were taken and "feature" stories have been turned out by the yard.

For erection, maintenance and demolition of the scaffolding $69,000 was spent of a PWA allotment, while the actual repair work cost less than a third as much, or between $16,000 and $18,000. The job won't have to be done again for 50 years.

First Lady Chosen To Christen Vessel

Mrs. Roosevelt to Name Aircraft Carrier.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will serve as sponsor and will christen the naval aircraft carrier Enterprise, it was announced yesterday at the Navy Department by Secretary Swanson.

At the same time it was stated that the President had invited Mrs. Claude Swanson, wife of the Secretary, to christen the Yorktown, another new carrier.

Both the Enterprise and the Yorktown are under construction by the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., Newport News, Va. The Enterprise is scheduled for launching in January, 1936, while the Yorktown will leave the ways in September of this year.

Both vessels are of 20,000 tons displacement. The keel of the Enterprise was laid in July, 1934. She is due to be completed early in 1937. The Yorktown was laid down in May, 1934, and is expected to be ready for service in October, 1936.

Black to Offer Bill for 30-Hour Industry Week of a $200 fine, or imprisonment for three months or both, for violations.

Last year's Black bill passed the Senate, 53 to 30, but was killed when the House sought to amend it to provide a virtual embargo on foreign products.

Senator Black said he had not conferred with President Roosevelt, and that the bill was not an Administration measure. The President is known to oppose any act imposing a rigid standard of employment on industry.

"Private business has not been able, and is not now able, to give jobs to the millions who need them, on the past or existing hours of labor," said the Senator, in an explanation of the bill.

The new Black plan embodies the controversial majority representation plan, which industry opposes bitterly.

A provision stipulates that no article or commodity shall be shipped, transported or delivered in foreign or interstate commerce which was produced or manufactured in plants where workers toiled longer than 30 hours per week.

"Business can stand anything that gives them purchasers with money," the Senator said, in stating that national welfare and recovery depend on increased purchasing power.

Other bills prepared for immediate congressional attention include an attempt by Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, to reintroduce his act bringing commodity exchanges under Federal regulation; a bill by Representative Clarence J. McLeod (Michigan), Republican, which would divorce the post office from politics with postmasterships and all other post office jobs under the Civil Service; a resolution by Chairman Carl Vinson, of the Naval Affairs Committee, creating a commission to investigate the building of a Nicaraguan canal, and a bill by Representative Walter Pierce, of Oregon, permitting the dissemination of birth-control information through licensed medical circles.

Other bills included the measures prepared by Senators Wagner (Democrat), of New York, and Duffy (Democrat), of Wisconsin, which would provide another $1,000,000,000 to refinance homes. Wagner also was preparing to reintroduce in revised form his bill outlawing company unions.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, was ready to introduce a bill restoring the 5 per cent pay slash of Government workers as of January 1, in contrast to the Administration's plan to restore the cuts on July 1.

U. S. Food Shortage Predicted by Reno

Wallace Is Assailed by Farm Holiday Leader.

Milo Reno, farm holiday leader, yesterday predicted there will be a shortage of food for Americans by the end of February.

He sharply criticized Secretary Wallace and asserted he was "trying to become agricultural dictator of the country," according to the Associated Press.

Reno, interviewed here en route to New York, where he will speak Saturday before the Young Men's Republican Club, said a spirit of mob violence is growing in the Middle West because of the live-stock feed shortage, and forecast greater difficulties later from an actual shortage of food for human beings.

"The Government will have to take care of people," Reno said, "if they're going to prevent the worst situation you've ever seen, and I don't know where the Government can get enough."

15 MILLION CITIZENS SPEAK

GENTLEMEN OF THE 74th CONGRESS:

THE LARGEST AND GREATEST COMBINED VOTERS' GROUP OF ITS KIND IN AMERICA'S POLITICAL HISTORY RESPECTFULLY SUBMITS TO YOU THE FOLLOWING MAIN ITEMS OF LEGISLATION EARNESTLY DESIRED:

(1) OLD AGE PENSIONS. We ask, first of all, a Nation-wide and impartial system of Old Age Pensions by the United States Government, financed and made perpetual by and through a universally compulsory contributory system, paying $30 per month to all qualifying persons of reasonable age. We ask that this be no Federal-aid-to-the-States pot of whitewash and that it be no matter of general taxation; that it be a Federally controlled and Federally administered program freed from State political racketeers.

(2) The adoption of UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE on a Federal and Nation-wide basis, not only for the benefit and protection of the worker on the big job, but for the worker on the one-man job, and for the farmer's sons and daughters and for the farm laborer as well.

(3) A Federal system of FAIR PRICE INSURANCE for the products of the one-family farm. The farmer has as much right to expect this from his Government as has the laborer on the big jobs to expect Government insurance and protection for his lax periods of employment. BOTH CONSTITUTE LABOR.

(4) Immediate cash payment of the SOLDIERS' BONUS, under the terms of the Patman Bill.

(5) The gradual abolition of all normal ad-valorem taxes, and the immediate abolition of all normal income taxes, the doubling of both these levies on predatory and criminal wealth, but eliminating both items for the lives of the moderately well-to-do and the poor, substituting therefor the universal sales or commodity tax, to be operated and collected by the Federal Government. The Government to retain 40% of such revenues, and returning 60% thereof to the States.

(6) The equal social and economic justice for the poor man, instead of dishonor and disrespect for him; for the recognition of the rights of the downtrodden and forgotten man and woman of America; for treatment on an equal basis for the millionaire and the share-cropper or laborer.

Respectfully submitted,

LOST 28 POUNDS Never Felt Better!

I simply couldn't go through with all those kicking and bending exercises—they wore me out.

Then I tried to diet—but it didn't seem fair. I simply adore chocolate cake—and why should I have to give it up when all my slender friends eat it regularly and never seem to gain a pound?

Finally I learned about a simple corrective for abnormal obesity, known and prescribed by physicians the world over. —A corrective that would change the food I ate into energy instead of excess fat! And I learned that it was put up in convenient tablets containing exactly the right quantity—by one of the best-known medical laboratories in the United States.

And so I took Marmola—4 tablets a day—and quickly my excess fat began to disappear. What delighted me even more was the way I felt as a result of taking it—so mentally alert, so full of pep!

Now I'm down to normal—and never again will I let myself put on that deadening load of useless fat. Whenever I start to gain again, I take Marmola. It keeps my weight exactly right.

Thousands of women who have reduced the Marmola way might well tell you that story. Since 1907, more than 20,000,000 packages of Marmola have been purchased. Could you ask for any better recommendation than that?

Today—buy a package of Marmola, and start at once. You will soon experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day you first discovered this marvelous reducing agent.

Herr Luther Entertains For Aviatrix

Film of Preliminary Olympic Games Is Shown.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

One of the most interesting afternoon parties of the season was that given yesterday afternoon by the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, in the Embassy, when the guests were invited to meet Miss Eli Beinhorn, German aviatrix, and to view a motion picture on the preliminary Olympic games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, in the Bavarian Alps.

The genial host and Miss Beinhorn received the guests in the wide hall of the Embassy, where cheery fires crackled in the grates, and holiday greens still festooned the walls and mantels. Miss Beinhorn is a charming person. She wore a black satin frock trimmed with touches of silver lame. She has a beautiful sun tan, of which she is very proud, and for which she said she worked very hard to acquire on her recent stay in Florida.

The guests gathered in the dining room, where the table was spread with a variety of delicious German cakes and sandwiches, among them the famous cheesecakes which are so popular with those fortunate enough to have tasted them in the Embassy. Tea was served by the ladies of the Embassy staff, with a punch made of German wines and fresh strawberries.

Tells of Her Travels.

After an hour of visiting and chatting, the guests went into the ballroom, where the Ambassador again presented Miss Beinhorn, who gave a brief and interesting resume of her travels around the world. Miss Beinhorn is interested in the ruins of the Mayas in Central America and Mexico, and admits she heard of them for the first time a few years ago, and determined to see them for herself.

This versatile young woman is interested not only in aviation, but in writing and photography. She has several books to her credit and some remarkable pictures of her extensive travels. She thought to make pictures and studies of the ruins and take them back to Germany with her, where there were so many people who know little of the ancient ruins, which, until aviation reached its present progressive state, were almost unknown and had been left untouched.

Miss Beinhorn explained that a number of her close friends were interested in the preliminary Olympic winter games and at her request had sent the films to her in this country in order this country might become better acquainted with the beauty and mountain setting of the games, and the rare proficiency of those taking part in the games.

Splendid Photography.

And then the film was unrolled, and those in the audience were delighted with the splendid photography, amazing scenery, and the thrilling sports which even the small children of Germany are apparently so adept in executing.

Glimpsed at the embassy were Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, with her two daughters, Mrs. Harry Baxter and Miss Betsy Dern; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Henry C. Wallace, widow of the former Secretary of Agriculture, who is spending the holidays here; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; the Ambassador of Poland, Mr. Stanislaw Patek; the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, with their young daughter, Mlle. Marie Therese de Laboulaye, and the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, the latter in a Christmassy red frock and black hat.

Other Embassy Guests.

Also Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Mme. Florescu, wife of the Counselor of the Rumanian Legation; the Charge d'Affaires of Belgium and Princess de Ligne, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, with their pretty debutante daughter, Miss Valerie Prochnik; Mme. Van Haersma de With, wife of the Netherlands Minister, very smart in a gown of black satin, and looking scarcely old enough to have a debutante daughter whom she is presenting to society next week.

The Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted arrived just before the film started. Others there were the chief of aeronautics division of the Department of Commerce, Mr. Eugene Vidal; the assistant chief of the division, Mr. Rex Martin, who has just returned after crossing the Atlantic aboard the Graf Zeppelin to South America; Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Warner, the former a member of aeronautics advisory board; Brig. Gen Oscar Westover, assistant chief of the air corps, and Col. and Mrs. George C. Thorpe, who by the way have just received word that the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy in Santiago, Chile, and Mrs. Arthur Pack, are being congratulated on the birth of a daughter. Mrs. Pack was formerly Miss Betty Thorpe, charming daughter of Col. and Mrs. Thorpe.

Others there were Baroness von Below, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Droop, the Counselor of the Swiss Legation, Mr. Louis Micheli, and the Secretary, Mr. Ernest Schlatter; the Air Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Champsaur, Mme. Lombard, wife of the Military Attache of the French Embassy; the Third Secretary of the French Embassy and Countess de Leusse, Signora Maria Ferrero, sister of the Secretary of the Italian Embassy; Mr. Rudolph Schoenfeld and Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, of the State Department; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Denys-Smith, and Mr. Michael McDermott, also of the State Department, and Mr. P. M. Broadmead, of the British Embassy.

Harrisons Give Brilliant Ball For Daughter

Leesburg Entertainment Is Attended by More Than 400 Guests.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 2.—Tall cedars, glowing with Christmas bulbs, and old English boxwood with many colored lights, greeted more than 400 guests as they drove up the winding road to historic Selma, home of Mrs. E. B. White, for the brilliant ball, which Mayor and Mrs. Charles F. Harrison, the former a brother of Mrs. White, gave last night for their debutante daughter, Miss Janet Fauntleroy Harrison, and their cousin, Miss Nancy Benedict Harrison. Both debutantes were presented to Washington society at a tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Harrison at their home in Georgetown on November 10.

Inside the beautiful Colonial home, which is situated about a mile from Leesburg, with its wide hall and lovely antique furnishings, all was gayety and cheeriness. Hundreds of red candles were glowing everywhere. Christmas wreaths hung in the windows, the wide stairway and the landing above were festooned with strands of green and red wreaths with clusters of holly completed the decorations.

Mayor and Mrs. Harrison were assisted in receiving their guests by Mrs. E. B. White and Miss Elizabeth White. Mrs. Harrison wore a black lace dress with a shoulder bouquet of white gardenias. Mrs. White wore a dusty pink satin dress, made on simple lines with shoulder straps and belt fastening of crystal and rhinestone. Miss White was in black and white satin.

Miss Harrison in White.

Miss Janet Harrison wore white taffeta sprinkled with gold stars. The neckline was high in front and finished with a frill of the same material, while the open back extended in V shape to the waistline. The skirt was flared with a brief train and a gold cord completed the waistline. She wore a corsage of gardenias.

Miss Nancy Harrison wore a peacock blue evening gown, cut on princess lines. The neckline was finished with bugle beads and the bodice was cut quite low in the back. She wore a corsage of gardenias. Miss Sara Harrison, sister of Miss Janet Harrison, wore a sapphire blue corded taffeta, made on simple lines, the neckline in front being finished with a cluster of pink silk roses. A butterfly bow extended across the shoulders.

Presiding at the punch bowl were Mrs. Walter Harrison, who wore a king's blue velvet dress, cut on princess lines and trimmed with cut steel beads; Mrs. Thomas N. Fendall, wearing a green corded taffeta evening gown, with close-fitting bodice and slight train; Mrs. R. H. Lynn, in beige lace and a corsage of gardenias; Mrs. Aldrich Dudley, in black satin, the bodice cut very low in the back and finished with a fishtail collar; Miss Rebecca Harrison, wearing black chiffon, with a shoulder bouquet of gardenias, and Mrs. Smith Bowman, in black chiffon.

Senator Guffey To Be Honored

The Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley will attend the reception to be given this afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock at the Mayflower in honor of Senator Joseph F. Guffey. Members of the Pennsylvania State Democratic committee will be hosts. All Pennsylvanians in Washington and their friends have been invited.

Receiving with Senator Guffey will be his sisters, Mrs. Carroll Miller, Miss Ida Guffey and Miss Palletta Guffey.

Guests will include the wives of many of the Pennsylvania Representatives in Congress, Mrs. George H. Earle, wife of the Governor-elect of Pennsylvania, the wives of members of the Governor's cabinet, and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Benton McMillan, Mrs. David L. Lawrence, wife of the chairman of the Pennsylvania State Democratic committee; Mrs. Joseph Tumulty, Miss Marguerite LeHand, Mrs. Melvina Scheider, Mrs. Charles H. Hamlin, Mrs. M. L. Benedum, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. James H. Wolfe, Mrs. J. Wood Clark, Mrs. John B. Kelly, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Charles Rhodes, Mrs. Thomas A. Logue, Mrs. Thomas Kennedy, Mrs. Clinton B. Eilenberger, Mrs. Warren Van Dyke and Mrs. June Fickel.

English-Speaking Union To Give Luncheon Today

The English-Speaking Union will entertain at a luncheon today at the Willard Hotel in honor of Prof. Frederick S. Boas, M. A., LL. D., and Mrs. Boas.

Guests will include Mr. Edmund Gwenn, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Cooper, Miss Marjory Pickard, Miss Molly Pearson, Mr. Lewis Allen and Mr. Edward Choate, all members of the cast of LaBurnum Grove, which is now playing at the National Theater.

Mrs. Roosevelt Hostess at Tea To Hundreds

Previously Takes a Few Guests to Musicale at the Mayflower.

Mrs. Roosevelt entertained several hundred guests at tea yesterday afternoon in the White House. The first group, which was received from four until five o'clock, included those who have called at the Executive Mansion this season and the second group received from five until six o'clock included a number of women executives.

Mrs. Roosevelt attended Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicale yesterday at the Mayflower, having as her guests Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mme. de Laboulaye, Mrs. Key Pittman and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt.

Mrs. Townsend entertained at luncheon following the concert in honor of the two artists, Mme. Eide Norena, Norwegian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, and Mr. Beveridge Webster, pianist. The guests included the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the Minister of Norway, M. Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne; the Minister of Egypt, Ibrahim Ratob Bey; Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy, Mr. Leander McCormick-Goodhart; the Counselor of the Swedish Legation, Baron Beck-Friis; the attache of the Swedish Legation, Mr. Carl Borgenstierna; the Counselor of the Danish Legation, Mr. Hialmar Collin; the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, Baron van Breugel Douglas; the third Secretary of the Egyptian Legation, Mr. Andre Cattaui; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, with whom Mr. Webster has been stopping; Lady Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Santini, Mrs. Truxtun Beale and her cousin, Miss Hewitt; Mrs. C. C. Glover, jr., Mrs. J. Pierrpont Moffat, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. Henry L. Doherty, Miss Helen Lee Doherty, Mr. Arthur Bradley Campbell and Mr. Pierre Luboshutz.

New Mascara Makes Lashes Appear Longer

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S one thing every woman wants—lovely lashes. And now, if you have lashes at all, it's very simple to make them lovelier. A new concern has recently put out an altogether different kind of mascara, and one that is as pleasant and easy to use as it is flattering to your eyes.

It comes in a creamy consistency in a small tube. You can squeeze a bit out and apply it as it is or, if you want it very thin and hardly apparent, you can mix it with water. However you use it, it gives a lustrous finish to your lashes and makes them look thicker and longer than they really are.

One grand feature is this—it won't run and irritate the eyes, leaving them red and smarting. Neither will it become brittle and break the lashes off.

Cold Cream Bargain.

Here's the chance of a lifetime! A French perfumer and cosmetician, one whose name is familiar to all of us, decided recently to discontinue one of his fine cold creams. As a result the few stores able to get their orders in bought up the remainder of his stock. The lucky Washington store is selling the cream for 29 cents—and only a short time ago it was $1.50.

The jar alone, an attractive blue pottery affair with an ornate nickle top, costs 30 cents or more to make. Because of its costly ingredients the cream brought the production price up so far that it simply didn't pay to put it out. So, now that it is no longer being manufactured this is a wonderful chance to buy a superb product for less than one-fifth of the original price.

Auto Robe for Cold Days.

Those in a local store measure 52 by 72 inches, just long and wide enough to be ideal for a coupe, and especially nice for the driver who can spread it over her knees without being inconvenienced by too much robe.

They come in large plaids combining gray, black and red, or there are brighter ones with streaks of green and blue. They are conservatively priced at $2.99 each.

Herbal Meal For Blackheads.

One sure way of removing blackheads and warding off their return lies in the package of herbal meal. This is a combination of various herbs and powders known for their beneficial effect on the skin.

You take the slightest little bit of it, and mix in your hand with a little water. After you've rubbed this over your face and allowed it to dry, remove and you'll notice immediately how clear and spruced up your skin appears.

It is particularly recommended for adolescent children.

A daily face wash with this healthful meal will restore normal conditions in a short time.

Scientifically Bristled Brushes.

A brushing in the morning and another at night will not only give a glossy sheen to the hair but will brush the cobwebs out of your brain. So says one of our foremost hair and scalp authorities.

But remember, just any brush won't turn the trick. Take one of these soft wishy-washy ones, for instance. It scarcely penetrates the thickness of your hair to stimulate the scalp. Or take one of those with the too thick bristles. You can't cleanse it easily and consequently brush a considerable amount of dirt and dust into your hair.

And take one of those fine, stiff bristled brushes, with the bristles scientifically placed—you'd say it would cost a fortune. But not so with those featured in an F street store. There are some small, handy brushes here with five rows of stiff bristles, and an easy grip wooden handle, and these cost only 89 cents.

Paper Handkerchiefs.

It isn't easy to find a handkerchief for both show and blow, so why not do this—have your lovely sheer chiffon or monogrammed linen and keep this for show alone. For practical purposes buy some paper handkerchiefs featured in a local store. These come wrapped in cellophane packages that sell for 10 cents.

The material has been treated with an ingredient which is universally recognized as having soothing qualities for inflamed and tender noses. It is also lintless, soft and absorbent—just a ready-made convenience for colds.

Puddings Popular.

It's a jolly season for puddings, and puddings, if they taste good and are served right, make everybody that much jollier.

For those domestic amateurs who aren't so sure of themselves in the kitchen there comes a pudding which is well-nigh complete. After you stir it and heat it, it's ready to serve . . . and delicious!

Cure for Juvenile Crime Is Seen In Plenty of Supervised Recreation

Underwood & Underwood.

Schools and churches should help provide recreation places for boys and girls who now play in the street, believes Mrs. Harry Nelson, above. She has been a member of the New York Bureau for the Prevention of Crime during the last five years.

School Centers Are Advocated By Mrs. Nelson

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE way to keep boys and girls from becoming criminals is to give them plenty of supervised recreation, a worker with the New York police department's bureau of crime prevention is convinced.

The worker, Mrs. Harry Nelson, began her study of delinquents about eight years ago in Washington at the Woman's Bureau when the late Mrs. Mina Van Winkle was director. For the last five years she has been with the New York bureau.

While visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Moyle, at the Shoreham a few days ago, Mrs. Nelson told of her work among boys and girls under 21.

She has learned that when young people become enmeshed in crime it is usually because they have lacked proper guidance in their spare time. This is especially true of city children in the poorer districts, she said. Forced by crowded conditions to play in the street, they frequently are led by youthful exuberance to commit minor offenses.

Few Steal to Meet Needs.

It must be remembered, Mrs. Nelson pointed out, that when a country boy helps himself to a pocketful of apples from a neighbor's orchard he may get a scolding or be chased by the farmer; that's about the extent of his punishment. But when a city youngster grabs an apple from a peddler's cart or takes one from the corner grocery, he is considered a thief and dealt with accordingly. And yet both boys were prompted by high spirits seeking an outlet, according to Mrs. Nelson.

She has found that few children shoplift because they or their families need the articles. Most of them do petty stealing because some article in a store happens to appeal to them or because they have heard other children tell how much fun it is to "lift" things.

The bureau deals with young shoplifters by explaining to them in a friendly manner the seriousness of their offense, by talking with the parents, and then by giving the boys and girls a "big brother" or a "big sister" who inspires admiration and confidence. The big brothers as well as the big sisters are recruited from the bureau's workers.

Moralizing Futile.

These same workers try to get the young people into recreation clubs by meeting them on their own ground. Preaching and moralizing have no effect, Mrs. Nelson declared. But when a well educated, understanding, attractive young man joins the street boys in their ball games and other sports he usually can win them over to a club after a few weeks.

And once the boys find outlet for their energies in a supervised club they seldom return to vandalism and other forms of delinquency, Mrs. Nelson said.

Girls are a harder problem, Mrs. Nelson admitted. While most of the erring boys get into difficulties when they are about 12 years old, the girls do not cause the bureau much trouble until they are several years older. Their delinquency is usually the result of sex problems, Mrs. Nelson said.

Both boy and girl delinquents usually come from homes where the father is missing, or where the mother is a drunkard. Extreme poverty is also a large factor, the psychiatric social worker pointed out.

She believes the best way to give young people guidance in their spare time is to keep the school buildings open every afternoon and evening; to make a community center out of every one of them. Then instead of playing on the streets as soon as school is dismissed the boys and girls could find more amusement, and, certainly better amusement, in clean, wholesome surroundings.

Welcome Replaces Snubs For Women in Congress

By Bessie Fant Evans.

FIVE WOMEN officially answering roll call in the House of Representatives today and Mrs. O'Day being sworn in as the sixth woman legislator in this body—make a far cry to a certain day of the long ago when John Randolph, of Virginia, annoyed by even the presence of a company of women on the floor of the House rose deliberately to rout them. Pallid as death with his mane of hair thrown back from his brow, he drew himself up to his full height, pointed a long skeleton-like forefinger at them, and in his peculiar, shrill, squeaking voice, excoriated to Henry Clay, the youthful speaker of the House: "Mr. Speaker, what pray are all these women doing here, so out of place in the arena? Sir, they had much better be at home attending to their knitting."

How his shade must be fretting at the presence of women in the seats of the mighty, and at the fact that they seem mostly to be doing their knitting away from home rather than in it!

Incident Told in Letter.

On the contrary, much as Vice President Daniel D. Tompkins, of New York, during President Monroe's Administration, was once temporarily embarrassed by an uninvited influx of women on the floor of the Senate, we have a feeling that his shade must be genuinely pleased to see Mrs. Hattie Caraway sitting with her fellow legislators and recognized by the chair as the "Senator from Arkansas."

A woman letter-writer of the time tells of the Tompkins incident. "It happened on the occasion of our visit that Vice President Tompkins, a very gallant man, had invited a party of ladies whom he had met at Senator Brown's the night before to take seats on the floor of the Senate although this was a great innovation. The ladies in the gallery, seeing a few of their sex comfortably seated on the Senate sofas with warm foot-stools and other luxuries, deserted their seats and flocked into the Senate, causing the courteous and dignified vice president such alarm that he failed to hear for the first time the opening remarks of the Senator who was addressing the chair. Some of the Senators frowned indignantly, and were heard to mutter, 'Too many women here for the transaction of business.'"

Certainly the spirit of change is nowhere more evident than in the type of representation of which the present feminine seven are proponents, in contrast to the woman's bloc of which Miss Jeannette Rankin, the first woman to sit in Congress, was the representative.

Miss Rankin's pioneer outlook on legislative matters was naturally colored by the feministic viewpoint. A professional career in welfare work served as an excellent background for her legislative service. Today the women in Congress oddly enough are all widows, who in their early married lives probably never even remotely considered careers for themselves. Throughout their lives they have had an intense interest in people and have forgotten self in service for others, whether it happened to be within the confines of a home or in the larger areas of political assignments.

Proved Merits in Congress.

In Congress they have proved their merits on the committee assignments they have won. Mrs. Caraway is chairman of Enrolled Bills and is on the Committees on Agriculture and Forestry, Commerce, and the Congressional Library. Mrs. Mary Norton is chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia. Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers is a factor on the Foreign Affairs Committee. Mrs. Virginia Jenckes holds a position on Mines and Mining, and it is reported that Mrs. Isabella Greenway is to be rewarded with that very desirable plum, a place on the Ways and Means Committee.

Try These.

1. What is a pariah and how is the word pronounced?
2. Is Argentine preferably called AR-jen-teen (to rhyme with "lean") or AR-jen-tine (to rhyme with "line")?
3. For what is Sir Wilfred Thomas Grenfell noted?
4. What is "cambric tea?"

Answers Here.

1. A pariah is, in this country, an outcast, one despised by society. PAH-ri-a, PARE-i-a, or pa-RYE-a.
2. Either AR-jen-tine (to rhyme with "line") or AR-jen-tin (to rhyme with "sin"). But in either case, the accent is on the first syllable.
3. Sir Wilfred Thomas Grenfell is an English medical missionary to Labrador and a noted author.
4. "Cambric tea" is a beverage made of hot water, milk and sugar, with very little tea.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Surgery in Lung Disease.

THE first principle in the treatment of lung disease, particularly tuberculosis, is rest. In addition to the ordinary concept of rest, which means refraining from activity, there arises the desirability of devising some plan of rest for the lung itself.

In ordinary health the lungs are active 24 hours a day. It is necessary for life that they expand and contract 15 to 20 times per minute when the individual is quiet. During activity this rate increases, depending on the degree and duration of exercise. When the body is at rest half of one lung is sufficient to sustain life. The great reserve capacity, however, makes it possible still to maintain a so-called normal condition, even when the body is exerted to its utmost for a considerable length of time.

The most commonly practiced and easiest method of producing lung rest is by introducing air into one pleural space (pneumothorax), thus permitting the lung to empty itself of air and to cease to function. This method, however, because of the rapid absorption of the air, must be repeated from time to time in order to attain the desired result.

It not infrequently happens that pneumothorax can not be used because there is no pleural space. The two layers of the pleura, having become inflammed as the result of disease, have grown together. For such cases other surgical procedures have been devised to reduce the size of the chest cavity and thus limit the motion of the lung.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

A SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD boy complains that his mother is too tidy. He hangs his neckties over the bedpost because he can see them easier than if they are in the closet, but they are always gone when he wants them. His mother has a different place for them. He puts his hat under the bed "because I can see it when I want to find it in a hurry," but his mother never leaves it there. Altogether he is quite disgruntled with his mother's good housekeeping and wants to know if it is necessary.

Personally I suspect that it isn't. If any housekeeper ever left masculine possessions where they are dropped around the house, it wouldn't be any time at all before the men themselves could not wade through untidy heaps of overcoats, collars, ash trays and apple cores. A certain amount of order is necessary for comfortable living. Yet many women make such a fetish of good housekeeping that they make their children positively uncomfortable.

If you are that kind of housekeeper, don't override the children's complaints without giving them consideration. Perhaps they would be a bit happier in their own homes if you permitted a trifling amount of disorder. And no matter what your own feelings in the matter, surely you want the children to be at ease in their own homes.

Woman Who Asked Three Strangers to Christmas Dinner Glad She Did.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I want to thank you for your kind assistance in securing guests for my small Christmas dinner party. Both Mrs. P and Miss B, whose letters you sent me, accepted the invitation, and we had a most enjoyable evening. You spoke of being particularly interested in Miss B, who had written to you before. She is a most charming girl, I think, and I hope to become better acquainted with her. Mrs. P, too, is most likable.

• • • •

I undertook this project rather cautiously, because I do not meet people too easily myself, and the idea of inviting perfect strangers into my home took about all the courage I had. It was so successful, however, that I am very glad I did it.

• • • •

A friend and I, while dining in one of the hotels here on Christmas Eve ran across a rather forlorn woman who, we discovered, was spending her Christmas here all alone. On the spur of the moment I asked her to come and make a fourth at my Christmas dinner. When she left my apartment she told me, almost in tears, that it was the very nicest Christmas she had ever had. She is very nice, is a professional woman and is working toward a Ph. D., but is so painfully shy that she is afraid of the sound of her own voice. I was glad for once in my life I acted on impulse, if it gave so much happiness to some lonely person.

• • • •

This experiment has been so successful that I think I would like to try it again some time. You might keep me in mind, and when you hear from three more lonely women whose interests are somewhat similar to mine, let me know and I will try another dinner. Food is always an excellent ice-breaker and it is easier to talk to strangers over a dinner table than any other way.

Thanking you again for your interest, I am, sincerely yours,
L. M.

Gratifying Report.

DEAR L. M.: It is very gratifying to know that the guests you secured for your own little Strangers' Christmas Party, through an invitation extended in this column, proved so pleasing that you are looking forward to giving another such party in the future.

• • • •

As I wrote you, I was convinced of the complete social acceptability of Miss B., who had written to me so charmingly on more than one occasion; and credentials submitted by Mrs. P. proved her a woman of equal caliber.

Your experience proves indisputably that the person suffering from loneliness is not necessarily a person wanting in social graces, but simply one whom circumstances has denied adequate opportunity for cultivating congenial friendships.

• • • •

I am glad, with you, that you had the courage to attempt this social experiment. Perhaps it may stimulate others, in circumstances equally favorable for entertaining, to go and do likewise, in a similar spirit of sincere goodwill. M. H.

Pattern No. 658.

SPRING ENTERS the winter wardrobe via the bright blouse. It is the first note of gayety to brighten up midwinter costumes. We suggest topping off your dark skirt with one of these blouses—the overblouse in a bright pastel crepe, the youthful tuck-in model in a colorful print.

The draped collar of the overblouse ties in a big soft bow at the back. The tuck-in has an ingenious turn-over collar and picturesque puffed sleeves. Both patterns come in the same envelope and are so accurately cut that the least experienced home dressmaker can depend on successful results. Sizes 14 to 42. In size 18 (36), the overblouse requires 2¾ yards, the tuck-in 1⅞ yards of 39-inch material.

A Universal Language.

Apropos of the sections on Partnership Language in my Contract Bridge Red Book on Play, someone asked me the other day what to do if his partner did not happen to understand any discoverable dialect. My somewhat facetious answer was that there is one language that even animals understand—force.

I was not, however, advocating the methods of the prize ring. There is a type of force which is perfectly legitimate, and which is sometimes necessary with literate partners as well as with Bridge ignorami. In today's hand East—who incidentally knew his alphabet of conventional plays—made the right play to set the contract, not because he knew what it was all about, but because West left him no other sane alternative. If he hadn't, perhaps West would have been justified in using force.

1♡	Pass	1♠	Pass
2♡(1)	Pass	3♡(2)	Pass
4♡(3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Strong enough for a three heart bid but South was a cautious player.
2—Unless South has a near-minimum opening bid, North's cards should furnish enough tricks to make game.
3—South jumps at the chance to accept the game invitation.

West opened the eight of clubs from the top of his worthless three-card suit, East winning with the Ace and returning the top of his doubleton diamond. On this trick declarer played the ten-spot and West won with the Jack. West now banged down the Ace of diamonds and indulged in a little thought. Another diamond lead would, it is true, force declarer to ruff, but West was by no means sure where the fourth trick was going to come from unless the heart Queen would win a trick. West finally decided that if his partner had the eight of trumps he might trump a diamond and force out one of declarer's top hearts. So in order to make sure that East would ruff, West led his deuce of diamonds. Dummy played the seven-spot and East, in order to prevent dummy from winning the trick, was forced to ruff with the six-spot. Declarer overruffed with the King, but now the jig was up. He had to lose the fourth and setting trick to West's heart Queen.

Tigress Makes Good In Watchdog Role

Owner Finds Would-Be Robber Terror-Stricken.

A tigress makes an excellent watchdog, a recent happening in India indicates. Sir Maurice Gerard walked into his garden at Goona a few days ago and found a would-be robber lying terror stricken beneath a crouching tigress. The man was unharmed. The tigress has been in Sir Maurice's household since infancy and has had the run of the place, romping with the dogs and puppies. At night, however, she is tied to a tree in the garden. The unsuspecting thief had passed close to the tree on his way to the house.

Milk Beverage, Kumiss, Is Fine For Invalids

Twice Fermented Drink Is Refreshing and Palatable.

By Dorothea Duncan.

TWO OF THE QUESTIONS submitted by readers have a common tie and it is more or less fitting to answer them together. The first one is: What is kumiss and where did it originate?

Kumiss is a beverage that is made of fermented milk and is distinguished because of its double fermentation, being both a lactic acid and slightly alcoholic product. This beverage was first known among the ancient Tartars and was made either of camel's or mare's milk. This beverage supplied a very important part of the diet. The native formula calls for the addition to the fresh milk of a small quantity of the previous making and then frequent agitation during the fermenting. Lactic acid fermentation sets in first. After 24 hours the liquid is moderately sour with only traces of alcohol. After 36 hours the finished beverage is sour, effervescent and only mildly alcoholic. This product was partially valuable, because it could be kept for a long period of time without deterioration.

Kumiss as we know it today is a similar product made from doubly fermented cow's milk. It is a pleasant, refreshing beverage, palatable to the strong and robust as well as to the invalid. It is particularly valuable for invalids because the casein is finely divided and converted into easily soluble products.

Here is the American way of preparing kumiss.

Kumiss.

1 quart of milk
¼ yeast cake
1½ tablespoons sugar

Heat the milk to 75 degrees Fahrenheit, add the sugar and the yeast cake dissolved in lukewarm water. Fill sterilized bottles to within 1½ inches of top, corking tightly and shake. It may be necessary to tie the corks on the bottles, as the yeast causes the milk to ferment and if gas is produced in considerable amounts the corks are forced out. Invert the bottles and place where they can remain at a temperature of about 70 degrees Fahrenheit for ten hours. Place in the refrigerator inverted and let stand for 24 hours, shaking now and then to prevent the cream from forming in the mouth of the bottle. If left standing too long it becomes less palatable. It should look like thick foamy cream when ready to serve. In opening the bottle care must be taken not to let the milk foam over.

The second question also applies to milk drinks for invalids: How can milk be made a little unusual and more palatable to invalids?

If milk has been prescribed for an invalid by a physician, it may be combined with any other of the foods that the patient has included in his diet. Beverages will form an important part of the diet and may be enhanced by the addition of the whole egg or merely the whites of the egg. Following is a recipe for albuminized milk that will afford a pleasant change from plain milk.

Albuminized Milk.

1 egg white
2 tablespoons cracked ice
½ cup milk
Pinch of salt

Beat the egg white with a fork or egg beater, add ice, milk and salt. Beat or shake enough to mix well.

If bananas are not taboo, they may be combined with milk to form an appetizing dish. Use only bananas that are ripe (well flecked with brown) and rub through a strainer. Add this puree to hot milk and add sugar to taste.

Could you tell me how to make a kind of mint candy, which is quite similar to after-dinner mints? It is a delicious creamy candy.

After-Dinner Mints.

2 cups of sugar
2-3 cup boiling water
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon vinegar
Few drops oil of peppermint

Mix sugar, water, cream of tartar and vinegar in pan. Boil without stirring to 256 degrees F. or until mixture is brittle when tried in cold water. Pour on oiled marble slab or on shallow tray. Cool, lift (avoiding stirring motion) and pull, keeping grain all one way. Add flavoring during pulling. When candy is too stiff to pull, stretch into a long rope, half-inch thick, and cut with scissors into small pieces. Drop into bowl of powdered sugar, stir until well coated. When dry, store in glass jar, cover and keep in warm place several days before using.

For variety, color with food color and flavor with vanilla, orange or lemon extract, coffee extract, oil of sassafras, clove or cinnamon, or melted chocolate.

What Today Means

By Mary Blake.

"Capricorn."

IF JANUARY 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

On this January 3 certain national or international current events may affect certain lines of business in such a way that locally the reaction will be most favorable. Engagements are likely to keep you and your friends hustling, so it may be tactful not to pay prolonged visits. Should misunderstandings arise it is advisable to try amicable methods to adjust them, as brusque or harsh ones will probably fail.

Should you receive an invitation it might be well to accept, as there is every likelihood the affair will be very enjoyable. Married and engaged couples, as well as those matrimonially inclined, will display good judgment if they suppress any desire they may feel to assert an egotistical sense of satisfaction over an innocent mistake of judgment that might occur.

If a woman and January 3 is your birthday, remember a cheerful and optimistic nature accomplishes a great deal more than a pessimistic one, and you will find life much easier. Use your looking glass and you will find you are far more attractive with a smile than with a frown. Dame Fortune may surprise you in an unexpected and generous manner, if you will only have faith in your own ability to succeed.

Social welfare, educational and office detail work are probably the best lines of activity for you to follow. If you will not permit domestic cares to get on your nerves, you can get a great deal of happiness through matrimony.

If a man and January 3 is your natal day and if you will learn to let each day work out its own problems and not worry about the future, the increased efficiency of your work will be quite noticeable, and financial increment will probably result.

Auto Mishaps Increase by 76 In Alexandria

152 Accidents for Year Doubles '34 Figure; Three Are Fatal.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
207 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The annual report of operations of the detective bureau of the Alexandria police department, submitted by Detective Sergt Edgar Sims to Capt. John S Arnold, shows three persons killed by automobiles in 1934, compared to one in 1933, and 113 injured, an increase of 29 over the previous year. The number of automobile accidents reported to police was 152, against 76 last year, or exactly double.

Stolen property reported in the year was valued at $20,823.31, against $18,250 last year, and $14,717 of this was recovered, or $1,703.12 more than in 1933. Property recovered for other jurisdictions was valued at $9,164.33, against $8,235 the previous year. Of 44 automobiles reported stolen all were recovered, as well as one stolen in the previous year. In 1933, 31 were reported stolen and all but two were recovered. The police also recovered 28 stolen automobiles for other jurisdictions.

Of the 3,552 arrests made by the department during the year, 1,035 were charged with being drunk, an increase of only 13 over 1933, when Alexandria was legally dry. Violations of the liquor law were 128, as against 115, or an increase of 13. There were 47 arrests for drunk driving, against 44 in 1933. Traffic violations brought 580 arrests, against 504 in 1933, and of the 580, 540 were convicted. The number of convictions in the 3,552 arrests was 2,980.

Persons reported missing numbered 55, all but one being located. The department investigated 895 complaints, a reduction of 54 for 1933. There were 1,346 radio calls handled, as against 1,106 in 1933.

There were seven murders in Alexandria, all being cleared up, five persons being arrested in connection with the murders, four convicted and one case pending. Three of the murders were committed by a member of the police force, George D. Roberts, who shot three male members of his wife's family. Roberts pleaded guilty to murder, and received a life sentence in the penitentiary.

The Rev. Norman Roberts, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, Alexandria, has received a diploma for perfect attendance at the Sunday school of that church for 28 consecutive years. Miss Mary Kell was next on the list with 20 years to her credit, while the gold medal for bringing in the largest number of members in the past year was awarded to Miss Evelyn Dobson.

Others in this Sunday School receiving certificates for attendance were: Miss Mary Ebherdt, 18 years; Mrs. W. T. Penn, 15 years; Milton Penn, sr., 13 years; Mrs. Marian McClanahan and Miss Evelyn Suthard, 12 years; Miss Adeline Finisecy, Mrs. William Anderson and Miss Mary Simpson, 11 years; Thomas Simpson, jr., Miss Aldene Finisecy, 10 years; Mrs. Thomas Travers, Joseph Roberts, Margaret Roberts, Jack Payne, Mrs. Harry H. Newton, Harold Payne, 9 years; Nancy Payne, Norma Roberts, 8 years; Ruth Athey, Mrs. Norman Roberts, Mrs. Rachel Squires, Elmer Cardwell, 6 years; Mrs. Olive Langley, Mrs. Harriet Beach, William T. Penn, 5 years; J. L. Santmire, 4 years; Billie Marlowe, 2 years; Ashley Beach, Lucy Gorham and Ruth Gorham, 1 year.

J. H. Fields, a carpenter, living at 407 South Aspah street, while working in the razing of a one-story house at Franklin an Royal streets yesterday morning, was caught in the falling of the side wall and buried beneath the debris. Fields was quickly removed and taken to the Alexandria Hospital, where it was found he had several fractured ribs.

Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, will be the guest speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club at 12:30 p. m. today in the George Mason Hotel. Entertainment will be provided by Randolph Myers, of the Washington Y. M. C. A.

Robert W. Eaves, president of the club, will announce committee appointments.

The recently elected officers of the Maj. James E. King Auxiliary, Spanish War Veterans, will be installed tomorrow night at a special meeting to be held in the Elks' Lodge room. A short business meeting will be held at 7:30 o'clock in Carpenter's Hall, the regular meeting place, and the installation at 8 o'clock. National and departmental officers will attend.

The funeral of Mrs. Grace Virginia Jennings, who died Tuesday at Alexandria Hospital as the result of injuries received when shot by her husband, Raymond Jennings, in front of the George Mason Hotel, Christmas Eve, will be held at 3 p. m. today from the home of her aunt, Mrs. Norman Roberts, 506 Queen street. Burial will be in Sharon Cemetery, Fairfax County.

The funeral of Miss Mary Catherine Smith, 43 years old, who died Tuesday in Staunton, Va., will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the Cunningham Funeral Home, 809 Cameron street. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery. Mrs. Smith was the daughter of the late James and Adelaide Smith, of Alexandria.

The public schools of Alexandria will reopen for studies today after the Christmas holidays.

Ritchie Orders Colored Killers To Be Hanged

Two County 'Dillingers' to Die; Third Is Given Jail for Life.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 2 (AP).—Two of the three Negroes known as the black Dillingers of Prince Georges County are to be hanged during the week of January 22 for the murder of John Geary during the holdup of a barbeque stand at Priests Bridge.

The death warrants for James A. Gross and Gordon Dent were signed today by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, who commuted the sentence of the third, Donald Parker, to life imprisonment.

The trio were convicted of first degree murder by Judges Joseph C. Mattingly and William M. Loker when they were arraigned last month in Prince Georges circuit court for the slaying of Dent, son of the proprietor of the stand. They also were charged with several robberies in southern Maryland.

Gov. Ritchie, in commuting Parker's death sentence, said "he took no part in the actual killing" and allowed the lesser punishment "because of the help he rendered the State in apprehending and convicting the other two."

The Governor pointed out that Parker, after his arrest for a lesser crime, had informed police of the identity of the two other participants in the slaying. "The sheriff states" the Governor added, "that the arrests would not have been made without the assistance of Parker."

Gov. Ritchie's statement reconstructed the crime as Gross and Dent taking an active part in the robbery, with Parker remaining in an automobile outside. Gross was given as the actual slayer while Dent was said to have carried Geary into the next room and made him open a cash register before he died.

Newman Heads Kiwanis Club Of Frederick

Asks Members to Continue Activities for Needy Children of City.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Parsons Newman, member of the Frederick bar, was installed president of the Kiwanis Club at a meeting at the Francis Scott Key Hotel. He was presented by Carroll H. Hendrickson, retiring president, who gave him the gavel and president's button.

In an address on the organization's objectives Mr. Newman called upon the members to make the coming year a satisfactory one. He asked that service to underprivilegd children be continued as one of the main activities and he recommended that the members consider the advisability of reviving the fashion and business show or some similar enterprise.

Robert L. Smith was installed vice president. Announcement was made that Albert M. Coblentz had completed ten years of perfect attendance. President Newman announced the following committees:

Agriculture—Henry R. Shoemaker, chairman; Ransom R. Lewis, jr., William O. Kolb.

Morris Appointed As Land Chief

To Serve Unexpired Term of Late G. C. Peverly.

Henry L. Morris, president of the Prince Georges County Board of Liquor Commissioners, has been appointed by Gov. Ritchie as land commissioner for Maryland.

An Associated Press dispatch from Annapolis said his name was included among a group of recess appointments sent to the Maryland Senate yesterday for confirmation.

Mr. Morris was appointed to serve the rest of the four-year term from May, 1931, filling the vacancy caused by the death of George C. Peverly, of St. Marys County.

Services Today For F. Walker, Victim of Train

Rites for Beltsville Man Killed Near Home to Be Held at Laurel.

Funeral services for Frederick H. Walker, 45, who was killed by a Baltimore & Ohio train near his home at Beltsville, Md., Monday, will be held at Laurel, Md., this afternoon.

The services will take place at the Laurel Baptist Church. The Rev. J. G. Lambrides, pastor, will officiate. Interment will be at Alexandria.

Mr. Walker was killed when his auto apparently stalled on a grade crossing in front of his home. His wife, Mrs. Susan Walker, said she heard the scream of the train whistle, followed by a crash.

She and a son, Frederick, jr., 16, extricated the man from the wreckage and rushed him in a passing auto to Dr. Bryan Warren, at Laurel. He was dead on arrival.

Besides his widow and Frederick, jr., Walker is survived by an adopted son, Joseph, 6. Walker was on his way to obtain medicine for Joseph, who was ill, in bed at home, when the train struck the auto.

An inquest will be held Tuesday before Acting Coroner James S. Vawter, at Laurel.

HEURICH BEER
. . . "the finest in America"

PARK AVENUE AT 51st STREET
NEW YORK
THEO. KROELL, GENERAL MANAGER

November 21st, 1934.

My dear Mr. Heurich:

It has been a great pleasure for me to have attended this year the meeting of the Executive Committee of the International Hotel Alliance and to have become acquainted with this remarkable country.

I have particularly enjoyed the trip to Washington and can truly say I was amazed at the beauty of that city and the architectural symmetry which is a delight to the eye. The work that is being done there is marvelous and I know of no place in Europe which has to its credit such modern structural beauty.

Washington gave me also another surprise. I really must confess that the Heurich beer I had there was the finest I have tasted in America. It can certainly bear comparison with our German beers. I come from Nürnberg where we are connoisseurs of good beer and as owner of the Grand Hotel there I feel I am quite a judge of the quality of beer. I should like you personally to know how much I enjoyed the beer you brew.

With my kindest regards to You,

I am,

Sincerely yours,
Georges Rubert

Legislators Meet In Maryland, Pick Session Leaders

Sasscer and Gorfine, Democrats, to Head Senate, House.

Ritchie Delivers Farewell Address

Warns of Impending Deficit; Accorded Great Ovation.

By Laurance F. Stuntz
(Post Staff Writer).

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 2.—Maryland's General Assembly met today, elected Democratic leaders in both Houses, received protests against the seating of Montgomery and St. Marys County delegates, heard Gov. Ritchie outline the financial condition of the State, and adjourned until next Tuesday.

During the crowded hours of organization, the Legislature found time to hurry through the first bill of the session in almost record time. It was a local measure, giving Baltimore County commissioners power to appoint an attorney for the county treasurer's office.

Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Prince Georges County, the Democratic nominee for president of the Senate, was elected by a vote of 16 to 10. One Senator listed as a Democrat, Harold E. Cobourn, of Cecil County, declined to vote on the ground that he did not know either Senator Sasscer or Senator J. David Baile, of Carroll County, the Republican candidate. This failure to vote was offset by the absence of Republican Senator Clifford Friend, of Garrett County, suffering from injuries received in an auto accident.

Fusionists Vote for Democrat.

In the House, the vote on the speaker gave Montgomery County's two Fusion delegates a chance to vote the Democratic ticket. They cast their ballots for Emanuel Gorfine, of Baltimore City, who was elected by 90 to 23. Gorfine's Republican opponent was Thomas I. Popp, of Cumberland. His defeat still leaves him minority floor leader of the House.

In both the House and Senate elections the defeated Republicans moved on to make the vote unanimous. In the upper House, Senator Baile will shepherd the Republican votes on controversial matters.

Unsuccessful attempts to prevent the seating of Delegates Joseph A. Cantrel and Walter M. Magruder, of Montgomery County, and Albert J. Lomax and Dr. Charles V. Hayden, of St. Marys, were made as the House met. Memorials protesting against the election of all four, and asking the House to order a recount of the vote were filed with Speaker Gofine even before his election. They were laid aside to be referred to the elections committee when that body is appointed. All four delegates were sworn in.

Gov. Ritchie's speech to the Legislature was the last of the series of seven he has made since he was first sent to the executive mansion in 1920, and it was the first in which he has ever forecast a deficit in State finances.

$2,229,000 Deficit Forecast.

This deficit, estimated at $2,229,000 by the end of this fiscal year, combined with the need for $8,000,000 for relief needs; presents Maryland with "as difficult a situation as has ever faced the State," the Governor said.

In addition to this need, which amounts to almost one-third of the normal budget, the Legislature must estimate the amount of revenues needed for the social legislation to which both parties are pledged.

"It is not my part to say what these revenues should be," Gov. Ritchie said. "That task has been entrusted to others. Indeed, until it is known how much money is going to be required, it will be difficult for anyone to say how the money should be raised."

Whatever money is spent for relief and social work should be controlled by a central board so that the State can supervise the work done and require proper standards, the Governor warned.

Cites Fall in Revenues.

The prospective deficit is the result of sharply declining revenues, Gov. Ritchie told the two houses, meeting in joint session. There are three possible ways of avoiding this deficiency, he pointed out. One is to decrease expenditures, another to increase the revenues, and the third is to sell the Northern Central Railway annuity, which brings in $90,000 a year.

While doubting the possibility of cutting more than $2,000,000 from the budget, the Governor advised that it be done if it would not cripple the public service of the State. The policy of looking for new and increased revenues has been "resorted to by many other States in similar situations, as shown by the increasing number of State income and sales tax laws."

Proposes Road Deficit Cure.

Almost a quarter of the Governor's speech was devoted to an explanation of the origin and cure of the county overdrafts on funds handled by the State roads commission. Repeating the statements made earlier, he pointed out that by ceasing to build new roads in the overdrawn counties the deficits would nearly all be corrected during the fiscal year 1936. He also advised that the State roads commission continue to expend the county share of the gas tax revenue under direction of the county commissioners.

As Gov. Ritchie entered the House chamber for the final speech of his succession of gubernatorial terms, he was met by a frenzied cheering and applause from packed galleries. He was escorted to the House by a committee including floor leaders of both parties in both houses.

A joint resolution to give Gov. Ritchie the chair and desk he has used in the Executive Mansion for the past 15 years also passed both houses yesterday. It was introduced by Senator Melvin L. Fine, of the Fourth Legislative District in Baltimore, and passed without opposition.

In the pageantry which surrounded the joint session to hear the speech of the Governor, the four woman members of the House were appointed to escort the Senate to the House chamber. They were Mrs. Lulu W. Boucher, of Allegany County; Miss Ruth E. Shoemaker, of Montgomery, Mrs. Mayne N. Collins, of Somerset, and Mrs. E. Blanche Phillips, of Baltimore City. For the first time, too, there was a woman in the Senate—Miss Mary E. W. Risteau, of Harford County. Miss Risteau was the first woman ever to take her seat in the House, and at this session is setting a similar precedent in the upper house.

Democrats Gain Patronage.

Democrats succeeded in appointing their own slate of desk officers in both Houses. Candidates for these jobs, most important of the Legislature's patronage, were selected at the majority caucus Tuesday night and went into office yesterday without a hitch.

2 Naval Officers Among the Happy New Year's Dads

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Babies were born to at least three Annapolis families on New Year's Day, it was learned today, all making their bow in Emergency Hospital. Two are children of naval families.

A son was born to Lieut. and Mrs. Edgar A. Cruise, and a daughter to Lieut. and Mrs. Harry F. Bauer. The third infant is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Heise.

Virginia Aids Bonus Stand Of President

6 of 9 Representatives Are Opposed to Payment Now.

Flannagan, Who Twice Voted Compensation, Declines Comment.

Virginia's House delegation may present a united front against immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus, the Associated Press reports.

Six of the State's nine Representatives today expressed "accord" with President Roosevelt's recently expressed views that full payment of the adjusted compensation certificates now would not be an aid to general economic recovery.

They were: Bland, Darden, Burch, Woodrum, Robertson and Smith.

Representative Drewry said his past record of voting twice against the bonus showed his views and that "I see no reason to change."

Flannagan for Bonus.

Representative Flannagan, who was the only Virginian to vote bonus payment in 1932 and 1933, deferred making a statement on the subject at the present time.

The ninth member of the delegation, Representative Montague, was against payment both times such legislation came up in the House.

Representative Woodrum, who as chairman of the independent offices appropriations subcommittee handles all veterans' appropriations, said if any plan could be worked out in keeping with the President's recovery program "to give unemployed veterans who are in need their money" he would gladly support that. He made it clear, however, that he would support the President with his vote.

Majority With Roosevelt.

A number of the group joined with Representative Smith in his statement:

"I am in entire accord with the statement issued by the President on this subject."

Virginia's House delegation yesterday supported the winning candidates for Speaker and floor leader.

All nine voted in the Democratic caucus for Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, for the Speakership, and all but Representative Burch, of Martinsville, voted for Bankhead on both ballots for majority leader. Burch switched from Representative Meade, of New York, to Bankhead on the second ballot.

County Tax Rate Boosted 5 Cents

$773,744 Revenue Expected at Frederick.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—The new county tax rate of 95 cents on the $100 for 1935 was fixed by the county commissioners on a taxable basis of $69,532,243 to yield a revenue of $773,744.03. While the rate is 5 cents higher than last year, indebtedness carried over from 1934, which the new commissioners are required to provide for, and large appropriations, mostly fixed by the Legislature, were factors in the advance.

The public school appropriation of $310,000 led the way. Interest on bonds called for $71,654.50; maintenance of Montevue Hospital, the county almshouse, $31,000; hospital for the insane, $22,500; emergency bonds, $10,000; Maryland Children's Aid Society (estimated beer licenses), $10,000; new assessment this year, $20,000; mother's relief fund, $4,200; due school board on the 1934 appropriation, $36,720, and cash due banks and interest, $96,000. A 4 per cent sinking fund of $20,000 was also provided for.

The largest items of revenue are taxes on a real estate basis of $46,632,269, yielding $443,006.57; personal property basis of $5,911,777, yielding $56,161.88. The tax on ordinary corporations, share corporations, railroad rolling stock and automobiles accounted for additional revenue totaling $605,756.33. The sum of $10,000, regarded as an uncertain income from pay patients of the county almshouse and State insane hospital and products from the almshouse farm, magistrate's fines, and State franchise taxes and revenues from taxes on stocks and bonds, bank stock shares, uncollected taxes for 1934 and a balance in bank accounted for the remainder of the total from all sources amounting to $773,744.03.

First 1935 Baby For Cumberland Is Family's 13th

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 2 (AP).—The 1935's first baby for Cumberland was the thirteenth child born to Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Stinnett. It's a boy, and arrived in the Allegany Hospital at 6:30 a. m. Two other boys arrived to other mothers later, missing by a few hours the distinction of being the year's first baby.

Beer License Is Revoked.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—The Washington County Board of License Commissioners has revoked the "on sale" beer licenses of J. H. Robinson, local grocer, whose place of business yielded 160 bottles of home-brew beer.

Ritchie Delivers "Farewell"

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie delivered the final message to the Maryland General Assembly of his 15-year administration at the opening of the 1935 session yesterday at Annapolis. He will be succeeded next week as Governor by Harry W. Nice, Republican, who defeated him in the November election. Seated on his left is Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Prince Georges County, president of the Senate, and on his right, Emanuel Gorfine, Baltimore City, speaker of the House of Delegates.

William E. Carson Honored For His Conservation Work

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Over 200 men and women of Warren County and distinguished guests from various sections of Virginia and Washington joined tonight in a testimonial dinner held in Randolph-Macon Academy to William E. Carson, who retired on Monday as chairman of the Virginia Commission on Conservation and Development after eight years of service in that position, in appreciation of his outstanding service to the State.

State Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, of Front Royal, was toastmaster, and speakers were R. Gray Williams, Winchester; Dr. W. J. Showalter, of the National Geographic Magazine, and Arno B. Cammerer, director of National Parks, United States Department of the Interior. Many others joined in felicitations to Mr. Carson for his work in establishing the Shenandoah National Park, and in the creation of six State parks.

Responding, Mr. Carson said: "Perhaps no one, when the commission was created in 1926, had any conception of the broad scope its activities would eventually assume. Today we have but scratched the surface of Virginia's conservation and development potentialities."

He referred to the tremendous task involved in the purchase of some 4,200 tracts of land for the purpose of the park. Among those attending were:

A. E. Demaray, Associate Director of National Parks; G. A. Moskey, Oliver G. Taylor, Hillery A. Tolson, and Herbert Eveson, of National Park Service; J. R. Lassiter, superintendent of Shenandoah National Park, and Mrs. Lassiter; W. M. Austin, chief engineer of the Shenandoah National Park of the United States Bureau of Public Roads; Dr. H. J. Eckenrode, State historian of Virginia; E. G. Dodson, clerk of the Virginia House of Delegates, and former member of the State conservation commission; R. E. Burson, supervisor of State parks; H. K. Roberts, assistant supervisor of State parks; Dr. W. J. Showalter, of National Geographic Magazine.

Also Thomas L. Farrar, member of the State commisson on conservation and development; Albert Pike, of the United States Geological Survey; A. C. Ford, of Clifton Forge, donor of Douthat State Park; Dr. Roy L. Sexton, member of the Appalachian Trail Club; Oliver J. Sands, Richmond, bank president; D. L. Smith and J. O'Keefe of the Norfolk and Western Railway; Robert Fechner, commissioner of the Civilian Conservation Corps; J. W. Hancock, of the Appalachian Power Co.; J. Ambler Johnson, architect.

1934 Was Wet

Excess Rainfall Was 6.45 Inches, U. of V. Finds.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.). Meteorological statistics compiled at the University of Virginia Observatory show that the year 1934 was, as a whole, quite wet.

The precipitation for the past 12 months totaled 49.87 inches. The normal yearly rainfall for this section is 43.42 inches. The excess during 1934, therefore, was 6.45 inches.

The mean temperature for the 12 months was about normal, 56.6 degrees. The normal yearly mean is 57.1 degrees. The past year, therefore, was warmer by five-tenths of a degree.

During the extended drought in 1930, the precipitation fell off nearly half, the total being only 23.66 inches. The total in that memorable year, Dr. S. A. Mitchell, director of the observatory points out, is the same rainfall that London, England, gets in a normal year.

RED HILL, the old home and resting place of Virginia's famous Patrick Henry, again is being considered by Government officials for a national shrine. Senator Carter Glass and Congressman Thomas C. Burch recently visited the colonial mansion which is now owned by Mrs. M. B. Harrison, greatgrandaughter of the fiery author of the words "Give me liberty or give me death," to talk over possibilities of its purchase.

Located near Brookneal, Va., Red Hill embraces 1,000 acres. The original building burned 16 years ago and Mrs. Harrison has moved into the building which was used by Henry as a law office. The original boxwood, none of which has been removed, forms the most impressive part of the main grounds. Within the last year a wide boulevard has been built from the highway to the home. Natural white and pink dogwood have been planted along this approach through the aid of Federal funds. For a number of years the 1,000-acre run has been posted as a game retreat.

Richmond newspaper men went back to their desks empty handed New Year's Day, after their annual scouring of the city for the first-born babe of 1935. Presenting one of the most peculiar situations in years, none of the hospitals in the State capital reported any births.

Fearing a cold snap, a squirrel invaded the inner portals of the Department of Works Building in Capitol Square, Richmond. Emerging from behind a pile of blue prints and documents, Gamble Bowers, State assistant director of public works, gave chase to the squirrel, a menacing ruler in his hand. Complicating things, Superintendant of Streets Mason Harris was upset along with a bottle of mucilage in the skirmish. Then, with the opposition getting too strong, the frisky nut gatherer waved his tail and fled back to Capitol Square.

Charmed by the ramshackle old wooden houses of Virginia and the gracious and thoughtful conduct of the people, Gertrude Stein, famed modern literary pioneer, left the Old Dominion for New York. She will return in February for a lecture at the University of Virginia.

According to legal statistics in Lynchburg, Va., chances in that city are approximately 5 to 1 for a successful marriage. During 1935 there were 484 marriages and 90 separations.

Vote Voiding Met Protest, Court Hears

Annapolis Lawyer Says He Opposed Castoffs on Election Day.

Judges Agreed to Use Care, He Adds at Recount Trial.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 2 (AP).—Louis Strauss, Annapolis attorney, testifying today in the suit to break the tie which prevents either Roland Brown (Republican) or John J. Levay (Democrat) from taking office as county commissioner, declared he protested on election day the action of election judges whom he saw throw out a number of ballots.

After his protest he told Magistrate Thomas G. Basil, as a court stenographer took the testimony, that judges in the mountain road precinct agreed not to throw out any except those about which there could be no possible doubt as to the reason for the action.

Brown is bringing suit asking a petition for a recount of all ballots in Anne Arundel County. The official tally gave both contestants for the seat a vote of 7,512.

Charles Sherman, challenger during the November 6 elections in the First Precinct, Third District, testified that at one time challengers could not walk behind the judges and watch them count the ballots. Other witnesses stated this condition was later corrected.

Some witnesses charged that election clerks made arbitrary corrections in their tallies when discrepancies were found instead of recounting the ballots as required by law.

Thousands See Luray's Parade

Fire Department Sponsors Event; M. E. Emerson Captures Prize.

Luray, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Thousands of persons yesterday lined the streets of Luray watching this city's New Year parade, sponsored by the Luray Fire Department.

The parade started from the Page County courthouse. Passing through every street and avenue of the city, the paraders covered three miles.

M. E. Emerson, who had a team of four horses in the parade, won a prize of $5.00; the Rev. W. O. Luttrell, Luray Methodist minister, won $2.50 for having the best appearing automobile in the parade; $2.50 each was won by James Barham and Thomas Brubaker as the best horseback riders; Otis Rickard, as a bicycle rider, won a prize of $1.50; Miss Hilda Marston, Luray girl, captured a prize of $2.50 as the most comical pedestrian.

Lack of Money May Halt Reunion Of Gray Veterans

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 2 (AP).—In all Dixie today aged veterans who once fought for the South could find no city in which to marshal their slender forces this year.

They had chosen St. Petersburg, Fla., for their reunion in the spring. But from that city came word to Adjt. Gen. Harry Renelee, of the United Confederate Veterans, that it was compelled to withdraw the invitation because it had been found impossible to raise funds.

Temporarily, at least, this information left the old soldiers without a single city to turn to. They have received other invitations but all came from towns too small to handle reunion crowds.

"It's a pretty poor country if they can't take care of a handful of old soldiers," Renelee declared. "In all, there's only about 9,700 left. Of those not more than 1,000 would attend the reunion. There were 700 in Chattanooga last year."

In Chattanooga an invitation was presented them to meet in Washington in 1935. But Washington to them was still something of a "Yankee" city. They declined.

Bell Case Prosecutor Gets $132 Expenses

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.). Judge Frederick W. Coleman has entered an order in Corporation Court allowing Albert V. Bryan, special Commonwealth's attorney in the Bell poison trial, $132.63 for expenses he incurred in connection with his prosecution of the case. This item is to be paid by the State of Virginia, together with other costs which will amount to about $1,000.

Judge Coleman has not yet approved a fee for Mr. Bryan for prosecuting the case. It is understood determination of the fee will await further developments in the case.

Colored Captive Says He Was Shot Fighting Off Attacker.

Shift of Defense Surprise of Trial

Insanity Plea Is Out; Heavy Guard About the Courtroom.

Fincastle, Va., Jan. 2 (AP).—Asserting through his counsel that he did not murder two little Clifton Forge girls and did not criminally assault one of them as charged in indictments against him, Philip Jones, a Negro, today told the Fincastle court that to the contrary, he had received an ugly leg wound while trying to defend them from a white man.

T. Warren Messick, the defense attorney, in his opening statement, said:

"We expect to prove that (and then he named a man) a white man residing in the city of Clifton Forge was the one who attacked these little girls and that Jones was shot in the leg in a scuffle after he had gotten his gun and ran to their assistance."

A search of Clifton Forge by the city's own chief of police, W. H. Huffman, and his assistant, W. F. Knick, failed to reveal a man by the name given the court by the defense attorney. The officers found two men living near the residence described by the defense, and brought them here for a brief questioning by members of the State counsel. They denied any knowledge of the crime until after it had happened, and both asserted they were at home November 18, when the crime was committed. They were allowed to go home with the request that they appear as witnesses tomorrow.

Outside scores of persons, barred from the courtroom by State troopers who came armed with riot weapons, avidly discussed the case, unaware of the startling turn the trial had taken. They had expected the defense would be built around an insanity plea, but Messick announced that this "new development" had caused him to change his plans.

Accuses White Man.

Messick described the location of a house in which he said the man lived and asked that the State investigate his assertions with its law enforcement officers and bring this person "before this jury if necessary."

He said Jones and this white man had a business arrangement whereby Jones would get apples and the other would sell them. He said when the Negro went into the orchard he found this white man awaiting him. The latter was quoted as saying to Jones:

"I've got two damn brats tied up over there."

The attorney said the Negro found Ellen and Alice Hill, the two Clifton Forge girls, who later were found slain, tied to a tree. He said Jones freed them.

Messick, continuing his dramatic recital in a courtroom cleared of all persons save the jury, the defendant, court officials and newspapermen, quoted Jones as saying he then returned to his house.

Later, the attorney said, Jones, after hearing screams, ran to the place from which the cries came. The defendant was pictured as running to the scene, engaging in a scuffle with the white man and receiving a bullet wound in his leg in consequence.

Carried to Courtroom.

Jones, who has not recovered from the bullet wound, had to be carried to the second-floor courtroom in a chair. The panel of 20 men from which the jury of 12 was

Virginian Dead Of His Injuries In Motor Crash

W. T. Zimmerman, Hurt in Nelson County Accident, Succumbs.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.). Walker Thomas Zimmerman, of Waynesboro, who received a fractured skull and other injuries in an automobile accident in Nelson County Sunday, died yesterday at University Hospital.

Zimmerman was in a deep coma when he was taken to the hospital Sunday night. He remained in a semiconscious condition, and hospital attendants were able to get only the briefest information concerning him and the fatal accident.

Kyle Arthur, of Lyndhurst, Augusta County, who was admitted with Zimmerman, was reported to be in a serious condition today. He has a fractured arm, probably a broken neck and other injuries.

Mrs. Nannie B. Arnold.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.). Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Nannie B. Arnold, widow of James A. Arnold, who died at her home here Tuesday after an illness of three weeks.

Mrs. Arnold was born in Baltimore 74 years ago. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Nannie Barnes, member of a family well known throughout Maryland.

Four daughters survive.

Mrs. C. B. Vinson.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held Friday at 10 a. m. in Zullinger for Mrs. Clara May Heckman Vinson, 65, wife of C. B. Vinson, former resident of Washington, who died Monday afternoon of a heart attack.

Mrs. Katie F. Cooper.

Romney, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Mrs. Katie Fiedner Cooper, widow of Hiram Cooper, died of pneumonia late Monday night in the Cumberland Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Cooper spent her entire life in Romney and Hampshire County, until 11 years ago when she removed to Los Angeles, returning here for two months of each year to visit her daughters, Mrs. Georgia Myerly, in Cumberland, and Mrs. Louwilla Keister, in Romney. Two other children survive, Miss Viola Cooper and Herman Cooper, both of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Ida Willets.

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—A prayer service was held at Nor Dix Farm this afternoon for the late Mrs. Ida B. R. Willets, after which the remains were taken to Westbury, Long Island, where the funeral services will be conducted at 3 p. m. tomorrow from Church of the Advent.

Silas M. Richardson.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.). Funeral services for Silas M. Richardson, 60, retail merchant here 38 years, who died Monday, were conducted today.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Della Richardson, the following children: Mrs. J. M. Crim, of Miami, Fla.; C. M. Richardson, Mrs. W. G. Daniel, Miss Evelyn Richardson, of Lynchburg, and the following brothers and sister: S. T. Richardson of this city, G. W. Richardson, of Alexandria; J. H. Richardson, of Martinsville, and W. A. Richardson and Mrs. R. H. Wyatt, of this city.

A Wide Variety of "Super-Specials" Are on Film Release Schedules for 1935

Glimpse Ahead Holds Out the Usual Promise

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Now that the paper hats have been carefully stored away in the waste basket, the tin horns tenderly laid to rest in the ash can and the bull market in Bromo Seltzer brought under control, what is the likely film outlook for 1935, you ask? Or, if you do not care to ask it, I will. At any rate, let's pretend it has been asked.

Well, then, the promise for 1935 in the gelatin business seems to be for a greater variety of film product than for many years past, with particular emphasis on the so-called classics, a new and more widespread utilization of natural color photography—now that Technicolor has perfected its three-tone process—and bigger, better and more frequent all-star combinations on the acting side.

It is highly probable, as so habitually happens, that the productions most confidently expected to be the year's triumphs will turn out to be the season's monumental flops and that the obscure pictures of which little is expected will develop into what the box-office knows as "accidental hits." It is one of the axioms of the celluloid trade that there are more unexpected than planned screen successes.

Some 1934 Upsets.

Take the past season, for example; or don't take it, as you will. It will be forced on you, anyway. "The Thin Man," "Hideout," "The Pursuit of Happiness," "One Night of Love," "It Happened One Night" and numerous others of like ilk were made with the expectation of their being "good" pictures, but not the smash hits they proved, once the public had an opportunity to express its verdict.

Similarly, pictures that were supposed to be among the masterpieces fell far short of the goals at which they were aimed—"Gift of Gab," "Great Expectations," "Chu Chin Chow," "The Scarlet Empress" and many more. That's the way it goes in this fabulous, kaleidoscopic, whirling merry-go-round known as "show business."

But out of the welter of the 1934 season have come certain indications of what to expect in the new year. Grace Moore's overpowering triumph has made sure a continuance of the adaptation to the screen of the more malleable elements of grand opera; the sustained huzzas with which "La Cucaracha" was acclaimed assures a wider use of natural color as a valuable adjunct of realistic visual drama, and such four-star hits as "Forsaking All Others," to cite but one, make it reasonably certain that future releases of importance will be more or less packed with the biggest names the cinema can command.

What New Year Promises.

From the present outlook, the "super-specials" of which the new year is assured include "Becky Sharp," starring Miriam Hopkins, the first of the full-length features to be excuted entirely in the new Technicolor multiple-tone photography, coming from the RKO studios under the individual aegis of John Hay Whitney; "A Midsummer Night's Dream," the Shakespeare fantasy, brought to life under the supervision of Max Reinhardt on the Warner lot; "David Copperfield," by Charles Dickens, as a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production; "The Good Earth," M-G-M's picturization of Pearl S. Buck's novel of the same name; Cecil B. De Mille's pageant of "The Crusades;" Darryl Zanuck's celluloid rendition of S. Bulwer-Lytton's "Cardinal Richelieu," starring George Arliss, as a Twentieth Century production for United Artists release; Charlie Chaplin's new film, known now merely as "No. 5;" Universal's production of "Show Boat," with Irene Dunne, Charlie Winninger, Edna May Oliver and others of the stage cast, originally done with Laura La Plante and Joseph Schildkraut; Sam Goldwyn's "The Wizard of Oz," in the nature of another "Babes in Toyland;" "Anthony Adverse," the Warners' much-wrangled-over camera version of the interminable novel by Hervey Allen, and "Dante's Inferno," a hot number planned by Fox.

Perhaps it is not too early to begin making mind bets as to the "Ten best pictures of 1935!"

Tomorrow, by the way, is the day upon which Mr. Jack Alicoate, editor of Film Daily, who engineers the annual guessing bee, has sanctioned the publication in the press of the Nation the results of the country-wide poll of the critics as to the "Ten Best Pictures of 1934." These winning films, therefore, will be divulged in this space tomorrow morning, along with such comment as seems pertinent to the manner of their selection, the number of critics participating in the voting and other related matters. While this is but one of many lists of the "ten best" that find their way into print at about this time of year, it is the one that usually is most eagerly awaited by reason of the bona fide national point of view it so accurately reflects.

"When, As and If——"

A definite move is under way that may result in bringing Maude Adams, famous Frohman star and the foremost exponent of Barrie character the American stage has known, to the screen, according to authoritative advices that have just reached this desk from the West Coast.

Miss Adams, if present plans come to fruition, is to be presented on Broadway in a play bearing the title of "Re-Birth" in the spring. If it proves successful—as what of Miss Adams vehicles has not?—it undoubtedly will be transferred to the Pacific slope and an embryonic idea there exists that Fox will be interested in translating the piece into terms of celluloid drama with Miss Adams starred.

It will be recalled that some years ago Miss Adams became deeply interested in the development of color photography and her screen debut was variously whispered about at that time. Rumors, in point of fact, often have linked her name with some film production or other and it is known that many tempting offers have been made her to appear in pictures—or at least a picture.

Assuredly, it will be a coup of the first water when, as and if any company is able to announce Maude Adams as a screen star definitely articled to appear in a specific picture that actually will be made. The theater has had only one Maude Adams.

I hereby doff this year's practically new second-hand Knox to the discriminating judgment of Mr. Percy Burton, Mr. Maynard Owen Williams and those divers and sundry others, who, having seen "Laburnum Grove" in London, apprised me in advance that a treat was in store for all who might witness the performance of Edmund Gwenn in the stellar role of George Radfern in the J. B. Priestley comedy, current at the National.

These ardent disciples of the drama all erred on the side of understatement. Mr. Gwenn gives a performance the like of which hasn't been seen in farce since such artists as Willie Collier, the late William H. Crane, Roland Reed and others of their time lent their ample talents to the distinction of the theater of light comedy.

Mr. Gwenn adds to faultless reading a vast mobility of countenance, an infallible sense of timing and restores the eloquence of gesture to its rightful place as an indispensable aid to complete characterization. Not to see Mr. Gwenn—and his associate players, too, of course—in "Laburnum Grove" is to miss one of the acting treats of the season.

The Fox Triple-Threat.

The week of January 4 at Loew's Fox Theater will be a triple-threat week if any local theater ever has sprung one!

On the screen will be seen "The Mighty Barnum," a slightly distorted and thoroughly fictionized "biography" of the late Phineas T. Barnum, undisputed king of American showmen, with Wallace Beery in the title role and Adolphe Menjou, Janet Beecher and Rochelle Hudson in support. Gene Fowler, in his technically flawless script for this picture, has turned out an unimpeachable bit of "good theater," but an almost wholly counterfeit Barnum. However, that is beside the point.

It is on the stage that precedent is smashed to a fair approximation of smithereens. The major attraction, scheduled for the entire week, will be N. T. G.'s Paradise Cafe Revue, featuring Jay C. Flippen, one of the livelier comics, Vanessi, 36 N. T. G. beauties and various others. N. T. G., incidentally, would be Nils T. Granlund, a former motion picture publicist and latter-day Broadway impresario and Jersey gentleman farmer, who knows his craft all the way from "A" practically back to the celebrated "izzard."

Guy Lombardo Two Days.

On Wednesday and Thursday nights of next week at the Fox, the N. T. G. routine will be interrupted by the Guy Lombardo-Esso Marketers Revue, featuring Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, one of the best bands extant. These talented instrumentalists will put on two performances nightly both Wednesday and Thursday, instead of Wednesday only, as originally announced. Washington is the only city on their present itinerary that will be favored with two nights.

On Friday, Marie Fowler, singer, will be a feature of the stage bill and on Monday Jerry Farrell, baritone, also will take his place among the performing talent. Miss Fowler and Mr. Farrell are the winners of a recent N.B.S. radio contest in which Kate Smith was implicated in one way or another.

Quite an idea, this triple-threat week. To see it all, it will be necessary to go to the Fox at least three times.

The Columbia Players announce as their next production, "The Mask and the Face," by C. B. Fernald. The play will be given in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, Wednesday and Thursday nights, February 6 and 7. So now you know.

Misery-Loves-Company Note.

We have perpetrated some pretty terrible puns—"punks" we have frequently been told is the better word—in precisely this space, from time to time, but never anything any worse than W. C. Fields' latest.

The Mazda-nosed Mr. Fields recently announced that he had adopted a theme song for his seven-and-a-half acre orange ranch—it would be a grove any place else—near Encino, Calif.

"A theme song?" somebody echoed.

"Yes," replied the case-hardened comic without a blush. "It's 'Orange Juice Sorry You Made Me Cry?'"

That, of course, calls for peels of laughter!

Columbia

"IT'S A GIFT." Paramount picturization of a story by Charles Bogle and J. P. McEvoy; starring W. C. Fields, with Baby LeRoy, Jean Rouverol, Julian Madison, Tammany Young and Kathleen Howard. Directed by Norman McLeod.

It makes little difference whether W. C. Fields is called upon to play golf, make whooppee in New Orleans, or even go orange-farming in California, just so long as the journey is continually within the camera lines. Granting that, any Fields picture can be bought blind, and "It's a Gift" is no exception.

Take, for example, the situation of a successful failure in the country grocery business who suddenly becomes heir to a substantial sum which permits the gratification of a lifelong yen to own an orange farm. Add to that the fact that said orange farm, bought on the strength of a salesman's high-powered literature, turns out to be a stretch of land in a sun-parched desert, and there you have the set-up of this latest Fields opus.

Without the estimable Mr. Fields, this might not be so hot, but with him, it turns out to be a riot of laughs, with the star at his best.

The auxiliary features of the program that moved into the Columbia yesterday for three days well balance the major item, with "Marching With Science," "Magic Fish," a diverting Terry-Toon; "Three Cheers for Love," a song reel with Sylvia Froos, and the Metrotone News in a dead heat.

Baltimore.—Mrs. John Fox, hearing her 18-month-old baby scream, ran to him in time to see a large rat jump from the baby carriage in which he had been sleeping. The child was badly bitten on the face, hands and arm, but its condition was said not to be serious.

Baltimore.—State Bank Commissioner John N. Ghingher has issued calls to all State banks and trust companies for a statement of condition as of December 31. Mutual savings banks will make similar statements in due course as required by law.

Salisbury.—Edward L. Fontaine, crippled by infantile paralysis, will enter the Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia soon through the efforts of the Elks lodge here. Notification has been received today by Elks officials that their sponsorship of his treatment has been accepted.

Baltimore.—The Maryland Tuberculosis Society has reported that counties in the State purchased $29,779 worth of its Christmas seals this holiday season. For the counties and city $44,379 was realized. The association still needs $15,621 for its 1935 program and plans sending a reminder to 55,000 persons who received seals but failed in acknowledgement.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Sale of his prize-winning White Leghorn cockerel for $20 to a Southern poultry fancier was announced today by D. W. Benchoff, this city. The bird captured many awards at recent shows in Maryland.

On Local Screens Tomorrow

Jones Puts Blame On White Suspect drawn was selected before the luncheon recess.

The defense reply to the Commonwealth's charges came late in the afternoon after the prosecution in its opening statement had said Jones deliberately planned to assault criminally an older sister of the two girls and had called this sister, asking her to tell his wife he'd be home late.

M. J. Putnam, Commonwealth's attorney of Clifton Forge, said the older sister was not at home and the younger girls went to deliver the message.

He said he would show that the bodies of the two little girls, "their brains battered out," were found near the Negro's home and that a gun, still bloody and marked with feminine hair, was found hidden at Jones' home while the Negro himself was at a hospital after telling a doctor to bandage the injured leg "because he wanted to go to his old home in Buckingham County right away."

A commission of lunacy appointed by Judge Haden had found Jones "sane within the meaning of the law."

The State's first three witnesses were children: Tris Hill, 12, a sister of the slain children, and Marvin Powell, 15, and Martha Hartbarger, 17, acquaintances.

All three testified that when Jones called the Hill home he did not request a special trip up to his house, but invariably asked that the older sister, Gracie, deliver a message if she went up that way.

The only other witness of the day was W. T. Harnbarger, Chesapeake & Ohio Railway special agent, who described the finding of the bodies.

Soon after Mr. Messick had accused the Clifton Forge white man in his opening statement, officers from that city left Fincastle, where the trial was moved as a precaution against threatened violence, to investigate the charge. They had no warant, but State police guarding Jones said they understood the man would be asked to appear at the trial.

Every possible precaution was taken for the protection of Jones' life, which is at stake in the trial under the State's request for "extreme penalty"—electrocution — on the murder charge.

State police, acting under executive orders from Gov. Peery, formed a convoy which escorted the prisoner from the Roanoke Jail to the scene of the trial under command of Motor Vehicle Director John G. Rhodes and Capt. H. B. Nicholas.

There was no untoward incident during the day which saw a jury selected without great difficulty before the luncheon recess. Only five veniremen were dismissed before the panel of 20 was selected. One would not vote for capital punishment, one had visited the scene of the crime, and three had formed fixed opinions.

The unexpected turn of the defense today caused the counsel to give up their previous hope for a short trial and tonight they were predicting it would last "several days."

The jury was locked up in a Fincastle hotel.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Jan. 2.

Many readers have written in asking how they can become a member of the Movie Boner Club. There's nothing to it. All you have to do is send in a movie boner and have it printed and you're a member of the club. Others ask if club members are given a button or some other insignia. Your press clipping is your membership card; a printed flicker flaw and you win your letters.

Now, we must get on with the new business, for there are many movie fans whose bids for membership must be acknowledged. Alton Zucker wants to be a member, and believes that "College Rhythm" will gain him entry into the club. He says that in this flicker Joe Penner sells a parrot for $3. The customer gives Joe a bill in payment and then walks away. "Since when," asks Alton, "does the Government print three-dollar bills?"

In "By Your Leave," writes Charles Locke, Genevieve Tobin goes into a telephone booth which features a dial telephone to make a phone call. Of course, Genevieve deposits a coin—which is not unusual—but then, without dialing for the operator, she asks the operator for the number she desires. This is unusual and a good trick, too.

"What's the matter?" asks Locke. "Do they supply dials on telephones merely for appearance, or is the operator waiting for Genevieve Tobin's phone call?" Don't be angry with Miss Tobin, Mr. Locke. She made you a member of the Movie Boner Club.

WILLIAM POWELL, as a famous attorney in "Evelyn Prentice," writes L. Epstein—counselor at law—put the young lady charged with murder on the witness stand and requested her to tell her story. She naturally denied any complicity in the crime. Subsequently, Evelyn Prentice, played by Myrna Loy, interrupted the court proceedings and shouted that she had committed the murder. She was then questioned by the judge. Next, William Powell recalled his own witness—the original girl charged with the murder—and started to question her again. Suddenly he started shouting at her, making a grandstand play, and then began to cross-examine her.

Any law student, claims Mr. Epstein, knows that no lawyer may impeach his own witness, and he can not cross-examine his own witness. If he puts a witness on the stand and she answers a question put by him, he is bound by that answer. In fact, William Powell ought to know it as well as any lawyer, for he has played the role of lawyer and district attorney often enough.

When Gary Cooper gets off the train at the French depot in "Now and Forever," writes Raymond Potter, the clock reads 5:30. Then Gary hurries to Carole Lombard's apartment, and when seen there it is only 4:30, according to the clock there. Which should give you an idea of how Gary Cooper can hurry.

And it is Jackie Cooper showing Jackie Searl to his room in "Peck's Bad Boy," who picks up two valises and starts up the stairway, according to Bibie. Cooper, holding the valises, is followed up the stairs by Searl, who is empty-handed. At the top of the stairs, however, Jackie Searl is carrying the valises and Jackie Cooper is empty-handed.

RICARDO CORTEZ, in "Hat, Coat and Glove," writes the name "Du Barry" in his vestpocket loose-leaf notebook. A close-up, observed by Bernard Dahlstrom, shows that Cortez wrote the name in a very nervous penmanship and with a light mark of the pencil. Later, in court, Cortez refers to this same notebook, and tears out the page with the word "Du Barry" written on it. The close-up this time discloses that the handwriting is firmer, heavier—having been done with a darker pencil.

Both of the close-ups are what is technically known as an insert. Two inserts were used and they were written by two different people. It is a very slight error and the producers never gave it a thought. They had their eye on the box office, while Bernhard had his on the picture.

GRETA GARBO'S "The Painted Veil" has a flicker flaw, according to Eileen Best, who wishes to be in the Movie Boner Club.

"Now," asks Miss Best, "a girl certainly wouldn't go away on a honeymoon without taking any clothes with her—or maybe the movies are right, and that's exactly how a modern gal would go?"

Waynesboro Fire Loss Highest in Three Years

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—While comparatively small, the fire loss in Waynesboro in 1934 was the highest since 1931, Chief Engineer Charles E. Shoemaker of the fire department announced today. The loss was $2,195.47, compared with $1,465 in 1933.

Entailing the greatest single loss was the explosion and fire at the Bock cleaning and pressing plant, where fire caused damage estimated at $675.

Cigarettes and Cigars.

New York, Jan. 2.—The broad trend of cigarette withdrawals will doubtless continue upward. Small year-to-year gains in cigar consumption are expected over the immediate future.

Brumback Named A Master Teacher

Agriculture Instructor Is Advised of Honor.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Lacy O. Brumback, vocational agriculture instructor at Beverly Manor High School, Staunton, and at the Middlebrook School, has been adjudged master vocational agriculture teacher in northern Virginia, according to an announcement made today by D. J. Howard, supervisor for the northern Virginia district including 25 counties.

Mr. Brumback, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Brumback, of Woodstock, is a graduate of Handley High School, class of '26. In 1930 he was graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, after which he accepted an appointment to the school at Stuarts Draft in Augusta County. He also served at the Middlebrook school and subsequently, so great was the demand for his time, the Augusta County board agreed to permit him to devote part of his time at Spottswood.

Mr. Brumback has made considerable progress in developing leadership in his students, Mr. Howard said. One of them, William Brookes, of Stuarts Draft, was awarded the degree of American farmer during the past summer.

Church Benefit Free-for-All Nets Virginian Term

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Layton Hensley, 57, farmer, pleaded guilty to assault in Rockingham Circuit Court today and was sentenced to six months in jail by Judge H. W. Bertram, to complete another chapter in the famous Athlone Church benefit cakewalk in 1933.

Hensley was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary last year but won a new trial on a technicality. He was charged with beating Grover Phillips. Hensley faces another charge of beating Jubal Fries. A hung jury was the result of the first trial.

Hurtle Hensley, son of Layton, testified at his father's trial that he wielded a fence paling which caused the wounds. Hurtle later received a 12-month sentence and a $500 fine for assaulting George Liskey. The victims of the free-for-all fight have filed suits against Layton Hensley for personal injuries.

Marks 50 Years As Aid of Bank

J. W. Cunningham With Institution Since 1885, Now Is Cashier.

Westminster, Md., Jan. 2 (AP).—John W. Cunningham is celebrating today the fiftieth anniversary of his service with the Farmers and Mechanics National Bank of Westminster.

He joined the bank's staff in 1885 as teller, and in 1891 succeeded his father as cashier. Cunningham has held that position ever since.

He carried Carroll County for State comptroller on the opposition ticket, but lost in the State when Gov. Harrington was elected. He served for five years as surveyor of the port in Baltimore. President Harding appointed him to the post and President Coolidge made a reappointment.

His chief concern has been the bank, which Cunningham has seen grow from an institution with $50,000 in deposits to its present $1,150,000. The cashier and his wife entertained the bank's officials last night in honor of the anniversary.

Carnera Rated Baer's Chief Rival in Annual Rankings

List Reveals Hamas No. 3 Heavy

Rosenbloom Dropped to 4th; Thil Is Picked Ahead of Yarosz.

By Edward J. Neil.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (AP).—Only four fistic champions—Max Baer, Barney Ross, Freddy Miller and Panama Al Brown—stand out so completely in their classes that "The Ring Boxing Magazine," in its tenth annual rating of the cauliflower fields, sets them in a class by themselves on the basis of 1934 accomplishments.

For the greatest single achievement of the year the ring awards the palm to Ross, the lightweight king, who stepped up a class and whipped Jimmy McLarnin for the welterweight championship, first titleholder of his weight ever to accomplish that feat. McLarnin later won his title back, but the magazine brackets Ross with him in the first division of the welterweights.

Olin Best of Class.

While Baer stands alone at the head of the heavyweights, with Primo Carnera, Steve Hamas, Art Lasky and Max Schmeling rated in that order behind him, the next heaviest champion, Bob Olin of the light heavyweights, shares his first division with three others. Olin, who beat Maxie Rosenbloom for the 175-pound title in the closing days of the year, tops group one with John Henry Lewis, Phoenix, Ariz., Negro, rated second; Joe Knight, of Daytona Beach, Fla., third, and Rosenbloom fourth.

Only one European, Marcel Thil, of France, heads a division. He tops the middleweight with Teddy Yarosz, of Pittsburgh, recognized generally in the United States as champion, second. Midget Wolgast, of Philadelphia, world champion of the all but nonexistent flyweight class, shares the first division with Jackie Brown, of England, and Benny Lynch, of Scotland.

Group 2 among the lightweights provided the ring with as many problems in rating them as it has the boxing commissions that have sought to pick Ross' outstanding challenger. Tony Canzoneri, former champion, is at the head of the second group, with Frankie Klick, of San Francisco, second; young Peter Jackson, Los Angeles Negro, third; Sammy Fuller, of Boston, fourth, and Lou Ambers, of Herkimer, N. Y., fifth.

Miller Was Busiest.

Freddy Miller, of Cincinnati, busiest of all the champions, stands alone in the first featherweight group, as does Panama Al Brown among the bantams. Neither is recognized as world champion by the New York State Athletic Commission, although the National Boxing Association accepts the claims of both. Miller and Brown did most

Robinson, Tulane, Fractures Skull

Star Center Is Injured in Sugar Bowl Clash.

New Orleans, Jan. 2 (AP).—The shouting and the tumult had died today, the captains and the teams had departed, but the thrilling afterglow of the maiden Sugar Bowl football game lingered on.

Coaches, promoters, players and fans alike agreed that the inaugural Sugar Bowl clash, which saw Tulane come from behind in a spectacular finish to beat Temple, 20 to 14, was all that could be desired in gridiron entertainment, and it seemed certain tonight that the Bowl game will become an annual event for New Orleans.

There was one dark cloud today in New Orleans against the otherwise bright horizon in the tidings from a local hospital that Homer Robinson, Tulane's all-Southeastern center and one of the defensive stars of the game, had received a serious skull fracture, instead of minor injuries as at first believed in the game yesterday.

The Mid-winter Sports Association, sponsors of the game, today checked the till and announced that gross receipts of the game totaled $61,500, of which each team received $21,740, representing 40 per cent of the net.

Baer Dons New Role; Kidding Days Over

Champion to Tend Strictly to Business; Ready to Fight Anybody.

DETROIT, Jan. 2 (AP).—"Maxie the Magnificent" hasn't turned over a new leaf—he's thrown the whole book away.

That's what the "Livermore larruper"—otherwise Max Adelbert Baer, world's heavyweight title holder, said today as he lambasted the heavy bag in great earnestness as part of his training for an exhibition in which he is appearing here Friday night on a card headlined by Joe Louis and Patsy Perroni.

"No more jams, no more lawsuits and no more smart ones," said the grinning Max, when asked how many New Year's resolutions he had broken the first two days of 1935. "No kidding, boy, I'm bucklin' down to business this year."

Whom did he consider the leading challenger for his title?

"There is no standout," he answered. "I figure Primo Carnera, Max Schmeling and Steve Hamas the three top contenders. Carnera is big, tough and lion-hearted. So is Schmeling. I fought them both and I should know. I don't know much about Hamas, but from all I understand, he is a polished boxer with a pretty good punch.

Will Fight Anybody.

"No, there is no bout in sight with any of the three. Perhaps, when the time comes, there will be another fighter overshadowing them. I'll fight anybody that the public will go for."

Was he serious about fighting Hamas and Art Lasky on the same night?

"Absolutely. Why not? That's something that the fight game needs, something different. And I'd knock them both out."

Baer looks as though he could do it. He was dripping wet after finishing with the bag, punctuating vicious rights and lefts with remarks such as "that's the one I gave Levinsky for trying to cop a sneak on me" and "that'll finish him off right now."

Maybe the grinning, wise-cracking Maxie has suddenly grown up. Then again, maybe he hasn't—the new year isn't very old.

Giants Again Plan Long, Hard Series

New York, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—The New York Giants, heedless of allegations that their long 36-game training schedule last year burned out the players before the season started, have lined up a schedule of 37 exhibition games for 1935.

The New Yorkers open against the Athletics at Miami Beach, March 8, and with only two days off, play continuously until they wind up against Army at West Point on April 15, the day before the regular season opens.

Again Bill Terry and his outfit will join the Cleveland Indians and make a circus tour of Dixie, playing 15 games in Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, North Carolina, Virginia and finally New York. Other exhibition opponents will be the Athletics, Browns, Red Sox, Cardinals, Reds, Memphis, Nashville and Army.

Passing of Alabama Avid Topic on Coast

PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 2 (AP).—Western football followers still were talking to themselves today and the mumblings were about Alabama, greatest passing team ever to set cleated feet in Rose Bowl turf.

While the opinions concerning Dixie Howell and his Crimson Tide teammates were somewhat varied, the thought was the same—that it would be a long time before another exhibition of ball throwing like that of Coach Frank Thomas' eleven would be seen on the Pacific seaboard.

There was some criticism of Stanford's pass defense as the Indians went down to their 29-to-13 defeat, but in the main the praises heaped upon Howell, Don Hutson, most prolific receiver, and the rest of the Red regiment outnumbered the jabs taken at the game, fighting, tribesmen of Palo Alto.

Coaches Laud Pair.

Coach Bill Spaulding of the University of Southern California at Los Angeles joined with Howard Jones, of Southern California, in the opinion that the best set-up protection against Howell's accurate tosses and Hutson's remarkable catches hardly would be adequate.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—A clever and speedy West Virginia University basket ball team scored a 39-to-29 victory over the University of Maryland quint here tonight at the State Armory before about 1,000 persons.

The College Park team was really outclassed, although there were only ten points difference in the score. The Morgantown outfit, coached by Marshall "Little Sleepy" Glenn, had two crack shots in Jack Gocke, forward, and Joe Stydahar, center, each making five field goals. Albert Waters and William Andorka were Maryland's best bets, the pair collecting 22 points between them.

The Mountaineers took the lead at the start of the fray and stayed ahead the entire way. A lead of 9 to 0 was piled up before the Old Liners broke into the scoring column. The half-time count was 15 to 10.

Maryland in Rally.

Maryland showed signs of life in the second period and pulled up within three points of knotting the score on several occasions, but with the figures 23 to 20, West Virginia spurted and led 31 to 22, with ten minutes remaining.

Maryland got few shots as the alert Mountaineers guarded closely. The zone defense of Maryland gave little trouble as the winners unleashed a clever passing attack and soon had the College Park crew bewildered. Many times Maryland experienced difficulty in getting the ball past the center line, the Mountaineers rushing the player with the ball.

Vic Willis and Stydahar waged a hard battle at center. They secured the tip an equal number of times but the fast West Virginia forwards took possession of the ball on most occasions, regardless of who got the jump.

Tonight's contest was the third between the teams and gives West Virginia 2-1 edge in the series. The clubs played here last year, the Mountaineers winning.

Boom in Tennis Is Expected By Tilden

Pro Ranks Especially to Show Gains This Year, He Claims.

(Note: This is the first of a series of stories by Associated Press staff sports writers, outlining the features of 1935 prospects.)

By Bob Cavagnaro.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (AP).—To William T. (Big Bill) Tilden, the new year looks like a boom in tennis for the United States, especially in the newlyy augmented professional ranks.

The veteran, now preparing to start his fourth annual country-wide barnstorming tour, believes the rival amateur and professional forces soon will patch up their differences and reach a working agreement that will remove the friction between them. Specifically Tilden has in mind that some conflict in tournament dates may be avoided. For the future, he thinks a national open championship is bound to come, although it has been sidetracked so far.

"There's another development pointing to a big year. In my opinion the amateur game is possibly better organized, with the parent United States Lawn Tennis Association getting more cooperation from the district groups, and certainly the professional game is far better organized than it was a year ago."

Start Tour Wednesday.

Next Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden the 41-year-old Tilden, along with Ellsworth Vines, George Martin Lott, jr. and Lester Rollo Stoefen, the latter two America's lone point winners in the 1934 Davis Cup challenge round against England, open up an 80-city tour.

Tilden is aging in years only. He looks, feels and acts healthy. What's more he's still willing to start an argument or join one. Off the courts he and Lott exchange the pleasantries of the day and that's about all.

Cards Send 2 Hurlers To Farm at Rochester

St. Louis, Jan. 2 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals today released Pitchers Glen Spencer and Clarence Heise to Rochester, of the International League, a Red Bird farm.

Last season Spencer was with Houston, of the Texas League, and Heise performed at Columbus, of the American Association.

Catholic Adds N. C. State to Grid List

W. Virginia Wesleyan Also to Be Met; Duquesne Game Shifted.

ARTHUR J. "DUTCH" BERGMAN, director of athletics at Catholic University, yesterday had two new opponents on his 1935 grid list, and a somewhat revised program. But, to all intents, the change was for the better, from a C. U. viewpoint.

Newcomers added to the schedule are North Carolina State and West Virginia Wesleyan. State will play the Redbirds Thanksgiving Day at Griffith Stadium. Duquesne, originally assigned this date, requested that the game be shifted to Pittsburgh, October 11, and be played at night. Bergman readily agreed to this.

Wesleyan will meet the Cards November 9 at Catholic U. Stadium, unless the game is played Friday night, when it will be moved into the ball park. C. U. last met Wesleyan in 1919, when the Bobcats won, 38-0. They met in 1915 and again West Virginia triumphed, 10-0.

In its incomplete form Catholic U.'s schedule now contains five games, including La Salle and Western Maryland. Bergman may fill the September 28 date, which immediately precedes the La Salle game.

La Salle went undefeated during the past season. The only blemish on its record was a 6-6 tie with Catholic. All others scheduled thus far enjoyed successful campaigns and have good prospects for another banner season in 1935.

Catholic's last engagement with North Carolina late in 1931 resulted in a 12-7 win for the District eleven.

Schoenfeld, of G. W., Suffers Ankle Injury

George Washington's court squad was reduced by one yesterday when Milt Schoenfeld turned his ankle in practice. One of the Colonials' best men against Indiana, the half-pint guard will be lost for the Drake game Saturday night at Tech High School.

Dallas Shirley, whom Schoenfeld replaced in the line-up, probably will resume his old post Saturday. Drake has not been impressive on its Eastern tour and G. W. expects to take them in stride. But Coach Roland Logan is far from overconfident.

George Washington's game with Baltimore, originally scheduled Friday, has been moved back to February 18. It will be played at G. W.

Bears to Play Giants On Coast January 27

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP).—The Chicago Bears of the National Professional Football League will play a series of three of four post season games in Los Angeles this month, one of them against the New York Giants, January 27.

Owner George Halas, of the Bears, said his team would meet the Chicago Cardinals January 13, the West Coast all-stars January 19 and possibly another team in addition to the Giants, who upset the Bears in the final championship game last month.

Club 'Nearly Broke Even,' Is Report

Griffith 'Satisfied' With Financial Statement for Campaign.

By Shirley L. Povich.

FOR the fourth consecutive year the Washington Baseball Club failed to declare a dividend at the annual meeting of the stockholders yesterday, despite the $250,000 received by the club from the Boston Red Sox in the Joe Cronin deal last October.

President Clark Griffith, who engineered the $250,000 deal, declared that the team "nearly broke even" on the season and expressed himself as "pretty well satisfied" with the 1934 financial statement of the club.

Notwithstanding failures during the season, which saw the team finish in seventh place, the Nats were second to the New York Yankees in point of gate receipts for games played on the road, according to data revealed at the recent American League meeting and the record price received in the Cronon trade had heightened hopes of a 1934 dividend.

Directors Reelected.

The club's board of directors, Griffith, William Richardson, of Philadelphia, and Edward B. Eynon, jr., were reelected. They will appoint the club's officers. Griffith again is slated to be president, with Richardson as vice president and treasurer, and Eynon as secretary and business manager. They hold the majority of stock.

Griffith has been president of the Washington club since 1919, when he succeeded Benjamin S. Minor, Washington attorney. He first joined the Nats in 1912 as manager, coming to Washington from Cincinnati, where he had piloted the Reds. He is the largest single stockholder and holds the controlling interest.

Last Melon in 1931.

The last dividend of the Washington team was declared in 1931 and was followed by a lean year in 1932. Despite the American League pennant triumph of the Nats in 1933 and the club's profits of a five-game world series, the club that season failed to declare a dividend.

The peak years of the Washinton club financially were 1924 and 1925, when Bucky Harris led the team into two world series, both of which required seven games, with resultant profits to the club.

Football Crowds Increase in South

Ga. Tech's Losing Eleven Shows Big Gain.

Atlanta, Jan. 2 (AP).—With a few exceptions attendance and receipts during the 1934 gridiron season in the Southeastern Conference increased strikingly over the previous year.

At least nine of the 13 schools in the group reported greater totals for the season, while three announced attendance was about the same as in 1933 and one said the number fell off some, but that authorities were pleased with the showing.

Strangely, Georgia Tech, with the worst record of the year, showed the largest percentage of increase in attendance. The Yellow Jackets played before 162,748 fans in 1934, as compared with 126,000 in 1933, although bowing in defeat nine straight times after winning the opener with Clemson.

Tulane's Green Wave played before the greatest number of patrons, 181,000 paying to see the New Orleans eleven in action, as compared to 154,000 in 1933.

Phelps, Catcher, Sold To Dodgers by Cubs

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP).—Gordon Phelps, portly Cub second-string catcher, today was sent to the Brooklyn Dodgers for the waiver price of $6,000.

The Cubs now have disposed of the three heavyweights of the 1934 team—Pitchers Pat Malone, Bud Tinning and Phelps. Their combined weight was approximately 700 pounds.

Grid Crowd Appeal Title to Stanford

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (AP).—With the college football campaign concluded by an exciting New Year's Day climax, Stanford University emerges with the season's honors in "crowd appeal," although yielding intersectional laurels to Alabama's aerial circus.

Unofficial figures, compiled today by the Associated Press, show Stanford played before approximately 450,000 spectators in ten games. The Rose Bowl crowd of 85,000 was "tops" for the Palo Alto Indians as well as for the entire season. Its closest rivals were the Army-Notre Dame game at the Yankee Stadium, which drew a capacity house of 81,000, and the Army-Navy battle in the mud at Philadelphia, which attracted 78,000.

Players Should Split $250,000 Rose Bowl 'Gate,' Says Powers

By Jimmy Powers.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Pasadena politicians, parade officials, underwriters, scalpers, railroad commission agents, hotel stewards and athletic budgets—which include 20 coaching pay checks at Stanford and Alabama—will divvy most of the $250,000 Rose Bowl loot. We think this is wrong. We think the money should be divided among those who created it. It would comprise a tidy fortune for each member of the two football squads and it might be the making each year of important young lives in our future economic or social scheme. We think these young men—the majority of them seniors—would make much better use of the money in the scattered towns to which they would take it than all the Pasadena politicians and "amateur" athletic board holders.

Rich men's sons when they are graduated from college go into their fathers' offices. There the old gent congratulates them, buys them the customary gold wrist watch, writes out a nest-egg check of $5,000, or so, and tells them to start up in business somewhere. If they are doctors, lawyers or dentists, which are slow-starting professions, they can live on the money until their practice develops.

Poor men's sons ought to have the same advantage. Before 1935 there was no widespread provision for

Meade Returns to Saddle to Ride Dancing Doll to Victory in Tropical Sprint

Abner Runs Second to 9-1 Shot

Hardware Pays $131.90 Mutuel in Startling Upset in Second.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan 2 (AP).—A. W. Abbott's filly, Dancing Doll, upset calculations here this afternoon when she accounted for top honors in the five and a half furlongs of the Istokpoga Handicap, for 3 year olds exclusively. Don Meade, out of action since the close of the Maryland season, gave the daughter of Strolling Player-Silver Slippers a perfect ride to get the $19.80 for two shot home by a length and a half in 1:06.

Four Florida derby candidates were next in line, while Wittekind completed the field in sixth and last place. Dewey Bentham's Abner, the favorite, was second, three lengths before the two-time winner, Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Enthusiasm. B. B. Stable's Good Harvest, making his local bow, was a fast going, but nonthreatening fourth.

Enthusiasm, possessed of high early foot, ran into a wide lead, but Meade had Dancing Doll under light restraint in second position. The Bradley contract rider asked Dancing Doll for her best approaching the stretch turn. The Abbott representative picked up Enthusiasm and held on gamely to the end. Abner found his best stride too late, but he was an easy second.

Dark War Easy Winner.

Dark War, $5.20 for $2 favorite with the efficient Eddie Arcaro in the saddle, won the six furlong curtain raiser in a common gallop. The mare overtook Proteus early and just toyed with the field, winning by five lengths over the sluggish beginning Thundertone, a long shot. Vishnu, a factor throughout, was beaten a half length for the place. Black Song, while running fifth at the half-mile pole, broke down, interfering with horses behind him. The gelding broke a leg and it was reported he had to be destroyed.

Hardware, 3-year-old gelding from Walter O'Mara's Araho Stable, shocked the talent when he battled his way to a hard earned triumph in the second race, paying $131.90 for $2. This was the second longest priced winner of the meeting. Jockey Haines brought the outsider up with a rush around the final bend and in a long drive his mount prevailed by a half length over the pace-setting M. J. Brennan. Air Line, coupled with Mettle, was headed for secondary honors.

Brush Past Wins at 5 to 1.

Brush Past, well ridden by the veteran Jimmy Smith, drove first home in the mile of the third. He was a 5-to-1 chance. Phara, the choice, was next in line, three parts of a length behind and the same margin before Long Count. Brush Past went to the front in the first quarter and drew clear. Phara lost ground, but closed steadily and extended the winner to the limit.

Feudal Lord, $8.80, had the best of a fighting finish in the fourth. The gelded son of Stefan the Great was up to defeat a pair of outsiders. Fredrick was beaten a half length, while saving the place by a head from Chatterdoo. Night Sprite, probably short, folded up after setting the early pace, and Feudal Lord, closing fast on the outside, prevailed over Fredrick and the fast-closing Chatterdoo.

Marge Beats Platers.

Marge made her own pace and held command over ten other platers in the one mile of the sixth event. Nursed along in front by Johnny Gilbert, the Macaw filly stuck it out in a drive to score by daylight over Relativity, paying $13.00.

Do You Know Your 1934 Racing?

Who Was Leading Jockey? Name the Year's Best 3-Year Old Racer.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 2 (AP).—Who was the outstanding jockey of 1934, the best 3-year-old, the most memorable event on American tracks?

These and other questions are asked and answered wherever and whenever the followers of the bangtails gather.

Questions.

1. Who was the outstanding thoroughbred of 1934, any age?
2. The outstanding horse of the older division?
3. The 1934 juveniles most likely to go on to greatness in the 1935 3-year-old classic?
4. The biggest upset of the year?
5. The greatest race by any thoroughbred?
6. The most promising apprentice jockey?
7. The most capable full-fledged rider?
8. The most memorable losses resulting from accidents?
9. Best ride by any jockey?
10. Most lamentable disqualification?
11. The most unusual disqualification?
12. The most important developments?

Answers.

1. Cavalcade, by himself.
2. Still the mighty, if unsound Equipoise.
3. A tough one to answer, but Commonwealth, Balladier, Chance Sun and Omaha, with Nellie Flag from the filly division. At the end of the New York season, Chance Sun and Balladier rated tops. But Maryland fall racing brought out Commonwealth. Balladier was unlucky; Chance Sun started in slop and mud; Commonwealth made his name in clean-cut fashion.
4. Defeat of Equipoise by Okapi and All Forlorn in Narragansett special.
5. Wheatley Stable's Dark Secret. Stood long drive in long race to win by narrow margin in Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont Park, broke down after passing finish line and had to be destroyed.
6. Maurice Peters.
7. Silvio Coucci. Then Wayne Wright and Don Meade.
8. The fatal injuries to Jockey Dominick ("Duke") Belizzi, who was unseated by Psychic Bid. The death of Chase Me, former saddle horse pet that met death through fall while trying to protect an unbeaten record against Equipoise in the Metropolitan.
9. Silvio Coucci's ride on Ladysman when he beat Equipoise in the Suburban by inches.
10. Equipoise's disqualification after his hard-earned victory over Mr. Khayyam in the Metropolitan.
11. The disqualification of all three placed horses and consequent moving up of last three horses in a six-horse race at Saratoga.
12. New York's open betting and other legislation opening up new avenues for racing in that State; antidoping measures taken against narcotic users; success of Narragansett's new plant; development of racing, with big winter stakes, in California; cooperation among State Racing Commission.

Few Candidates Reported in Running for Houghton's Pro Golf Post at Kenwood

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

JUST before Kingfish Levinsky went out the other evening—out cold—it seems that he stood in midring and made so bold as to motion Max Baer to "come on in and fight," a passage that is providing this department with its text this morning.

BAER.

You know what happened to Levinsky. Mad Maxie simply accepted his invitation with enthusiasm, with the net result that two minutes later Levinsky was getting a worm's-eye view of the ceiling. In fact, nothing would have served the Kingfish's handlers quite as well as a net as they attempted to move the inert mass that had been Levinsky to his corner at the end of the fight.

The incident, however, reminds this department of that September evening more than six years ago when a chap named Dempsey also stood in a Chicago ring and also sneered at a world champion and also motioned with his gloved hands for the world champion to "come on in and fight."

IT was in the seventh round and the back-pedalling Gene Tunney was of no mind to fight at the moment. He had just picked himself up out of the resin after the providential 14-count and was still preoccupied with the cobwebs in his brain, but, presently, he would resume fighting.

In the eighth round, Tunney accepted Dempsey's invitation and and Dempsey's battered face was mute, if horrible, testimony that Tunney accepted with great enthusiasm. In those last three rounds, Dempsey absorbed the worst beating of his fistic career, and I make so bold as to say that only a Dempsey would have been on his feet at the finish.

Somewhere in all this there ought to be a moral. So, thumbing the first chapter of "Sock in the Book of St. Pug," we find it written thusly: "And the challenger invited the world champion to come on in and fight and he was soundly thumped for his brashness."

Coast Lures Pro Teams.

I SEE by the papers that the Chicago Bears and New York Giants are crossing paths on their football barnstorming trip along the Pacific Coast and have signed to play each other in San Francisco on January 27. It seems that the pros have heard about the 85,000 fans who paid their way into the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena and the 55,000 who clicked through the turnstiles at the East-West game at San Francisco the other day.

If there is all that football interest inhabitating California, then the pros, assuredly, can not be blamed for catering to ready cash. There are some, doubtless, who will be so unkind as to say that the Bears and the Giants, who staged the thriller for the national professional title in New York, are prostituting their fame by such nontitle exhibitions, but that should hardly worry them.

The Bears and the Giants are responsible to no alumni or athletic councils, and the only passing marks they are interested in are those that can be translated into yardage. They will give Coast football the kind of football it has never been their pleasure to watch. California fans will be paying for services rendered and as long as they are willing to pay, why, the pros are doubtless willing to play.

financial backing. Now there is a yearly Rose Bowl game with a gate of $250,000 at Pasadena, Calif., a Sugar Bowl game with a gate of $120,000 at New Orleans, an Orange Bowl gate of $80,000 at Miami, an East-West All-Star gate of $110,000 at San Francisco, and a barnstorming gate totaling $50,000 at least in the Hawaiian Islands between the University of California and the universities of Hawaii and Honolulu. There are other winter excursions of American colleges to Havana, Cuba and Mexico City, all reaping ripe profits for their promoters. These post-season games bring in cash over current budgets. Where there wasn't any football money to speak of around after December 1, there is now a sudden, mighty Midas fortune. We say the boys who created it have a moral right to it.

To avoid giving up this money, the professional coaches, politicians and promoters will holler like the very devil to protect their increased incomes. Their big argument will be that they are giving a poor boy a chance to earn a college education. Any poor boy who has been in college in these days of high pressure football knows this is silly. Members of the Alabama, Temple, Bucknell, Stanford and Tulane squads are strangers to most of their classmates. They scarcely have been able to identify their seats in the lecture halls.

From September to January 1 big-time football takes them onto the practice field most of the afternoon and so far into the night that every big college has installed field floodlights. Big-time football takes them in and out of infirmaries and on sleeper jumps from Oregon to Cambridge, from Miami to Los Angeles. Most schedules carry through to December and the big schools always arrange a January first date if possible. That leaves one semester for study, doesn't it? Well, spring training begins on March 1.

Perhaps this explains why so few football players make good in afterlife. Some of them manage to do as Ed Garbisch did; he married Walter P. Chrysler's daughter. Unfortunately, there are more all-Americans than there are millionaires. Sooner or later the social register, which is no Ziegfeld chorus to begin with, runs out of good-looking and marriageable young women.

The football player, we maintain, receives a hodge-podge college education. Two years ago a comic magazine ordered a girl stenographer to copy down a speech made by Coach Hunk Anderson. It was so full of grammatical errors it sounded like a section foreman's address to his new track-walkers. Yet Hunk, the records show, had been duly presented with a bachelor of laws degree by Notre Dame University. Two stars of the Big Three were found recently with picks and shovels digging Arizona pipe-line ditches. Red Grange is pensioned off on a pro bench and works, out of season, in a grubby Florida night club. We see hundreds of others pumping up gasoline, squirting oil into tourists' motors or puddling steel. If we ask them what they did with their college education they shrug their shoulders as Jim Thorpe did when he was discovered behind a mule on the hurricane deck of a battered grocery cart. Jim just grinned and said, "You wouldn't kid the horse troops, would you, pally?"

Rivers-Calp Matched On Auditorium Card

California Joe Rivers, recent winner over LeRoy Dougan on a technical knockout, has been booked to oppose Calvin Calp, of Balitmore, in a six-round preliminary to the Eddie Burl-Pete Sarron bout at the Auditorium next Tuesday night.

Rivers made an auspicious debut by flooring Dougan several times before the referee finally called a halt. Calp went the distance against Norment Quarles, former North Carolina University boxing ace, in a recent bout at the Riding and Hunt Club.

Other supporting bouts signed so far will find Bob Lowry pitted against Jimmy Jones in an eight-round semifinal and Mickey Flannigan pegging away at Henry Irving in a special five-rounder. An opening four is in the making.

W. L. Invades Hyattsville Tomorrow

Game to Mark Opening of Inter-Suburban Court League.

THE newly formed interurban high school league that includes teams from Hyattsville, of Prince Georges County; Silver Spring of Montgomery County; Washington and Lee from Arlington County and Alexandria, from Alexandria City, will open tomorrow afternoon a Hyattsville when Washington and Lee visits in the inaugural contest.

Both of the schools playing tomorrow are believed to be weaker than usual, but evenly matched. The visitors hold a win over Falls Church but bowed to G. W. Frosh and the Alumni by wide margins. Hyattsville eked out a win over the Charlotte Hall five but was trounced by its Alumni. Alexandria, on its preholiday performances, appears to be the class of the league. Silver Spring has lost three straight after a good start against weak teams.

The league, that originally included eight teams, has narrowed down to four. Several other schools are desirous of entering next year, including Mount Rainier, Bethesda, Falls Church, Lee-Jackson and others.

Basket ball is the only sport definitely decided upon although there is a possibility that a baseball schedule and track meet will be held in the spring.

Athletic Director W. A. Richardson, of Washington and Lee, president of the league, announced that a meeting will be held for coaches of the member schools in the near future.

Board Deadlocked.

Detroit, Jan. 2 (AP).—The board of governors of the International Hockey League wound up its all-day meeting here tonight, hopelessly deadlocked on the enforcement of the league's amateur rule.

Va. Beach Bid May Attract Local Ace

Belshe Is Due to Succeed Verhoff as Head of Association.

By Dave Herman.

THE professional's job Al Houghton has given nu at Kenwood Golf and Country Club is attracting few applicants.

From the Kenwood office yesterday it was announced that only six applicants had been received, two being from out of town. Until the time comes to name the new professional, strict secrecy regarding the candidates will be maintained, the Kenwood golf committee, headed by Tom Moody, has stated.

Houghton, who tendered his resignation a few days ago, meanwhile will remain at the club until February 1, when he plans to strike out for what he claims is a "bigger field." His resignatoin did not come as a surprise, since it was rumored some weeks ago that Houghton was ready to quit.

Three Offers Reported.

Houghton is leaving for two reasons. First, because he admits he hasn't made any money at Kenwood, and secondly, because he has been given three tempting offers. The Cavalier Country Club, Virginia Beach, Va., has offered him a good proposition, he said. He has been asked to serve on the staff of the Peterson Manufacturing Co. in New York, and a club in Miami, he said, also is interested in him.

It is believed that Houghton will accept the Cavalier Country Club offer in a few days and leave for his ne wassignment in time to cook up interest in the annual Cavalier open championship, won last year by Paul Runyan. Houghton's duties will be that of contact man. The Cavalier Hotel runs the golf course.

Houghton indicated that Al Jamison, his assistant, might be taken along with him in his new assignment.

Candidates Listed.

Among those reported interested in the Kenwood job are Mel Shorey, East Potomac; Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam; Tony Sylvester, Bannockburn; Claggett Stevens, assistant at Congressional; J. Munro Hunter, sr., and Leo McInherny, both unattached. Contrary to reports, George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring pro, has not filed an application.

Tom Belshe, golf chairman at Indian Spring Country Club, is expected to be installed as president of the District Golf Association at its annual meeting on February 4 at the Racquet Club. He will succeed O. L. Veerhoff. The association's executive committee is holding a closed meeting January 22 at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Robert Stead, jr., of Chevy Chase, will represent the District and Maryland Golf Associations at the annual session of the United States Golf Association in New York Saturday. Stead is president of the Maryland Association and a member of the District executive committee. It is understood that he will attempt to boost the District for both the National Open and National Amateur sectional trials, neither of which was held in Washington last year.

Sherman in Line-Up Of Olmsted Grill Five

Johnny Sherman, former St. John's Prep player, has joined the Olmsted Grill basket ball team and will play tonight against the Warwick A. C. at Roosevelt Gym at 9:30. Sherman, a forward, was one of the mainstays of the crack 1934 Sholl's team.

Coach Sox Harrington, of Olmsted, has asked the following other players to report Kemp, Wills, Dantzic, Thompson, Cross, Mitchell.

N. E. Boys Winners.

The Northeast and Merrick Boys Club 100-pound basket ball teams fought through an extra period game last night before the Northeasters pulled out an 18-to-17 lead. A basket by Simonds in the closing seconds of the regulation playing time deadlocked the score at 16 to 16, and another by Reino in the extra period provided the victory.

Bonthron Is Honored With Sullivan Trophy

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (AP).—As the crowning tribute to his greatest foot-racing campaign, William R. Bonthron today was declared the winner of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy, awarded by the Amateur Athletic Union for the outstanding contribution to the cause of amateur athletics and sportsmanship in 1934.

After trailing his great Kansas rival, Glenn Cunningham, by only a single vote in the 1933 voting contest for the trophy, the former Princeton University track captain came back to defeat Benjamin Bangs Eastman, former Stanford foot-racing star, by a decisive margin in the Nation-wide ballot conducted by the A. A. U.

Leaps to Fame.

The award marks a striking climax to Bonthron's remarkable career. From semi-obscurity in 1933 he leaped to intercollegiate championship heights and chased Jack Lovelock to a world mile record. His crowning exploits, in 1934, embraced victories over Cunningham in three out of five memorable races, including the National Collegiate A. A. mile championship at Los Angeles and the National A. A. U. 1,500 meter championship in world record time at Milwaukee, as well as a trip abroad during which he finally conquered Lovelock.

The names of seven outstanding amateur athletes, including two girl stars, were submitted to the so-called Sullivan Memorial tribunal, composed of sports leaders throughout the country, for a final ballot. The vote was announced by Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., as follows:

1. William R. Bonthron, New York A. C., 1,072.
2. Benjamin Eastman, Olympic Club, San Francisco, 929.
3. Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette University, 413.
4. Glen Hardin, Louisiana State University, 285.
5. Lenore Kight, Carnegie Library Club, Homestead, Pa., 262.
6. Jack Medica, Washington A. C., Seattle, 169.
7. Katherine Rawls, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 154.

The first four are track and field stars, holders of an assortment of national and international records and championships. The last three are swimming stars. The list was limited arbitrarily to these seven athletes by the A. A. U., which failed to include such prominent amateur champions as W. Lawson Little, jr., and Virginia Van Wie in golf and Helen Jacobs in tennis, despite the fact the Sullivan Medal contest was declared "open" to competitors in all amateur sports, whether under A. A. U. control or not.

Pro Grid League Seeks Club Here

Southern Circuit Planning Two Divisions.

The possibility of enlarging the American Professional Football League and dividing it into two divisions in 1935, with a club located in Washington, was voiced yesterday in a letter dispatched by officials of the Charlotte, N. C. club.

The missive is addressed to any local sports impresario with the urge and necessary financial support to foster pro football in the National Capital. If any club manager entertains such an idea, full details concerning the league can be obtained from Sol Tenner, Charlotte Gridiron Corporation, Charlotte, N. C.

Tenner points out that the American loop has just finished its most successful season, playing a completed schedule, attracting larger crowds and producing a better brand of football. Charlotte is the lone club in the extreme Southeast competing.

The North Carolina club officials believe that an eastern division, embracing teams from this city, Richmond, and other sizeable cities along the coast would be successful.

A meeting of the American League is scheduled the middle of this month and Charlotte hopes to have a definite expression of prevailing sentiment toward the proposed move as early as possible. Complete details will be furnished upon request.

Sholl's Tossers Play.

Sholl's quintet will meet Corr's Bikemen tonight at 9:30 o'clock at Central High School in a Community Center League game. The Restauranters were obliged to cancel another game to keep their league date.

Roosevelt Adds 5th Straight Court Win

ROOSEVELT HIGH SCHOOL'S basket ball team opened the new year brightly yesterday, ringing up its fifth straight victory of the season by defeating Kendall School, 46 to 25, on the Roosevelt court.

Aided by Fouls.

The Roosevelt cause was aided by the referee's foul-calling tendencies against the big and rather rough Kendall stalwarts, but the decisions in no way affected the final result, which was assured almost from the start.

Roosevelt led at half time, 23 to 6. Of 30 free-shot attempts, Roosevelt missed but 16, but the Rough Riders' floor game was of another color.

Alexandria Five Faces 3 Games

Fredericksburg Tossers to Invade Saturday.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Alexandria High School's basket ball team will furnish plenty of fireworks for the indoor followers before the week is out.

Alexandria High School travels to Washington Thursday afternoon to meet the Roosevelt five. Alexandria is especially anxious to win over the Rough Riders and avenge a licking taken here. This game was a thriller throughout, and was not decided until the final ten seconds.

Saturday night, Fredericksburg, Alexandria's traditional rival, invades armory hall. The Yellow Jackets are under the direction of a new coach, Johnny Fenlon, and ar said to have the classiest five ever to represent them on the woodways.

Jaskwhich Weds.

Cornell Hopes To Lure 'Big Shots' Here

WASHINGTON will get its first chance to see really big "names" in action in local rings within the next month or two if plans of Matchmaker Charley Cornell, Auditorium impresario, do not go awry.

Baer is being sought to meet Natie Brown, District heavyweight champion, in one of those four-round "exhibition" matches such as recently resulted in King Levinsky being stopped for the first time in his career.

"That should be a natural," Cornell believes. "Many think Brown is the only fighter in the heavyweight division who can give Baer a real fight. Just as many think he's terrible, and want to see him flattened. No matter which way they think, they'd all be on hand to see what hapened when the two went into action."

Bout Would Be Costly.

The financial outlay for such a bout would be very heavy, but Cornell feels public demand would justify the expenditure. Baer usually receives 40 per cent of the gross gate receipts for his services and demands that his brother, Buddy, be used on the same card for a $1,000 guarantee against some not-too-good heavyweight. To make the match possible, Brown would have to work for a very small percentage, accepting his reward in the prestige he would gain if he outfumbled the champion.

Cornell has received definite assurance from Lou Brouillard, the up-and-coming young southpaw lightheavyweight, that he would appear here at an early date. It is planned to match the Worcester, Mass., lad who graduated from the welterweight championship into a leading position in a division several pounds heavier, against Bob Godwin or some other good light-heavy.

The services of Eddie Risko, who recently knocked out middleweight champion Teddy Yarosz, were offered Cornell some time ago, before Risko achieved national prominence. Cornell now is angling for the new sensation and will match him with Ken Overlin, of Norfolk, if possible.

Bob Olin, recently crowned light heavyweight champion, has agreed to sign articles to box Buck Everett, local heavyweight sensation. Everett still is dickering with Cornell over terms, but it is generally believed they will reach some understanding in the near future.

Rinaldi's Quintet In Debut Sunday

Tailors Open at Baltimore; Play Here Jan. 20.

Coclaimants to the District semi-pro basket ball championship last season and eager to add to their laurels, Rinaldi Tailors launch their 1935 campaign Sunday night at Baltimore, where they meet the Polish-Americans in a Baltimore League game.

The Tailors will not make their debut locally until January 20, when they will meet a fast semipro quintet at the George Washington gymnasium. House of David tossers are being sought for this date.

Bob Taylor, 6 foot 5 inch center; Joe Sweeney, Jake Goldblatt, Ed Ronkin, Eaton Chalkley, Dick Streeks and Mike Miles comprise the Rinaldi squad. Miles, former football star at Princeton under Bill Roper, performed with the Goodyear rubber five last year in Arkon, Ohio.

Efforts are being made to have some of the Baltimore League games transferred to this city, as the Heurich Brewers also are in the loop. Teams from Gettysburg, Pa., and Frederick, Mr., complete the circuit.

Celtic Junior's Team To Open Season Here

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—The St. Mary's Celtic Juniors are working out daily under the direction of Eddie Hoebeck, their new coach. The little Celtics open their season January 7, when they travel to Washington to oppose the Immaculate Conception five. Other games have been listed with the Sacred Heart and St. Aloysius teams.

BABE RUTH.

Ruth Starred In Far East, Mack Says

A's Pilot Docks, Declaring Babe Showed Old-Time Form in Japan.

VICTORIA, British Columbia, Jan. 2 (AP).—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, brought his baseballers home from the Orient today and said Babe Ruth played better ball in Japan than he did in the United States in his last two seasons with the American League.

The Bambino led the American League All-Stars in hitting, Mack said, outdistancing such mighty swatters as Bing Miller, Lou Gehrig and Jimmy Foxx.

Lavish Attention on Ruth.

"The Japanese gave rousing receptions to the American players, sometimes almost mobbing them in the rush to pay personal tribute to Ruth, who personifies the game to millions of Orientals who follow it," Mack related.

With better pitching and hitting, the Japanese clubs would be formidable, although they are handicapped by their small size, Connie said in an interview aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Canada, which docked here today.

"The Japanese teams had two or three good-looking prospects, but most of their men are only equal to our class 'A' players," Mack said.

"Tremendous enthusiasm was shown for baseball by the Japanese. We drew 200,000 people to four games in Tokyo."

Always Practicing.

"The sons of Nippon are tremendously keen," said Bing Miller. "After a player leaves the box he doesn't go to the showers like ours do. He goes to the bull pen and warms up. They are always practicing."

The tourists played 21 games, one in Honolulu, three in Manila, and 17 in Japan. All the American sluggers batted in the upper .300 brackets, Mack said, and it was only in fielding and base running that the Oriental teams they met held their own.

Capt. Nadi Captures New Orleans Sprint

New Orleans, Jan. 2 (AP).—The honor of winning the first 2-year-old race of the year at the Fair Grounds went to J. F. O'Neil, when his juvenile gelding, Captain Nadi, led home ten other youngsters in a two-furlong dash today.

With Jockey Reno in the saddle, the son of King Nadi set all the pace to finish a full length in front of Pantaur from Miller and Gory's Stable. E. R. Bradley's Be Big, the favorite, was third.

Swedish Giant Foe Tonight Of George

'Champion' Will Concede 90 Lbs. to Johansen in Bout Here.

AN irresistible force will meet an immovable body in the feature wrestling match at the auditorium tonight.

The irresistible force will be Ed (Don) George who is irresistible because he is recognized in some quarters as heavyweight wrestling champion of the world. Not even a Shirley Temple smile, a Max Baer right or a pair of Clark Gable ears is more irresistible than a heavyweight wrestling champion.

The immovable body will be one Tor Johansen, a 310-pound Rock of Gibraltar, who has proven as impervious to punishment as a dramatic critic in previous appearances here. Tor scorns the more obvious theatrics employed by many of his colleagues, who stagger back in apparently mortal agony when flipped on the shoulders by open-handed slaps. Tor scorns to stagger back under any circumstances, often sticking out his chin for regular man-sized wallops which he shakes off with a carefree smile and toss of the head.

Outweighed 90 Pounds.

Conceding his Swedish foeman 90 pounds in weight and a pronounced edge in brute strength, George will be faced with the problem of upsetting the immovable object without the aid of crow bars, block and tackle or dynamite—all prohibited even in modern-day wrestling.

Johansen generally is conceded an excellent chance of grabbing one of the falls of the three-fall affair. In showing locally Tor never has been extended, turning back all opposition with the ease of the renowned daredevil on the flying trapeze.

Credited with two draws with his cochampion, Londos, George otherwise has distinguished himself during the past year by meeting and defeating practically every "logical contender" in the heavyweight hulk heaving profession.

Dusek vs. Meske.

In 30-minute time limit features Dr. Harry Fields will tackle Stan Sokolis and Willie Davis is slated to maul Henry Piers.

Coast Fans Laud Alabama's Passes

fore the Bama mentor went to Notre Dame.

"But Hutson is a fine offensive end. He proved he was a good broken-field runner, once he had his hands on that pigskin, a point that can not be overlooked."

Spaulding thought the Alabama line was better than it had been rated. In fact, he thought it was almost as good as that of Stanford, with Capt. Bill Lee and Charlie Marr, standouts.

Tom Lieb Adds Praise.

Tom Lieb, a former Notre Dame star now coaching Loyola, of Los Angeles, also was high in his praise of the Tide.

"That was the sweetest passing attack I have seen in a long time," he said. "You read a lot about these triple threat football players, but Howell is the closest approach to it of any player I have seen since the immortal George Gipp.

"When I was helping out at Wisconsin I saw Benny Friedman and Harry Newman throw the ball, but the best they could do was about 30 per cent in completions and this boy Howell averaged 75 per cent yesterday, so you can draw your own conclusions.

Classed With Friedman.

But he wouldn't say whether he thought Alabama was as good as Minnesota, Big Ten champion.

Dublinsky Makes Bid For Bout With Ambers

New York, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Madison Square Garden's will o' the wisp search for an opponent to fight Lou Ambers, the Herkimer hurricane, seemed ended tonight when Harry Dublinsky, Chicago welter, phoned that he would meet him for ten rounds on the night of January 11.

Ambers is the busy mauler whom the New York boxing commission designed recently as the No. 1 contender for Barney Ross' lightweight crown. The Garden first selected Sammy Fuller, of New York, as an opponent. Sammy withdrew. Lew Massey, of Philadelphia, was next. He was slated to meet Ambers Friday night, but Ambers requested a postponement because of an injured hand.

Carolina Commissioner Of Ring and Mat Dies

High Point, N. C., Jan. 2 (AP).—Harry Raymond, 58, veneer manufacturer and widely known sportsman, died at his home here early today of pneumonia. He was vice president of the North Carolina boxing commission and president of the North Carolina Wrestling Association.

Raymond had a wide acquaintance in the sports world. He was a lavish entertainer and his country lodge, Fitzharry, had received many outstanding sports figures, including Jack Dempsey, the late W. L. Stribling, Max Schmeling and Judge K. M. Landis.

Heurich Five in Debut Sunday, Plays Eastern Penn Champions

HEURICH'S professional basket ball team, winner of 43 out of 45 games last year, will open its home campaign Sunday at George Washington University's gym against the Gettysburg (Pa.) Fleet Wings, eastern Pennsylvania champions.

The Fleet Wings are coached by Charley Gelbert, one-time shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals' baseball team. Appearing here with the visitors will be Art Zahn, former George Washington University captain; Lou Reilly, of Penn State; Jack Dracha, Hugh Hoke and Ivan Kitzmiller, all of Gettysburg College; Chick Chanowski, of Mount St. Mary's and Cal Heller, of Lebanon Valley. Gettysburg has won 58 games and lost 10, having Terrible Swedes and Babe Didrikson's all-Americans.

Heurich's pro, with Moon Evans, Ralph Bennie, Bucky Buscher, Joe Croson and Bozey Berger constituting the starting line-up, scrimmaged against George Washington's varsity last night. Red Roberts, of Nevada University, joined the team, and will be used at center. Johnny Fenlon and Tubba Farrell will be the other reserves. The Heurich Flashes and St. Mary's Celtics will play a preliminary game at 2:30.

The Heurich home schedule has been announced as follows: January 13, Trenton Bocses; 20, Boston Americans; 27, Pittsburgh Willigs; February 3, Newark Mules. A game also is pending with the New York Celtics.

Wheat Values Sag on Threat Of New Curbs

Chicago, Jan. 2 (AP).—Disquiet over proposed legislation at Washington affecting commodity exchanges led to material downturns of grain prices today.

Particular attention was given to announcement Chairman Jones of the House Agricultural Committee would introduce a bill that would greatly increase Government regulation of futures trading. Under the terms of the bill, the Secretary of Agriculture would be autnorized to limit trading, to license commission merchants, and to establish new standards of margin requirements.

Despite a rally just before trade ended, wheat closed nervous, ⅞ to 1⅛ under Monday's finish, May, 98⅛-⅜; corn, ⅞ to 1¼ down; May, 88⅝-¾; Oats unchanged to ½ lower and provisions showing 15 to 25 cents drop.

Threat of further restrictions on commodity dealings brought liquidating sales into all the grain pits after a show of firmness at the outset. Lack of vigorous buying support, however, rather than unusual pressure to sell was the chief distinctive feature. Mills bought wheat on the price breaks.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Cotton eased after a higher opening today. Buying was mostly on scale down orders, but these were sufficient to absorb comparatively light offerings and give the market a fairly steady undertone. The market closed steady, net 5 points lower to 3 points higher.

Active months showed net gains of 2 to 6 points during the early trading in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables, further buying through houses with foreign connections, and a moderate trade demand.

(By Special Writer of The Post.)

The countries belonging to the "gold bloc" are greatly concerned about the outlook for further price increases in this country and Great Britain, because the extent of that rise is very likely to determine the fate of their currencies. The present position of the gold currencies of course increases the pressure to reduce gold production costs and prices and adds to the strength of the devaluation sentiment of those groups that are opposed to further deflation. The French premier, M. Flandin, has tried to strengthen the morale of the gold bloc by affirming that during the coming year wholesale prices in the United States and the sterling area will rise sufficiently so that the present handicap of the gold currencies will be lightened and devaluation will not be necessary.

However, the wish appears to be father to the thought, since there is little reason to believe that there will be a rise of anywhere from 15 to 20 per cent in British and American prices during the coming year. During the past year, in fact, the gold price level, in Great Britain actually fell, although the index of sterling prices rose between 6 and 7 per cent. In this country, as various year-end reviewers note, prices of commodities other than farm products and foods affected by the drought have remained either stationary or have tended to decline following devaluation. In other words, there is no reason to suppose that prices will advance as a result of past devaluation if there should be further devaluation of the dollar. Moreover it would undoubtedly result in a lower level of domestic prices expressed in terms of gold. And from the point of view of the gold bloc, it is the changes in the gold level of prices that really matter.

Dangers of Inflation As Seen By London Financial News.

So much has been said in this country about the danger of runaway inflation that it is interesting to note the scepticism with which the prospect is viewed by the London Financial News, which discussed the subject editorially in a recent issue. Since the News appears to be definitely in favor of devaluation as the only solution for the problems confronting the continental gold bloc, its opinions are perhaps somewhat biased. Nevertheless it seems to be on strong ground in arguing that little relief is to be expected for the gold bloc from a rise in prices here or in Great Britain. So far as the British are concerned the aim of policy has been to maintain a stable level of internal prices in order to keep down production costs. Otherwise the stimulus to the export industries afforded by sterling depreciation would be forfeited. The experiment has succeeded remarkably well even under better business conditions which have favored a price rise, without regard to currency manipulation.

In the case of the United States, there are of course many more disturbing factors to be taken into account in trying to forecast price trends during the coming year. Much will depend on the policies followed under a modified NRA, which may be responsible for raising or reducing production costs. While the British prophets infer that the chances are against further increases in wage levels here and away from increased costs in general, it is still too early to predict the outcome of the move to introduce a 30-hour week in industry. And there is no positive assurance that relaxation of restrictive price and production control proposals will tend toward lower production costs. Inded, it is pointed out that the restricitons that have been placed upon output tend to prevent a rapid rise in the prices of controlled commodities here and elsewhere, since an increased demand will be the signal for increasing production. The rise in prices that must eventually come if our Government spending program should get beyond control would of course take some time to get under way and could not be counted upon to bring the desired relief to the hard-pressed countries of the gold bloc.

Italy's Price Declines Less Drastic Than in France.

Italy, at any rate, has given up the struggle to deflate, although a decision to devalue has not yet been announced. As price declines in that country have been less drastic than in France and the other gold bloc countries, the extraordinary measures that have recently been taken to control exchange operations are easily understood. Switzerland, apparently, is not counting on price advances in other countries to solve her problems, but is considering a determined drive to reduce production costs as much as 20 per cent. The Swiss minister of economy maintains that the only way to meet the situation is to stimulate exports and that means further deflation. As all the gold-bloc countries—even the weakest of them—have large gold reserves, they are in a position to remain on the gold standard for some time in face of heavy drains. That, however, is not a decisive factor for most of them. France, at present, is the main moral support of the gold bloc, and is also in a position to lend them material aid, in case of gold runs. The real pressure to devalue comes from the desire to avoid further deflation. Unless prices here and in the sterling area do advance decidedly in the near future, deflation offers the only alternative to devaluation.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A cheerful tone prevailed on the stock exchange with the resumption of business yesterday. Investment stocks, gold mining issues, and industrials were well supported and firmer, while the 3½ per cent war loan touched a new high of £109⅛. Transatlantic issues held steady, but home rails eased. The market closed steady.

Paris—Rentes, coal and rubber shares showed improvement in an active session on the bourse yesterday. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse opened firm yesterday. Bonds were preferred as annual interest payments were invested in interest-bearing securities. The closing was firm.

Bond Market Moves Higher In Larger Sale

Secondary Issues Record Gains; Trading Rises to $9,617,000.

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—High-grade corporate and Government bond prices were well maintained in today's market, although secondary loans were a trifle irregular and foreign issues mostly lower.

Transfers aggregated $9,617,000, par value, compared with $8,997,000 on Monday. The Associated Press averages for all domestic groups were a shade higher.

The large sums released in year-end dividend and interest coupon payments which sought reinvestment in prime bonds caused last year's high records to be equaled or bettered in a number of cases, notably Pennsylvania Gen. 4¼s of '81, which closed ⅛ higher at 100⅝; Denver Gas & Electric 5s, at 103, and New York & Long Island 4s, up 1¼ at 101½.

Others pointing upward included obligations of Chesapeake Corporation, Consolidated Gas, Goodrich, Shell Pipe Line, Norfolk & Western and New England Telephone.

There was a liberal sprinkling of gains of around a point or more among the secondary bonds as well as a moderate number losing about that much. Among advancing issues were Bush Terminal 5s, up 2 at 48; St. Paul 4¾s, up 1¾ at 63; International Great Northern 6s, up 2 at 34½; New Haven 6s, up 2⅜ at 60, Sharon Steel Hoop 5½s, up 1¾ at 83¼. Declines of around a point or so occurred in obligations of Colon Oil, Childs Co., Illinois Central, Norfolk & Southern, Studebaker, Denver & Rio Grande, Illiois Central, McCrory Stores and Southern Colorado Power.

Gains of one-thirty-second to seven-thirty-seconds were predominant in U. S. Government obligations. Three issues of Libertys, however, yielded a trifle. Treasury 3¾s of 1946 were seven thirty-seconds higher at 107.6 and Home Owners Loan 3s gained one-thirty-second at 99.25.

Most of the Argentine obligations sold slightly lower in the foreign section, along with German and Polish government bonds. French 7s were ⅜ higher at 184.

General Mills Vote Regular 75-Cent Return

Associated Gas Reports Net Operating Income of $36,236,038.

New York, Jan. 2.—The board of directors of General Mills, Inc., today announce the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents per share upon the common stock of the company, payable February 1, 1935, to all common stockholders of record at the close of business January 15, 1935.

Associated Gas & Electric System reports gross operating revenues for the 12 months ended November 30, totaling $97,185,176. This is $2,854,962, or 3 per cent above the corresponding figure a year ago.

Operating expenses, maintenance, etc., amounted to $49,998,967, an increase of 8 per cent above the same figure last year. Taxes at $10,950,171 increased 22 per cent, or $1,953,005. After deducting these items, net operating revenue of $36,236,038 remained. Further deduction for provision for retirement of fixed capital (renewals and replacements) left operating income of $27,707,082.

The St. Louis, Rocky Mountain & Pacific Co. today declared a dividend of $5 on its preferred stock, payable in four quarterly installments of $1.25 each, as well as two dividends of 25 cents each on its common stock, payable January 21, and April 20, to stock of record January 5, and April 5, respectively.

Directors of the American Water Works & Electric Co. have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock, payable February 15 to stock of record January 11.

Outlook for Utilities Industries Called Uncertain, Disturbing

Electric Power Companies Listed as Facing, in 1935, Threat of Government Competition, Rate Cuts, Increased Costs and Rise in Taxes.

By Herbert B. Dorau.
(Associate Professor of Economics, New York University).

There may be some justification under more normal conditions for engaging in the old custom of tinting the sunset and pointing to the silver lining as another year comes up for appraisal. But the best of conduct is at times inappropriate. The outlook for the public utility industries is so uncertain and disturbing that it seems both dishonest and foolish to depict it in rosy hues.

We do not know whether the present antagonistic tide is irrevocably set to destroy the private utility industry or not. Possibly those responsible for setting the destructive forces in motion do not themselves know; possibly they do not care, or else believe they can call a halt when political ends have been achieved. But, whatever the "powers that be" may believe, objective opinion fears that once political antagonism has been well organized and the forces of destructive competition set in motion they will not or can not be halted.

If true, it is high time that the 10,000,000 or more people who have their savings in these industries become thoroughly awakened that the "yardstick" and that "Government in the utility industry" is only another maneuver in the great campaign to take from those who have and give to those who have not.

Industries Face Problems.

More specifically the utility industries, and the electric power industry in particular, face four unfavorable probabilities in 1935; (1) more intensified and extended threat of government competition culminating in actual competition or sale of properties to avoid the inevitable losses of government competition; (2) rate reductions not generally warranted by earnings or the possibility of increased business but primarily to ward off or postpone the application of more destructive policies; (3) increased operating expenses due to the protection given unregulated monopoly prices in other industries by the codes and inflation or inflationary price rises; and (4) a widespread general rise in both general and special taxes imposed on utilities.

The electric industry, too long indecisive, vacillating and fearful in its position, is apparently now convinced that there is nothing to be gained "by lying down and taking it." Unless present signs fail, 1935 will see an aroused electric industry, probably retreating but at least fighting for its existence.

Individual companies may have had much to gain by appearing as undisturbed as possible by the "gratuitous deflation" obviously planned for them. They have feared to disturb the investor. There were bonds to refund and other practical considerations. But the outlook now is such that the investor should and must be taken into the full confidence of utility management. The realities of the near future must be faced together.

Year May Be Disturbing.

The year 1935 will thus no doubt be more disturbing to all who have a stake in the electric industry than any year of its existence. If the electric industry honestly and openly takes its security holders into its confidence it is not unreasonable to expect that millions of investors, direct or indirect, who have been successfully antagonized or kept distracted by the bogey of the big bad holding company, will become aware of the fact that the real threat to their investment is from the political agencies which pretend to have their interest at heart.

It appears probable that when the policy of regulation by destructive competition or threat thereof, has run its course, the resulting losses will be many times what the investor may have suffered because of financial juggling or mismanagement.

It is difficult for the ordinary person to see the consistency of a policy which for the utility industry can mean nothing but value destruction, reduction of income, decreased corporate and individual purchasing power, the disappearance of new construction and decline in replacement and improvement expenditures, the drying up of new security offerings and the ultimate decrease of employment and pay rolls, when the very opposite is at least the avowed aim of recovery in other industries. It is not easy to be doubtful of both the good intentions and the intelligence of those who are sponsoring such inconsistency. Among all the procedures adopted in the name of recovery, but operating to retard recovery, the emerging public utility policy may yet prove to be most destructive and short-sighted.

Some Favorable Factors.

There are some favorable factors operating to improve the outlook for the utility industry in 1935. Even though the unfavorable developments may outweigh them and the net balance be unfavorable yet the encouraging facts should be noted. The volume of domestic electric business will in all probability continue to increase during 1935. This like other retail business will benefit from consumer purchasing power based directly or indirectly on Government spending.

A continued rise in domestic business together with some probable further increase in commercial use will gradually absorb some of the excess plant capacity. An increase in the volume and proportion of these classes of service against the power business should result, at the typically higher price per k. w. h., in higher revenue, which higher revenue under conditions of fuller plant utilization should mean a larger net. But the unfavorable factor of probably decreased rates, higher operating expenses and further tax impositions will no doubt nullify any such effects in general. The continued growth of refrigerator sales with the resulting improvement in load factor will no doubt be important in keeping the net results from being as bad as they might otherwise be.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

World's Steel Ingot Output Boosted in '34

Production in Gross Tons Increased for Year by 20 Per Cent.

Cleveland, Jan. 2.—World production of steel ingots and castings—the basis of practically all steel products—in 1934 was 79,778,000 gross tons, an increase of 20 per cent over the 66,171,000 tons of 1933 and comparing with the record of 117,980,000 tons in 1929, according to the magazine Steel. For the first time during the depression, or since 1931, world production passed the level of 1913.

The United States' share of this world output was 25,953,000 tons, or 32 per cent. In 1933 the output of the United States was 23,156,000 tons, or 35 per cent of the world total.

Other leading steel producing nations of the world in 1934 and their totals in gross tons were: Germany, 11,825,000; Russia, 9,250,000; Great Britain, 9,000,000; France, 6,050,000; Japan, 3,000,000; Belgium, 2,895,000.

Leader in Per Capita Use.

In point of per capita consumption of steel, which is domestic production plus imports minus exports divided by population, Belgium-Luxemburg led in 1934 for the third consecutive year. Its average consumption of steel per inhabitant was 477 pounds, compared with 418 in 1933. Second, as in 1933, was the United States with a per capita figure of 447 pounds, against 410 in 1933.

Germany in 1934 moved up from fifth place to third, with a per capita use of 389 pounds, an increase of 63 per cent over 1933. Great Britain was fourth with 371 pounds, France fifth with 286 pounds, Russia sixth with 142 pounds, Italy seventh with 96 pounds and Japan eighth with 53 pounds.

World production of pig iron in 1934 was 61,132,000 tons, compared with 48,531,000 in 1933 and 96,729,000 tons in record 1929.

United States Leads in Pig Iron.

The United States also led in pig iron with 16,057,000 tons, compared with 13,222,000 tons in 1933. Russia held its second place with 10,000,000 tons. Other totals were 8,650,000 tons for Germany, 6,050,000 tons for Frace, 6,000,000 tons for Great Britain and 2,865,000 tons for Belgium.

For the third consecutive year, the automobile industry in 1934 led all other consumer groups in the amount of finished steel it absorbed, states the magazine Steel.

To this industry was distributed 3,775,833 gross tons, or 20.8 per cent of the total output, 18,092,160 tons.

Railroads came back briskly into second position, taking 2,344,744 tons, or 12.9 per cent. In the four years preceding 1934 the railroads were outranked by the building construction industry.

Canadian Unit Formed By Cyanamid Company

New York, Jan. 2.—American Cyanamid Co. announces the formation of North American Cyanamid, Ltd., Royal Bank Building, Toronto, Ontario, a Canadian corporation. As from January 1, 1935, North American Cyanamid, Ltd., will operate under lease the American Cyanamid Co.'s plants at Niagara Falls, Ont., and Beachville, Ont., and will conduct the marketing of the products of these plants in Canada and other countries outside the United States.

Stocks Greet New Year With Mild Advance

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—The stock market greeted the first trading session of the new year with a mild advance on modest volume.

The market got away to an indifferent start and ruled within a comparatively narrow range until late in the session, when activity broadened somewhat at improving prices among various industrial shares.

The Associated Press average for 60 selected stocks advanced .18 of a point to 40.67.

Fair gains in the industrial section of the market contrasted with generally lower prices for rails and utilities. A total of 878,900 shares changed hands, compared with 1,016,000 on Monday.

American Can Rallies.

American Can rallied sharply for a net gain of 3 points to close at 117¼, a new high for the past year. In spite of sharp gain in the steel opreating rate, shares of U. S. Steel and other steel companies met some selling by those who were disturbed by the possibility of labor unrest in the industry. Losses were confined to fractions in two instances. U. S. Steel closed ⅜ lower at 38¾, while Bethlehem gave up ¼ to finish at 32¼. Republic was unchanged at 15. At 56½ Jones & Laughlin was also unchanged.

Case closed at 60, with a gain of 2¾. Cerro de Pasco scored a point at 45. Radio B was rather quiet and showed an advance of ½ at 41¾. American Telephone, at 105⅝, was up ⅝. Consolidated Gas was unchanged at 20¼.

Delay in Judgment Urged.

Nevertheless market observers pointed out the advisability of deferring judgment on share values until such time as the temper of the new Congress lends itself to detailed analysis.

In contrast, with a slightly lower tilt in sterling the gold currencies were strong in the foreign exchange market. The French franc was .01½ cent higher at 6.63¾. Guilders moved forward to 68.92 cents, a gain of .09.

The Swiss franc and the belga also shared in a resumption of the upturn in the gold group. Some selling of dollars was reported on the theory that the attitude of the forthcoming Congress toward further monetary manipulation was still uncertain.

Brighter Hopes For Aviation, Brown Says

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Aviation may face 1935 with confidence because of the hope of a constructive governmental policy toward the industry in the coming year, said D. L. Brown, president of United Aircraft Corporation, in a year-end statement today.

Pointing out that about 60 per cent of the industry's sales are to the United States Government, Brown sees the continuation of Federal support as the primary requirement of the coming year. The report of the presidential commission investigating aeronautics under the leadership of Clark Howell, of Atlanta, is counted on by Brown as a likely favorable development of the near future.

"We understand," said Brown, "that this commission is preparing a report for the President, which will be made some time during the month of January. We are unaware at the present time just what the nature of this report will be, but in view of its wide and thorough investigation we have every belief that it will be a constructive one."

The American aviation industry has been able to hold its technical leadership during the past year, in Brown's opinion.

Curb's Prices Close Near Starting Level

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Most curb issues finished near their starting levels today. Scattered specialties showed wider variations. Volume was restricted.

Forenoon trading was marked by some irregularity, but the list hardened toward the close. Utilities, alcohols and metals all moved within narrow limits. Oils were steady, with Gulf advancing more than 2 points.

Miscellaneous shares displaying rising tendencies included Sherwin Williams, up nearly 3; Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Ford Motor of Canada, advancing about 2 and 1, respectively.

Edie Forecasts Even Keel for 1935 Business

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Business should ride on a more even keel in 1935, Dr. Lionel Edie, well-known Wall street economist said today in surveying the outlook for the new year.

Pointing out that 1934 saw sharp swings up and down in the economic field primarily because of the drought and the bunching of steel orders in the second quarter to avoid a price increase, Dr. Edie felt that with such factors out of the way, the 1935 spring peak in business should be less pronounced and the summer slump less exaggerated.

Gold Bloc Collapse Seen.

A collapse in the gold bloc currencies some time in the new year is seen by this business observer as a major possibility.

Noting that the British chancellor of the exchequer has recently proclaimed the unwillingness of his country to stabilize the pound sterling until the dollar and the French franc have been brought into balance, Dr. Edie said:

"How equilibrium can be brought about without devaluation of the franc, it is difficult to see."

Outlook for Business.

Turning to the field of domestic business, he continued:

"The general expectation of industrialists is for a fairly good physical volume, but whether they will be able to earn as much profit as in 1934, is a question upon which they feel great uncertainty. This is due to the fear of rising costs."

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The expression that a person under a great fear has "cold feet" is more nearly true than most people suspect. Physicians assert that fear will actually cause a lowering of the temperature of the feet. This, they explain, is because the arteries supplying blood to that part of the body contract to such an extent during time of emotional stress that not enough blood flows to the feet to keep them warm.

The vasomotor nerves, which govern the blood supply to various organs by changing the size of the arteries, have the power to direct an additional blood flow to any part of the body needing it. This is done, of course, without conscious effort. Fear or anger seems to cause the arteries to the feet to supply less blood—so when you have "cold feet" there is nothing much to do about it except conquer your fear or anger.

* * * *

Strange as it seems, when you mix lead and tin together the mixture melts at a much lower temperature than either lead or tin. Solder made from two parts of lead, which melts at 621 degrees Fahrenheit, and five parts of tin, which melts at 449 degrees, has a melting point of 338 degrees—or more than 100 degrees less than tin and almost 300 degrees less than lead. By adding bismuth to the mixture it is possible to make a solder that will melt at a temperature lower than the boiling point of water, 212 degrees—and bismuth melts at 519 degrees Fahrenheit.

The Alleged Great Aunt

By Henry Kitchell Webster, Janet Ayer Fairbank and Margaret Ayer Barnes

When Gilbert Meade dies and Lily De Long, one-time operatic star, claims dower rights as his widow, the old man's grand-nephew of the same name decides to investigate. Lily De Long invites him to stay at her home in Stanwix Falls, N. Y., when he says he is writing her biography. He is convinced immediately that she is innocent, but that her lawyer, Charles Bradley, is perpetrating a fraud. Adding to the mystery is the fact that a girl Gilbert has met casually on a bus, and who admitted that she had just taken a job under an assumed name, turns up as Miss De Long's companion.

THE problem as to where the two newcomers should live proved not to be as simple as it sounded, although the choice was a limited one. There was a large vacant bedroom in the front of the house and a small one over the kitchen in the servants' quarters, which Alberto smilingly suggested might do for the young lady. Alberto, is seemed, served Miss De Long as a general man of all work as well as a caretaker. He was the only other occupant of the servants' wing.

"Miss Stanton will have the front room, of course," Gilbert told him. "I'll take the room in the kitchen wing if anyone does."

But he meant to do better than that if he could, and with this in mind he entered the door leading into Charles Bradley's suite. The first thing that struck him was that it was in better order than the rest of the house.

Rooms Were Comfortable.

The rooms had been recently painted and papered in a light colonial design. There was very little furniture in them, but that little was good. That Duncan Phyfe table, Gilbert's quick eye noted, was really a museum piece. The bedroom was dominated by a huge old four-post bed with curtains of antique glazed chintz.

Both rooms were eminently comfortable from a man's point of view, and to Gilbert, who had not been very favorably impressed with his glimpse of the bleak little bedroom in the servants' wing, there seemed no reason why he should not, in Bradley's absence, enjoy this comfort.

"Why can't I sleep here?" he asked Alberto.

Bradley Might Come.

"Ah, signor! Mr. Bradley will come back, I think. Mr. Bradley always comes back."

Lily's old voice called up the stairs. "If you insist on giving that girl the best room, Gilbert, you can sleep downstairs here in the study. There's a cot bed."

Alberto shrugged. "It's not very comfortable, signor. The little back room is nice. It is sunny. I am sure the young lady——"

"I don't care where I sleep," put in Jane, spiritedly.

"Take Miss Stanton's bags to the front bedroom," Gilbert said. Picking up his suitcase, he went to rejoin his hostess.

She led him directly to the study, saying as she did so, "There is a bathroom opening out of this passage. You'll be comfortable enough."

Pleasantly Surprised.

The study was high and square, with two long windows overlooking the entrance drive and a western bow and balcony which gave on the garden. Long brown velvet curtains were pushed back from the panes and the late afternoon sunset was flooding the room with mellow light. The walls were lined with bookshelves, crammed with piled-up scrapbooks. Near the bow window there was an immense rolled-top desk, with a substantial old-fashioned iron safe, painted dark green, set into the wall behind it. Two comfortable armchairs were drawn up near the white-painted fireplace.

Gilbert was pleasantly surprised. "I can't imagine a more delightful place to work," he said.

When he was left alone he closed the door and looked about. It was queer, he thought, what an impression the room gave of having been recently used.

Desk Was Locked.

The chair before the desk was pushed carelessly back, as if some one might only this moment have risen from it. Because of this impression he went over to the desk and made an effort to lift the top, but he couldn't budge it. It was evidently locked. He must ask Lily for the key.

Having washed off the dust of the journey, he crossed the main hall to Miss De Long's private quarters, where she had informed him dinner would be served. The two rooms which formed that side of the house were practically made into one by the immense folding doors which opened between them, and Lily's carved and canopied Italian bed, standing between the two windows on the rear wall, commanded the whole apartment. Gilbert's first impression was that all the extraordinary paraphernalia of the old diva's life was assembled there.

Photographs Everywhere.

The furniture was a heterogeneous gathering of all sorts and nationalities. Old Italian brocades hung at the chaste colonial windows. A Bedemier settee, eloquently reminiscent of Munich, stood under a dark and austere Spanish painting of the Madonna. A chaise lounge of the Recamier period, padded deep with down, slanted out from a Chippendale table.

At the end of the front room was a concert grand Bechstein piano and beside it, looking absurd because of its disparity in size, was a little chorus director's upright. Everywhere there were old-fashioned photographs, framed and autographed, of singers long since silent.

"Well," Miss De Long inquired sharply, "how do you like it?"

Gilbert's answer surprised himself. "It has enormous charm," he declared. That was, astonishingly, a fact. This abundant, reckless assembling of anything which had taken her fancy made the triumphant years of the old singer's life blaze again.

Inspection Interrupted.

"I am going to adore your biography," Gilbert said, with an apparent irrelevancy.

His inspection was interrupted by Alberto's entrance, pushing before him a long narrow dining table set with three places. They sat down at once to dinner, an admirable dinner as it proved to be. It was evident that Lily took much more interest in her food than she did in her clothes, and the friendly little Italian proved to be surprisingly competent, both as cook and butler.

While they ate, Miss De Long gave Gilbert and Jane an outline of the household day. This was, she said, the only formal meal that was served. She had her own breakfast in bed about 11, but Alberto could produce eggs and bacon whenever they wanted it. Up to noon her guest and her companion, if they weren't sensible enough to stay abed, must entertain themselves. After 12 they would work.

Wanted Music.

A bottle of excellent white wine had been brought up from the cellar for the dinner, and under its mild influence Lily blossomed out into a very agreeable companion, indeed. She began a lively discussion of modern music with Jane, abandoned as soon as she realized that Gilbert was out of it, and shifted to a rather subtle flirtation with him, this also in the form of a conversation with Jane. She started telling the girl about Gilbert's great-uncle, enumerating traits of his as she saw them revived in Gilbert, himself—little tricks, like the way he carried his head.

At 8 o'clock, when Alberto removed the table, there came a sharp change in Lily. "Come along," she said to Jane, "it's time you went to work, with something easy. Get down these two volumes of Haydn's Symphonies and play with me."

They were duplicate volumes, for these were four-handed piano arrangements. Lily sat down to the grand, and Jane took a little bench at the upright.

Mr. Bradley Arrived.

There was presently revealed to Gilbert an unsuspected element in Lily's character: spoiled, wayward and self-indulgent though she might be toward life in general, she was a rigorously self-disciplined musician. Even he was able to appreciate that here Haydn was being played right, with the delicately restrained vigor and the absolute, immaculate rhythm that his music needs.

After a while Lily began, in characteristic fashion, appropriating whichever part she liked best to play, calling out, "Primo!" or "Secundo!" to Jane, the signal that she was to change. It must be an irritating trick, Gilbert thought, but Jane seemed not to mind.

They might, it seemed, have kept going all night but for the fact that at 9 o'clock there was a jangling ring at the doorbell. Alberto was in the room, setting up the card table. He said, very casually, "Mebbe Mr. Bradley," and it was.

WJSV's Equipment Sold to Columbia

Purchase Price $250,000, Is Unofficial Report.

Purchase of the broadcasting equipment of Radio Station WJSV, Alexandria, was announced yesterday by the Old Dominion Broadcasting Co., a subsidiary of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Though officials of the purchasing company declined to make public the purchase price, it was understood the equipment was sold for $250,000.

Inasmuch as the Old Dominion Broadcasting Co. has been operating WJSV equipment under lease from WJSV, Inc., no change in operation or control of the station will result, officials pointed out.

Death of Woman On Relief Yields Money in Clothes

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Jan. 2 (Spl.).—Money was found sewed in the clothing of Mrs. Belle Mason, 75, found dead at her home in the country here Sunday, it was disclosed today. Death was laid to natural causes, and it is believed she had been dead a day before the body was found at the home where she had lived alone since the death of her husband several weeks ago.

She had been receiving county and relief assistance and was scheduled to be taken to the county farm this week. Thirty-six $1 bills were found by the undertaker sewed in the waistband of her skirt, and 11 $1 bills in her stocking, it was learned.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Solicitors.

There came a woman to my door, here in the calm and golden West; she hoped that I would give some more assistance to the Welfare Chest. She told a strong and stirring tale of destitution in the town; the undernourished kids were pale, the old and weak were broken down. She had the figures and the facts, she had the sort of voice that thrills, and only by our kindly acts can we relieve life's pressing ills. But she, alas, was badly gowned, the hat she wore was most absurd, her form was flat instead of round, her false teeth clicked at every word. And so I said, "I greatly fear I can't dig up a rusty red; the calls on me this present year have left my assets cold and dead. I'd like to help the hopeless ones, I'd like to help the Welfare Chest to feed the children hot cross buns, and buy the way-worn man a vest. But I am broke, with famine near, the sheriff hangs around my door; I gave you 50 cents last year, but now I can do nothing more." Next day a lovely damsel came, all dolled up in her Sunday best; her kindly errand was the same—to get coin for the Welfare Chest. Her eyes were blue, her hair was brown, her graceful shape was good to see, she wore a most entrancing gown that must have come from far Paree. She told the same old tale again, but it was told in dulcet tones, and so I took my fountain pen and wrote a check for many bones.

National Bank History Traced By Professor

This is the eighteenth of a series of articles dealing with essay topics in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, written by social science professors of the four Washington Universities co-operating in this project—American, Catholic, Georgetown and Howard.

"The Experience of the United States With and Without a National Bank from 1791 to 1840."

By John William Riley,
Professor of History, Howard University.

In order to understand the national bank problem of the period, 1791-1840, one must bear in mind that the attitudes of the various sections toward the bank were determined by the needs and demands of the particular sections of the country. The East, which was the chief financial section, favored the bank because it would provide a sound financial system, while the South and West opposed the bank on the grounds that it was sectional and favored a certain class—the aristocracy of the East. They were the debtor class and favored inflated currency which the bank would prevent by forcing non-specie banks out of existence.

Another factor which was very pertinent in this regard was the attitude of the political parties of the period. The Federalists favored the bank and felt that it was constitutional and essential to the welfare of the Nation. On the other hand, the Democrat-Republicans, the party of Jefferson, and later the Democrat, the followers of Jackson, opposed the bank on the grounds that it was unconstitutional and a monopoly for the benefit of the Eastern financiers.

National Bank in 1791.

The first national bank was established in 1791 upon the recommendation of Hamilton. It was to be a depository for national funds, to issue notes redeemable in specie, and to aid in the financial stabilization of the country. It was chartered for 20 years and capitalized at $10,000,000, the Government supplying $2,000,000. This bank lived up to the expectations of its founders and played an important role in establishing the new Government on a sound financial basis.

The charter of the bank expired in 1811, but the Democrat-Republicans were in power and refused to recharter the bank.

President Madison, in his message to Congress in December, 1815, recommended the reestablishment of a bank. Congress, in 1816, established the Second Bank of the United States with a capital of $35,000,000, of which the United States was to own one-fifth. The bank was to be chartered for 20 years, and was to pay $1,500,000 as a bonus for the charter. It was to be the depository of the national government, and to act as its fiscal agent. It had a right to issue notes which were acceptable for all dues to the Government. The bank soon stabilized the currency by forcing many of the State banks out of business and by replacing the State bank notes by notes of the Bank of the United States, which were redeemable in specie.

Currency Tax Held Illegal.

It incurred opposition in the West because it drove the State banks to the wall or forced them to a specie basis. The people of the West wanted cheap money and many State legislatures sought to tax the notes of the branches of the national bank. One result of this was the decision of Chief Justice Marshall in the case of McCulloch vs. Maryland, that the States could not tax the national bank.

President Andrew Jackson represented the West and was opposed to the bank on the grounds that it was sectional, that it was a monopoly, that it dabbled in politics, and that it was unconstitutional. During his first administration, Jackson let it be known that he was opposed to the re-chartering of the bank. Those who favored the bank passed a bill through both houses of Congress for the re-chartering of the bank only to have it vetoed by the President. The bank became one of the major issues of the campaign of 1832. Upon his reelection, Jackson felt that his attack on the bank was vindicated and began the removal of the deposits from the bank. The funds of the Government were deposited in State banks called "pet banks." Soon the country was flooded with a variety of notes issued by the State banks. An effort was made to check issues by substituting a metallic currency, but this did not prove successful. Jackson, in 1836, issued the Specie Circular demanding that payments for public land be made in gold and silver. This caught the "wildcat" banks with no specie with which to redeem their notes. Thus many of them collapsed. This happened when a period of speculation was at high tide, and led to the panic of 1837. Thus Van Buren had to face the results of Jackson's financial policy.

Treasury Notes Issued.

In order to meet the financial crisis the Government issued $10,000,000 in Treasury notes. The system of depositing Government funds in the "pet banks" was replaced by the independent Treasury system in 1840. Under this system, no banks were used, the funds being kept in the hands of Government agencies or in sub-treasuries which were established in the important cities. This was the financial system which, with one brief exception, was in existence until the Civil War.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

CONFIDENCE that the legislative program for improving working conditions for the Federal employes would win substantial success was expressed last night on the eve of the convening of Congress by E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, unit of the American Federation of Labor.

BAKER.

The labor leader feels that the justice of the employes' cause will be recognized by the new Congress. He points out that the employes have given and are giving steadfast and conscientious service to the Nation in this trying period.

"We are asking no more than this service justifies," Mr. Babcock said.

"There can be no disagreement, I am confident, with our initial item, which calls for maintenance of the highest standards of working conditions, and of adequate wages in the Government service, as an example to industry and in accordance with NRA principles. That is a matter with which every man and woman who works and every enlightened employer as well, must be in accord.

"The laborer is just as worthy of his hire today as he has ever been, and standards for labor must be set somewhere. Clearly, the place to set those standards is in the Government service; in seeking them the AFGE is working for the good of the entire working population of this country.

"We hope for full pay restoration early in the session. We do not see how there can be any other fair solution of this problem. Living costs are advancing steadily; wages are at a 95 per cent level. Fairness demands a change.

"Automatic salary increases are already in effect in a large part of the service. Why discriminate against the others? The efficiency rating system is so thoroughly discredited that this plan offers the remedy. Of late, much sentiment has developed for the extension of classification throughout the service, where it is desired; and the tide has clearly turned toward the extension of the merit system.

"Restoration of 30 days annual leave and protection of the retirement funds are others of our major objectives—both so intrinsically just that we feel they must prevail," Mr. Babcock concluded.

W. E. Hoffheins (P), War, president of the All States Officers Society, announces the society will hold a business meeting Monday night at 8 o'clock at the Lafayette Hotel, at which officers will be elected for 1935. A dinner party will follow the business session, according to Ira Y. Bain (F), Internal Revnue, who is in charge of arrangements. Mr. Hoffheins invites all State society officers, past and present, to attend the affair.

John Mesick (F), War, has just obtained a patent for a plotting board for determining the positions of enemy guns.

Translators Will Elect.

Election of officers will be the feature of the next meeting of the Society of Federal Translators, Monday night at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, according to Ignatius Jawney, Translating Bureau, State. Attendance of all members is urged by Mr. Jawney. The society is said to be making plans to renew its fight vigorously for reclassification for Government translators.

After several weeks confinement to his home due to an injured back, R. C. Dunbar (C), Accounting Section, Interstate Commerce Commission, is reported almost fully recovered.

Two Transfers to Dallas.

Transferred to the Dallas Regional Office, Andrew V. Allison, accountant, Home Owners Loan Corporation, yesterday flew from Cincinnati to Dallas. He planned to fly from Washington New Year's Eve, but the snowstorm forced him to go to the Queen City by train.

Another member of the staff of the Washington office to be transferred to Dallas is Mrs. Edna Fox, stenographer. Mr. Allison, a graduate of George Washington University, formerly was with the Federal American Bank. Mrs. Fox came to the Capital from Danville, Va.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name, call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to Lew's Fox (stage, five stars in "The President Vanishes"); or to Loew's Palace (Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery in "Forsaking All Others"); or to Loew's Columbia (W. C. Fields and Baby LeRoy in "It's a Gift").

Diary office hours are daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Roger Vaughan has resigned from Patent Office to accept a position as clerk-searcher with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Welcome!

Welcome to fair Washington,
Congress members everyone!
Here's a hand for one and all
Who received the voters' call.
But cheering old and new
You find we have work for you;
There'll be bills for every need,
Bills of every hue and breed,
And it's rumored too, down here,
Voters sometimes wish your ear.
But of course your judgment's sound
And next spring it will be found
That this Congress everyone
Statesmen were in Washington.
(By the way, would you be, please, friendly to the employes?)
F. C., (F), Agriculture.

There's Little to Worry About In Prevalence of Colds Here

Cases Are Called More Seasonal Than Serious; But the Public Health Lists Rules For Everyone to Follow.

If your associates at the office, in the store, at school and in the shop are coming down with colds or grippe, don't be alarmed for Washington has no epidemic—not yet, at least—although there are many cases throughout the city. An investigation yesterday disclosed they are more seasonal than serious.

The common cold, though it causes greater economic loss than any other disease, is not reportable so no statistics on how many cases are current in the District and throughout the country are available. As for la grippe, or influenza, a glance at records of the Capital's Health Department showed its prevalence is taking an upward course.

Nothing to Worry About.

"But there's nothing to get concerned over," commented Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases. "The number of colds and 'flu' cases almost invariably increases with the onset of cold or inclement weather."

In November, 1934, only two cases of influenza were reported here. The figure rose to 20 in December and there have been three cases so far this year. Not a single case was reported in January, 1934, and only 12 in the two preceding months.

"The decline in the pneumonia mortality rate," continued Dr. Cumming, "is a fairly accurate indication that the number of influenza and colds cases here is not abnormally large."

Pneumonia, influenza and colds are bosom companions under the general classification of respiratory diseases.

Referring to the national influenza graph, Dr. R. C. Williams, assistant surgeon general of the Public Health Service, agreed with Dr. Cumming that there is no cause for alarm either in the District or elsewhere.

"Colds are numerous, of course, but that's to be expected at this time of year," he declared. "There is no epidemic. Whether one is on the way it is impossible to say."

A List of Rules.

Then he offered a list of rules to be followed by those who would guard against colds and influenza. They advise eight to ten hours sleep every night with the windows open; a moderate, mixed diet lubricated with plenty of pure water; wearing of clothing which keeps the skin dry; avoiding sneezers and sniffers; avoiding the use of common towels and toilet articles; keeping the hands clean, and eschewing alcohol and quack "cures."

Harry L. Hopkins, FERA administrator; Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, and the hundreds of others who are laid up with colds and kindred ailments were advised to:

Refrain from over exerting themselves after they have recovered sufficiently to return to work.

Representative William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, is the latest public official to be taken from his desk by a cold. He spent last night in Naval Hospital for observation and just before he left Mrs. Bankhead said it was problematical whether he would be in his House seat when Congress convenes today.

Donald R. Richberg, recovery coordinator and another recent victim, was up yesterday for the first time in several days and in condition to go to the White House for a conference with President Roosevelt.

Jobs of Dawsons Remain a Mystery

Governor-elect Harry W. Nice of Maryland yesterday failed to clarify them uddled situation under which member of the Dawson family of Montgomery is to be his secretary of State and which is to be counsel to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Thomas L. Dawson and Walter W. Dawson, cousins, of Rockville, were invited to accept the posts by the Republican Governor-elect and were told to make their own choice of positions. After first announcing that Walter would be the secretary and Tom the counsel, the two rescinded the statement and said they had referred the question back to Mr. Nice and had asked him to make the selection.

Parrish Eludes Search, Mears Battles for Life

Blood Transfusions Tried as Doctors Hold Slight 'Hope for Recovery.

Police continued their search last night for Henry B. Parrish, 45, AAA examiner and proprietor of a rooming house in the 800 block of Nineteenth street northwest, wanted in connection with the shooting of John M. Mears, 28, Commerce Department employe and a resident at the address.

Mears struggled for his life at Emergency Hospital yesterday after two blood transfusions had followed removal of the bullet. Physicians held slight hope for his recovery.

Investigating the affair, police said the men apparently quarreled over the affections of Mrs. Myrtle Doolittle, 28, a native of Raleigh, N. C. and landlady of the house.

They said Parrish and Mrs. Doolittle, who is separated from her husband, returned from visiting relatives in Raleigh over the holidays. Mears, they asserted, had been sleeping in the hallway in his pajamas, near the telephone.

Roomers told detectives Parrish had ordered Mears to move because of his attentions to Mrs. Doolittle. The shooting followed and immediately afterward Parrish left the gun in his room and fled the house. Mears, still conscious in the hospital, named Parrish as his assailant.

New Transient Chief Will Air Bureau Needs

Gebhardt Will Discuss Problems Today With Advisory Body.

Problems confronting the District Transient Bureau will be presented to the advisory committee of 30 appointed to study the agency at a meeting at 4 p. m. today in the office of Commissioner George E. Allen in the District Building.

Richard Gebhardt, new director of the Transient Bureau, will outline problems to the advisory committee and ask for advice as to their solution. Commissioner Allen will attend as will Elwood Street, director of welfare, and other officials.

Mr. Gebhardt, who has been transferred from the Missouri relief administration, arrived here from St. Louis yesterday. Previously he had been here on a temporary assignment to study the District transient problem. Yesterday he attended a suprise luncheon given for Arthur S. Rosichan, retiring director of the local transient bureau.

The advisory committee was designated recently when recipients of transient relief protested to Federal and District officials against purported irregularities in the administration of the bureau. The group follows:

Dr. Frederick F. Perkins, chairman; Nels Anderson, Albert W. Atwood, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Dr. A. C. Christie, John B. Colpoys, Dr. Walker H. Colston, Dr. H. J. Crosson, Walter Davidson, Adjutant Gilbert Becker, Judge Ralph Given, Nathan D. Golden, Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, Brig. Gen. Frank Frank T. Hines, Dr. J. H. Hollister, Maj. Campbell C. Johnson, Oliver Owen Kuhn, W. M. Kochenderfer, Miss Katherine Lenroot, Eugene MacLean, George Marshall, Tracy W. McGregor, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, Dr. John O'Grady, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, William J. Plunkert, John O'Connor Roberts, Richard Gebhardt, Miss M. Alice Hill, Miss May O. Hankins.

Eagle Scout to Tell Experience in Jamboree

Kenneth Knapp, Eagle Scout, will tell of his experiences at the international Scout jamboree in Hungary several years ago at a special meeting of the Montgomery County Boy Scout troops Saturday at 8 p. m. in the County Building at Bethesda.

Young Knapp formerly was a resident of Minot, N. Dak., but now lives in Montgomery County. His talk is to be illustrated with motion pictures.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Only 12 Hauptmanns are listed in the Manhattan telephone book, and none of them named Bruno . . . Curiously enough, one of those listed is in the calendar business, and it is on the evidence of a calendar that New Jersey State's Attorney Wilentz hopes to obtain the conviction in the Lindbergh case . . . Biggest selling toy over the holidays was the doll named Shirley Temple . . . Sally Milgrim has the rhymingest name in town . . . the law firm with the trickiest name, suggests Walter Shirley, is Hartman, Sheridan, Tekulsky and Pecora . . . It has a ring to it.

Ira Haupt, the Wall Street broker, is the dead ringer for Clark Gable . . . Shortest name in the Hollywood phone directory is M. Oi . . . Several years ago top comedians at Metro were Buster Keaton and Cliff Edwards (Ukulele Ike) . . . When Jimmy Durante was brought on from the East, pals of Keaton and Edwards made bets as to how long the newcomer to flickers would last . . . Durante is still under contract, Keaton and Edwards are freelancers . . . The Phil Baker baby arrived one day before New Year's . . . The Ruskin Williams (he's the artist who illustrated those gasoline ads illustrating the comparative power of a gallon of the stuff) have cracked up.

When Ed Wynn and his son go out for an evening, they wear red carnations in their lapels . . . Peggy Joyce's favorite dish is fried Southern chicken as her maw prepares it in Richmond, Va. . . . There is every conceivable thing listed in the classified telephone directories but sleighs . . . They thought we were kidding 'em with a request for a horse-drawn sled . . . Gail Patrick and Bob Cobb will elope to Yuma any minute.

Huge red balloons arranged in clusters on the ceiling of the Waldorf lobby were most colorful holiday decorations of the town . . . Gramercy Park, as usual, was the gayest of the residential colonies, tiny Christmas trees sparkling with electric lights at every doorway in the square and each apartment house adding to the effect, with rows of decorated windows, constantly illuminated . . . Central Park Casino achieved a remarkable atmosphere with silver tapers of white wick sprouting from the chandeliers, an interior decorating job done by Bernatti, best of the New York headwaiters . . . Snooty El Morocco featured a tiny Christmas tree at the entrance, hung with blue lights . . . Joe Zelli's had a full-grown Christmas tree installed at the bandstand, with the Tic-Tocks cavorting at the base of it.

Girl with the most graceful legs in town, Madeline Northway, who dances with George Daniello at the Stork Club . . . Add Curios: The New York A. C. boxing room has a plaster cast of the fists of mighty Bob Fitzsimmons, who was your dad's favorite fighter . . . Passed the apartment house on Seventh avenue where Tex Rickard lived, last night . . . Poor Tex, they don't even remember his name now, which should be a warning to other Broadwayites who think they're big shots . . . His street address totaled to unlucky "13," his telephone number, Circle 5894, was a combination of two "13s" . . . He had a deathly fear of operations but few knew the reason why he dreaded the surgeons . . . In Nevada, he adopted a baby and idolized her, even importing grass from the Coast to give her a play-yard . . . The tot died on the operating table, so when Tex's time came, he refused to let the doctors get to work until it was too late.

Only Scotch performers on New York stages, Bob Halliday in "Music Hath Charms," and Ella Logan, tiny "hot" singer . . . Only Lithuanian, Collett Francis, one of the blonder show girls with Earl Carrol at Miami . . . Amazing how Jack Dempsey's popularity persists . . . Crowds still follow the big fellow when he walks along the streets and he is a big money-maker (he will get $25,000 for the use of his name in a new restaurant venture plus a percentage of the profits to greet the cash customers at the door) . . . Harry Cooper is another celebrated character to click as a restaurateur, Cooper being smart enough to concentrate on excellent food . . . Benny Fields and Blossom Seeley got rave notices on their Rudy Vallee broadcast, and now sponsors are rushing after them.

Saddest-faced of the comedians, Phil Baker, the accordion man . . . "Bottle," his radio foil, is English and very dapper . . . Eddie Dowling, the political minstrel boy, came to town the other night with "Thumbs Up" and it is loaded with grand material . . . First nighters were interested in the tap-dancing duel of Hal LeRoy and Paul Draper . . . No duel developed . . . The two styles are entirely different . . . Cutest switch is when Ray Dooley (Mrs. Dowling), clowns with a troupe of Arab acrobats, the tiny comedienne finally ending up 15 feet in the air on the top Arab's shoulders . . . Imogene Coca, scatter-brained little comedienne who clicked big in "Fools Rush In," shared the same dressing room at the famous Silver Slipper with Ruby Keeler when they both danced there.

Traffic Claims Second Death; Inquest Called

3,600 Tags Issued in Day; McMahon Fines 'Dead License' Offenders.

Death claimed the second traffic victim of 1935 yesterday when Charles B. Falbush, 61, of 3607 Fourteenth street northwest, died in Garfield Hospital of injuries received New Year's Eve when he was struck by a street car at Fourteenth street and Spring road.

Witnesses told the police at the time of the accident that Mr. Falbush apparently did not see the approaching car.

Inquest Called.

The year's first traffic death was that of Irma Couch, 18, of 1918 Pennsylvania avenue, a Western High School student, who was killed instantly early New Year's Day in a head-on automobile collision in the 2300 block of Bladensburg road.

Approximately 3,600 1935 license tags were issued at the Traffic Bureau yesterday. During the first hour 800 motorists obtained their tags and for the remainder of the business day the number was about 500 per hour.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced that 400 to 500 warrants, still pending, are holding up new tags.

23 "Dead Tag" Fines.

Twenty-three motorists were arraigned in Traffic Court on "dead tag" charges. Each was fined $10 and ordered to pay the costs by Judge John P. McMahon, who said no leniency would be shown holders of 1934 tags.

Numerous others, charged with reckless driving, improper parking and the usual other traffic offenses, were fined and in several cases driving rights were suspended.
